DEPARTMENT OF LIBERAL ARTS.

Dimensions, 1,687 by 787 feet. Height of walls, 66 feet. Height of four center pavilions, 22 feet. Height of four corner pavilions, 97 feet. Height of roof over central hall, 212.9 feet. Height of roof-truss over central hall, 212.9 feet. Height clear, from the floor, 212.9 feet. Span of truss, 382 feet. Span in the clear, 384 feet. Width of truss at base, 14 feet. Height of truss at apex, 10 feet. Weight of truss, 300,000 pounds; with purlins, 400,000 pounds. Ground area of building, 34.47 acres. Floor area, including galleries, 1,687,000 sq. ft. Cost, $1,700,000. Material 17,000,000 feet of lumber; 12,000,000 pounds of steel for central hall; 2,000,000 pounds of iron in roof of nave. Architect, Geo. B. Post, New York.

The building is rectangular in form, and the interior is divided into a great central hall 9 by 1,280 feet, which is surrounded by a nave 107 feet wide. Both hall and nave are covered by a 50-foot gallery extending entirely around them.

The building is in the Corinthian style of architecture, and in point of being severely classic excels all the other large edifices. The long array of columns and arches which its façades present is relieved from monotony by the grand entrances, which are designed in the form of triumphal arches, the central archway of each being 49 feet wide and 80 feet high. Surmounting these portals is the great attic story, ornamented with sculptured panels 18 feet high, and on each side above the arches are great panels with inscriptions. The side arches are filled with sculptured figures in bas-relief. At each corner of the main hall are pavilions designed in harmony with the great portals.

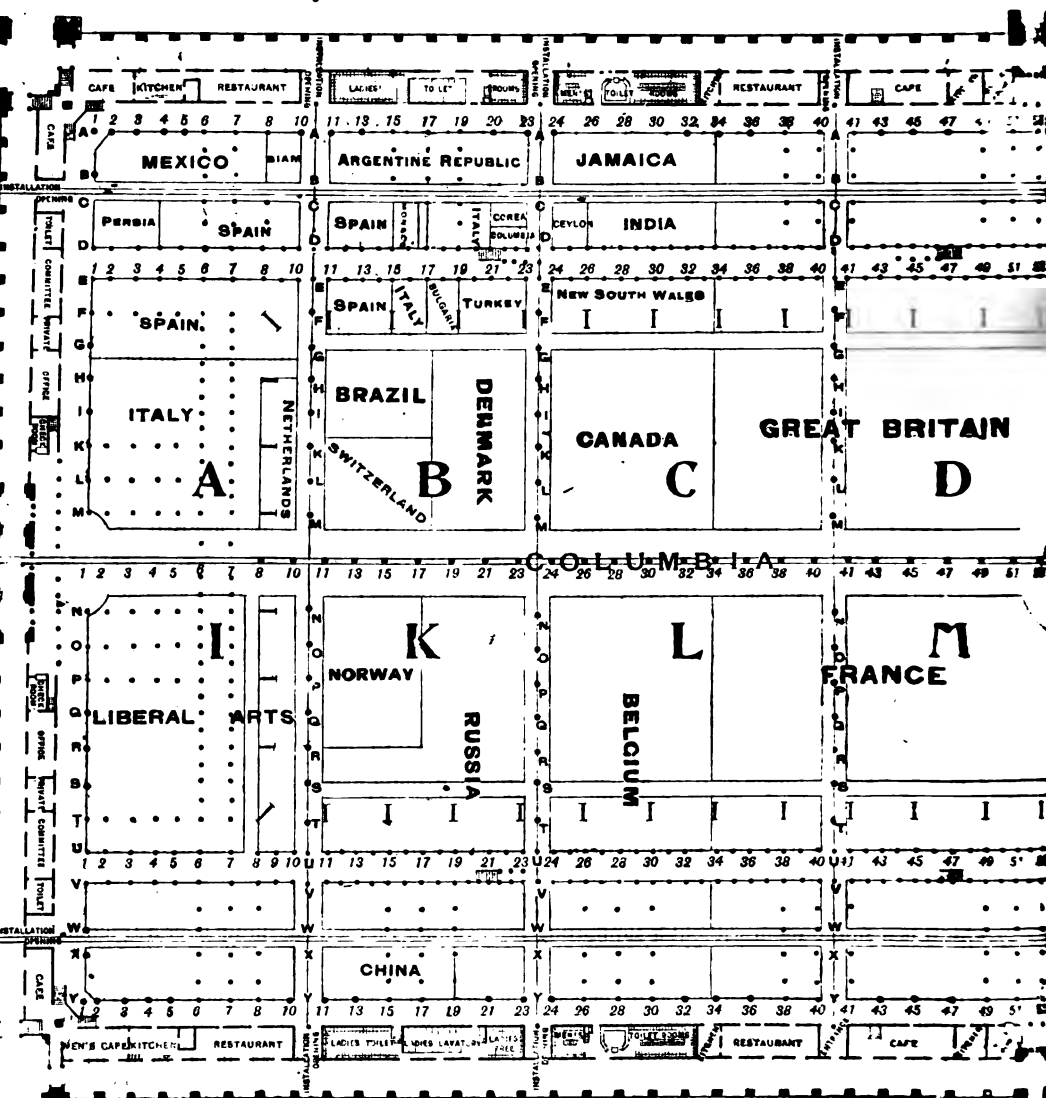

The domes on either side of the main archways, eight in number, are magnificently decorated by leading American artists, the subjects being allegorical figures representing Art and Sciences. Extending all around the building is a spacious colonnade nearly a mile long, which looks out upon the lake or lagoon, and forms a cool retreat for the tired visitor. The exterior of the building is covered with staff, which is treated to represent marble, and the columns and window arches are apparently of this material.

This building is the largest in the world, and is the largest under roof ever erected. Its unparalleled size makes it one of the architectural wonders of the world. The central hall, which is a single room without a supporting pillar under its roof, has in its floor a fraction of an acre, and 75,000 persons can sit in this room, giving each one six square feet of space. By the same arrangement, the entire building will seat 300,000 people. It is entirely possible to mobilize the standing army of Russia under its roof. The Auditorium is the most notable building in Chicago, but twenty such buildings could be placed on the floor. There are 11 acres of skylights and 40 carloads of glass in the roof. There are 11 main trusses in the roof of the central hall, and it required 600 flat cars to bring them from the iron works to Chicago. These trusses are twice the size of the next largest in the world, which are 90 feet high and span 250 feet. The latter are in the Pennsylvania station at Jersey City.

KEY TO INSTALLATION.

The exhibits in the Liberal Arts department occupy all of the gallery space, except Sections F and G, which are devoted to exhibits in the department of Manufactures. The Liberal Arts department also occupies Section I, in the southeast corner, on the corner, where all musical instruments are installed. The sections in the gallery are marked from A to K, for the purpose of locating exhibits. The gallery columns are numbered south to north, or lengthwise with the building, from 1 to 108, and the cross columns east to west are lettered from A to Z, west to east. The letter and number following an exhibit in the catalogue indicate the intersecting point of the column lines of the exhibit. The location sign "Gal. A, F-19" means that the exhibit is in Section A at the point where Column F and Column 19 meet.

The location of foreign exhibits is indicated under their entry in the catalogue.

DEPARTMENT L.

LIBERAL ARTS—EDUCATION, LITERATURE, ENGINEERING, PUBLIC WORKS, MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

GROUP 147.

PHYSICAL DEVELOPMENT, TRAINING AND CONDITION—HYGIENE.

- Class 824. The nursery and its accessories.
- Class 825. Athletic training and exercise gymnasiums; apparatus for physical development and of gymnastic exercises and amusement; skating, walking, climbing, ball-playing, wrestling, acrobatic exercises; rowing, hunting, etc. Special apparatus for training in schools, gymnasia; apparatus for exercise drill, etc.
- Class 826. Alimentation—food supply and its distribution; adulteration of food, market preparation of food, cooking and serving, school kitchens and arrangements for school canteens, methods of warming children's meals, etc. Dinner pails, or receptacles for carrying meals for school children, workmen and others. Restaurants, dining halls, refectories, etc.
- Class 827. Dwellings and buildings characterized by the conditions best adapted to health and comfort, including dwellings for workmen and factory operatives, houses and villages for operatives in connection with large manufacturing establishments, tenement houses, "flats," and suites of apartments, city and country residences, club-houses, school-houses; designs and models of improved buildings for elementary schools, infant schools and creches, court rooms, theatres, churches, etc.
- Class 828. Hotels, lodging-houses.
- Class 829. ☐ Public baths, lavatories; public and domestic hygiene. Sanitation—sanitary appliances and methods for dwelling-houses, buildings and cities. Direct renewal of air. Heating, ventilating, lighting, in their relation to health. Conduits of water and sewage. Drains and sewers. Sinks, night-soil apparatus, sanitary plumbing, walls, bricks, roofs, flooring, etc. Sanitary house decoration—non-poisonous paints and wall-papers, floor coverings, washables, decorations, etc.
- Apparatus for carrying off, receiving and treating sewage. Slaughter-house refuse, city garbage.
- Apparatus and methods for filtering water and cleansing water-courses.
- Apparatus intended for the prevention of infectious diseases. Methods, materials and instruments for purifying and destroying germs; disinfectors.
- Apparatus and fittings for warming, ventilating and lighting schools; school latrines, closets, etc.
- Special school fittings for storing and drying clothing.
- Precaution in schools for preventing the spread of infectious diseases; school sanitarium, infirmaries, etc.
- Class 830. Hygiene of the workshop and factory. (Classification modified from that of the London health exhibition.)
- Designs and models for improvement in the arrangement and construction of workshops, especially those in which dangerous or unwholesome processes are conducted.
- Apparatus and fittings for preventing or minimizing the danger to health or life from carrying on certain trades. Guards, screens, air-jets, preservative solutions, washes, etc.

Objects of personal use—mouth-pieces, spectacles, dresses, hoods, etc., for use in certain unhealthy and poisonous trades.

Illustrations of diseases and deformities caused by unwholesome trades and professions; methods of combatting these diseases; preservative measures, etc.

Sanitary construction and inspection of workshops, factories and mines; new inventions or improvements for ameliorating the condition of life of those engaged in unhealthy occupations; means for economizing human labor in various industrial operations.

Asylums and homes—asylums for infants and children; foundling and orphan asylums; children's aid societies. Homes for aged men and women; for the maimed and deformed; for soldiers and for sailors.

Treatment of paupers; alms-houses.

Treatment of aborigines; Indian reservations and homes.

Hospitals, dispensaries, etc.; plans, models, statistics. Shed hospitals for infectious fevers and epidemic diseases; tent hospitals; hospital ships; furniture and fittings for sick rooms.

Protective supervision—sanitary supervision; vaccination and its enforcement; isolation of contagious diseases; quarantine; prevention and elimination of animal epidemics.

Food inspection—treatment of adulterated foods; inspection and analysis; treatment of stale food substances; regulation of abattoirs, mills, etc.; regulation of sale of horses; protective devices.

Building inspection, etc.—building regulations and inspection; building drainage and plumbing; fire regulations, fire escapes, etc.

Personal inspection—color tests, etc.; professional examination for licenses.

Immigration—reception, care and protection of immigrants.

GROUP 148.

STRUMENTS AND APPARATUS OF MEDICINE, SURGERY AND PROSTHESIS.

Pharmacology, drugs, pharmacy, etc.—medicines, official (in any authoritative pharmacopœia) articles of the matéria medica, preparations unofficial. (See Group 87.)

Dietetic preparations intended especially for the sick. (For beef extracts, see Class 38.)

Instruments for physical diagnosis, clinical thermometers, stethoscopes, ophthalmoscopes, etc.

Surgical instruments, appliances, and apparatus, with dressings, anesthetics, antiseptics; obstetrical instruments, etc.

Prosthesis—apparatus for correcting deformities; artificial limbs.

Instruments and apparatus of dental surgery and prosthesis.

Vehicles and appliances for the transportation and relief of the sick and wounded, during peace or war, on shore or at sea. (See also Department G.)

GROUP 149.

PRIMARY, SECONDARY AND SUPERIOR EDUCATION.

Elementary instruction—infant schools and kindergartens. Descriptions of the methods of instruction, with statistics.

Primary schools, city and country—school-houses and furniture. Apparatus and fittings. Models and appliances for teaching, text-books, diagrams, examples. Specimens of work in elementary schools.

Domestic and industrial training for girls—models and apparatus for the teaching of cookery, housework, washing and ironing, needle-work and embroidery, dress-making, artificial flower-making, painting on silk, crockery, etc. Specimens of school work.

Handicraft teaching in school for boys—apparatus and fittings for elementary trade teaching in schools. Specimens of school work.

Science teaching—apparatus and models for elementary science instruction in schools. Apparatus for chemistry, physics, mechanics, etc.; diagrams, copies, text-books, etc.; specimens of the school work in the subjects.

- Class 846. Art teaching—apparatus, models and fittings for elementary art, instruction in schools; diagrams, copies, text-books, etc., specimens of art work, modeling, etc., in schools.
- Class 847. Technical and apprenticeship schools.—Apparatus and examples used in primary and secondary schools for teaching handicraft; models, plans and designs for the fitting up of workshop and industrial schools; results of industrial work done in such schools.
- Class 848. Special schools for the elementary instruction of Indians.
- Class 849. Education of defective classes—schools for the deaf, dumb, blind and feeble-minded; adult schools for the illiterate.
- Class 850. Public schools—descriptions, illustrations, statistics, methods of instruction, etc.
- Class 851. Higher education—academies and high schools. Descriptions and statistics. Colleges and universities. Descriptions, illustrations of the buildings, libraries, museums, collections, courses of study, catalogues, statistics, etc.
- Class 852. Professional schools— theology, law, medicine and surgery, dentistry, pharmacy; mining, engineering, agriculture, mechanic arts, art and design; military, naval, normal, commercial; music.
- Class 853. Government aid to education—national Bureau of Education—reports and statistics.

LITERATURE, BOOKS, LIBRARIES, JOURNALISM.

- Class 854. Books and literature, with special examples of typography, paper and binding. General works—philosophy, religion, sociology, philology, natural sciences, useful arts, fine arts, literature, history and geography; cyclopedias, magazines and newspapers; bindings, specimens of typography.
- Class 855. School books.
- Class 856. Technical industrial journals.
- Class 857. Illustrated papers.
- Class 858. Newspapers and statistics of their multiplication, growth and circulation.
- Class 859. Journalism, statistics of: with illustrations of methods, organization and results.
- Class 860. Trade catalogues and price lists.
- Class 861. Library apparatus; systems of cataloguing and appliances of placing and delivering books.
- Class 862. Directories of cities and towns.
- Class 863. Publications by governments.
- Class 864. Topographical maps. Marine and coast charts; geological maps and sections; botanical, agronomical, and other maps, showing the extent and distribution of men, animals and terrestrial products; physical maps; meteorological maps and bulletins; telegraphic routes and stations; railway and route maps; terrestrial and celestial globes, relief maps and models of portions of the earth's surface, profiles of ocean beds and routes of submarine cables.

GROUP 151.

INSTRUMENTS OF PRECISION, EXPERIMENT, RESEARCH AND PHOTOGRAPHY; PHOTOGRAPHS.

- Class 865. Weights, measures; weighing and metrological apparatus.—Balances of precision, instruments for mechanical calculation, adding machines, pedometers, cash registers, water and gas meters, etc.; measures of length, graduated scales, etc.
(For ordinary commercial forms, see also Group 112.)
(For testing machines, see Class 490.)
- Class 866. Astronomical instruments and accessories.—Transits, transit circles, mural circles, zenith sectors, altazimeters, equatorials, collimators, comet-seekers.
- Class 867. Geodetic and surveying instruments.—Transits, theodolites, artificial horizons, surveyor's compasses, goniometers; instruments for surveying underground in mines, tunnels and excavations; pocket sextants, plane tables and instruments used with them; ship's compasses, sextants, quadrants, repeating circles, dip-sectors, etc.

8. Leveling instruments and apparatus—hand-levels, water-levels, engineers' levels, of all patterns and varieties; cathetometers, leveling staves, targets, and accessory apparatus.
9. Hydrographic surveying; deep sea sounding.
10. Photometric apparatus and methods.
11. Photographic apparatus and accessories. Photographs.
12. Meteorological instruments and apparatus, with methods of recording, reducing and reporting observations. Thermometers—mercurial, spirit, air; ordinary or self-registering, maximum and minimum. Barometers—mercurial, aneroid, aneroid, rain gauges, etc.
13. Chronometric apparatus—chronometers, watches of precision, astronomical clocks, church and metropolitan clocks, clepsydres, hour-glasses, sun-dials, chronographs, electrical clocks, metronomes. (For commercial clocks and watches, see also Group 99.)
- Optical and thermometric instruments and apparatus.
- Electric and magnetic apparatus. (See also Department J.)
- Acoustic apparatus.

GROUP 154

CIVIL ENGINEERING, PUBLIC WORKS, CONSTRUCTIVE ARCHITECTURE.

- Land surveying, topographical surveying—surveys and locations of towns and cities, with systems of water supply and drainage.
- Surveys of coasts, rivers and harbors.
- Construction and maintenance of roads, streets, pavements, etc.
- Bridge engineering (illustrated by drawings and models).
- Bridge designing—drawings and charts, showing methods of calculating stresses.
- Foundations, piers, abutments and approaches of stone, wood, etc.
- Arch bridges of stone, wood or iron.
- Suspension bridges of fibre, iron chain and cable.
- Truss bridges of wood, iron and steel—pony, bow-string and plate girders, lattice girders, Fink, Bollman, Howe, Pratt, Warren, Post, Long, Whipple and other trusses of special design.
- Cantilever bridges, draw bridges, rolling and swinging machinery.
- Tubular bridges.
- Railway, aqueduct and other bridges of special design not elsewhere classed. (A chart showing date of completion, span, rise, weight and cost of the great bridges of the world, would be of interest.)
- Subaqueous constructions—foundations, piers, harbors, breakwaters, building of dams, water works and canals.
- Irrigation—irrigating canals and systems.
- Railway engineering—surveying, locating and constructing railways.
- Dynamic and industrial engineering—the construction and working of machines; examples of planning and construction of manufacturing and metallurgical establishments.
- Mine engineering—surveying underground, construction of tunnels, subaqueous tunnels, etc.; locating and sinking shafts, inclines and winzes; driving levels, draining, ventilating and lighting. (See also Department E.)
- Military engineering—construction of earth-works, breast-works and temporary fortifications.
- Permanent works—fortifications, magazines, arsenals, mines.
- Roads, bridges, pontoons, etc.; movement of troops and supplies.
- Constructive architecture—plans of public buildings for special purposes; large and small dwelling houses.
- Drawings and specifications for foundations, walls, partitions, floors, roofs and stairways.
- Estimates of amount and cost of material.
- Designs and models of special contrivances for safety, comfort and convenience in the manipulation of elevators, doors and windows, etc.
- Working plans of the mason, carpenter and painter; designs and models of bonds, arches, coping, vaulting, etc.; plastering and construction of partitions; painting and glazing.

- Plans of appliances for hoisting, handling and delivering building materials to artisans—scaffolding and ladders, special scaffolding for handling great weights; portable cranes and power elevators.
 Illustrations of the strength of materials.
 Plans and sections of special architectural forms. Metallic floor beams and girders; hollow bricks and other architectural pottery for heating and ventilation; metallic cornice and conduits, shingles and sheathing, glass roofs, floors and accessories, architectural hardware.
 Methods of combining materials.
 Protection of foundations, areas and walls against water.
 Working plans for paving and draining.

GROUP 153.

GOVERNMENT AND LAW.

- Class 890. Various systems of government illustrated—government departments, legislative, executive and judicial.
 Class 891. International law and relations—fac-similes of treaties, etc.
 Class 892. Protection of property in inventions. Patent offices and their functions, statistics of inventions and patents.
 Class 893. Postal systems and the appliances of the postal service. Letter-boxes, pouches, mail-bags, postage stamps, etc.
 Class 894. Punishment of crime—prisons and reformatories, prison management and discipline, transportation of criminals, penal colonies, houses of correction, reform schools, naval or marine discipline, punishment at sea, police stations, night lock-ups, etc.; dress and equipment of prisoners, examples of convict workmanship.

GROUP 154.

COMMERCE, TRADE AND BANKING.

- Class 895. History and statistics of trade and commerce.
 Class 896. Railway and transportation companies.
 Class 897. Methods and media of exchange—money, coins, paper money, etc.
 Class 898. Counting-houses, stores and shops—arrangement, furniture, fittings; methods of management, book-keeping, devices for distributing change and goods to customers.
 Class 899. Warehouse and storage systems—grain elevators.
 Class 900. Boards of Trade and their functions illustrated.
 Class 901. Exchanges for produce, metals, stocks, etc.
 Class 902. Insurance companies.
 Class 903. Banks and banking—illustrations of buildings, interiors, methods and statistical information; clearing-houses, etc.; savings and trust institutions.
 Class 904. Safes and vaults for storage of treasure and valuables; safe deposit companies.
 Class 905. Book-keeping—books and systems of book-keeping and accounting, commercial blank forms, etc.
 Class 906. Express companies, freighting, etc.

GROUP 155.

INSTITUTIONS AND ORGANIZATIONS FOR THE INCREASE AND DIFFUSION OF KNOWLEDGE

- Class 907. Institutions founded for the increase and diffusion of knowledge, such as the Smithsonian Institution, the Royal Institution, the Institute of France, British Association for the Advancement of Science, and the American Association, etc.; their organization, history and results.
 Class 908. Academies of science and letters—learned and scientific associations, geological and mineralogical societies, etc.; engineering, technical and professional associations; artistic, biological, zoological, medical, astronomical societies and organizations.

CLASSIFICATION.

19. Museums, collections, art galleries, exhibitions of works of art and industry; agricultural fairs, state and county exhibitions, national exhibitions, international exhibitions, international congresses.
0. Publication societies.
1. Libraries—public and private; statistics of operations.

GROUP 156.

SOCIAL, INDUSTRIAL, AND CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS.

2. Social organizations.—Clubs—political, military, university, travelers'; press clubs, science clubs, and others.
3. Political societies and organizations.
4. Workingmen's unions and associations.—Their organization, statistics and results.
5. Industrial organizations.
6. Co-operative trading associations.
7. Secret societies.
8. Miscellaneous organizations for promoting the material and moral well-being of the industrial classes.

GROUP 157.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS AND SYSTEMS.—STATISTICS AND PUBLICATIONS.

Religious organizations and systems.—Origin, nature, growth, and extent of various religious systems and faiths. Statistical, historical and other illustrations; pictures of buildings; plans and views of interiors.

Religions: music, choirs, hymnology.

Sebastian Erard patented the first double action harp in 1810; it was only a question of a short time before all makers of harps on the old system, finding their occupation gone, left Erard in sole possession of the field. At Sebastian Erard's death the work was taken up by his nephew, Pierre Erard, to whom is due the still later improvements in the Gothic harps. For nearly one hundred years Erards have been and are now the most celebrated harp makers of the world. Lyon, Potter & Co., agents, 174

KEY TO INSTALLATION.

he Department of Ethnology occupies all the space in the Anthropological Building Sections E and F in the south end of the main floor. These sections are occupied by two divisions of the Liberal Arts Department—the Bureau of Hygiene and Medicine and the Bureau of Charities and Correction. The sections on the main floor are from A to F, and the columns on the main floor and in the galleries are lettered A-Y, north to south, and numbered from 1 to 15, east to west. The letter and number marking an exhibit in the catalogue mark the column nearest to the exhibit. The sign J-6 indicates that the exhibit is near the column J-6.

How to Find Exhibitors and Their Exhibits.

The list of exhibitors from the United States and those foreign countries whose exhibits are incorporated in this section, will be found in the first portion of this Catalogue, the foreign countries with their exhibits installed in the Anthropological Building following in alphabetical order. Each country or section has its exhibits numbered consecutively, and as far as practicable each exhibit has a card attached to it bearing the name of the country or section and the words "Official Catalogue Number," and that number corresponds with the number in this Catalogue. For example, if a card is found with the following matter thereon:

Department M.                      Ethnology.

Section of Archæology.

Official Catalogue Number 8

the visitor will turn to 8 in the Section of Archæology in the Catalogue, where will be found the following entry:

8. De Potter, Armand, Albany, N. Y.

Egyptian antiquities.                      N-10

It may be that the visitor's attention is first directed to the Catalogue and he may be desirous of finding this exhibit. The first thing he should do is to see what the location is. That being N-10 he will refer to the Key to Installation, which states that in the Anthropological Building the columns extending north and south are lettered from "A" to "Y," and those extending east and west are numbered from 1 to 15. By this system, each exhibit on the main floor or the gallery has a position of longitude and latitude. The exhibit, therefore, of Armand De Potter will be found on the main floor in close proximity to the column bearing the letter "N" and figure "10."

This rule applies to every exhibit in the Anthropological Building, whatever its character may be, and by following the above plan the visitor will experience no difficulty in locating the exhibitor or his exhibit.

No attention should be paid to any numbers which may be affixed to exhibits except those appearing on cards in the form given above.

PREFACE.

This Department, although generally known as that of Ethnology, includes the several groups of Ethnology, Archæology, Anthropological Laboratory History and Natural History, of which the general exhibits are in the Anthropological Building; also, the Latin American exhibit, the special exhibit of the relics of the time of Columbus, arranged in the Convent of La Rabida; the reproduction of the Ancient Ruins of Yucatan, immediately adjacent to the Anthropological Building and the Ethnographical exhibition of the native peoples of America, who are living in their native habitations on a stretch of land along the eastern side of the South Pond, between the Anthropological Building and the Indian school-house. Just north of the Indian school-house is the Convent of La Rabida, and north of the Dairy Building is the log house of pioneer times, which belongs to the historical collection of the department.

When it became necessary to have more space for the section of education in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, the Ethnological Building was assigned to a new building, and the space it was to have occupied in the Manufactures Building was given to the Department of Liberal Arts. The Anthropological Building was thus the last of the Exhibition buildings to be constructed, and was not completed until the middle of 1893. The building is 415 feet long and 255 feet wide, with a gallery 48 feet wide on all four sides. Thirty thousand square feet on the southern end of the floor is given up to the sections of Hygiene and Sanitation and Prisons and Correction, belonging to the Department of Liberal Arts. The remainder of the floor is occupied by Archæological and Ethnological exhibits of several foreign countries, of State boards and of individuals, and collections made by the assistants of the department who were sent to various parts of North, Central and South America to make special examinations and researches under the direction of the chief of the department.

Entering the building through the main door on the northern end, there is seen near the entrance several small collections illustrating certain points in the archæology and ancient art of Assyria, Egypt and Rome, and down the main aisle the exhibit by the government of Greece, supported by collections from the Chicago Art Museum. This Grecian exhibit is made the central group in the hall. Beyond the Greek court are groups of objects from the museums of Vienna and Berlin, the Egyptian exhibit of Armand de Potter and the Japanese exhibit. Passing on from these exhibits along the western side of the building are exhibits from Asia and Africa and from the Pacific Islands. Following the side aisle northward is the large and interesting government exhibit.

hibit from New South Wales, followed by a collective exhibit from the Pacific Islands. Then come the collective exhibits of Dyer and Ayer, which lead to the special collections made by the department, illustrating the ethnology of the northwestern coast of America, the Queen Charlotte's Island, Vancouver, etc. Of particular interest here is the complete model of the village of Skidegate, with all its houses and totem poles. Crossing the aisle to the south, the next division is that which contains several collections illustrating the habits and customs of various tribes of North American Indians. On the left or east side of the main aisle are the archaeological and ethnological collections, forming the Canadian exhibit and the Logan collective exhibit. Southward, along the eastern side of the building, are the state collections of Ohio, Missouri and Colorado, and various other exhibits, including special collections from New Mexico, Colorado, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Arkansas and Florida and the collections from the Ohio and the Delaware valleys made by the department. Then come the important exhibits from Mexico, from Costa Rica and from the several republics of Central America. In these exhibits are some of the most interesting objects in the building, particularly those forming the Charnay, the Peabody Museum and the Berlin Museum exhibits. The collection here brought together of these singular sculptures and tablets of photographs has never been equaled, and it affords the student the opportunity for comparison with comparative study of this remarkable collection of American culture. Following these exhibits are those from South America, which include the collections secured from the extensive expedition of the department to Ecuador, Chile, Peru and Bolivia, illustrating the habits and customs of the ancient people of those countries and the present tribes of the interior. The ethnological collections here reproduced in a realistic manner, the most interesting ethnological exhibits sent by the various states of Central America and Brazil, illustrating the habits and customs of the tribes and raising to the west of the Mexican collections, the collections from South America, including the collections from the department and the Montes collection. On the wall are the charts by Zelia Nuttall illustrating the ancient Mexican calendar and a collection of ancient Mexican manuscripts.

The building is divided into three main sections, stretching across the main aisle. The section on the left contains the section of Folklore and Ethnology. The section to the right contains the section of Archaeology and the section of Geology. The section of Folklore and Ethnology contains the collection illustrative of the habits and customs of the various tribes of the United States.

The section of Archaeology contains the collections of the department and the offices of the department. The section of Geology contains the collections of the department and a committee room on the second floor. The section of Folklore and Ethnology contains the whole northern section of the building. The section of Archaeology contains the section of the Anthropological Laboratories. Here are the collections of the department and the collections received from the more than twenty universities in this country. The section of Geology contains the section of the geological series of apparatus made by the department and the collections of the department in Europe and in this country. The section of Folklore and Ethnology contains the section of the three sections—Physical Anology, Neurology and Psychology. In these laboratories the practical working of the apparatus is shown, and any one who wishes can have various tests applied, and can be measured and recorded upon cards, which are given to the subject upon the payment of a small fee, while the record is made upon the charts and tables hanging on the walls of the laboratory illustrate the various subjects. Here, too, is a series of skulls and skeletons and various models showing the physical characteristics of the various races and varieties of man. An interesting series of charts in the Physical Anthropological section is that illustrating the development of over 50,000 school children in various cities of North America. Another series of diagrams and maps shows the physical characteristics of the Indians of North America, as derived from measurements and observations upon 17,000 Indians, recorded by about seventy-five assistants of the department, who were engaged for nearly two years in this work. One of the alcoves is devoted to the Sargent models of the typical man and woman and the anthropometrical work illustrating physical development. Another alcove is devoted to the Anthropological Library formed by the department, and on the walls are the plans and photographs of several of the principal Anthropological Museums.

On the western gallery are the several historical collections, containing many interesting objects, among which is the exhibit by the state of Ohio. There, also, are the exhibits of postage stamps and coins.

Extending the whole length of the southern gallery is the exhibit of the State's Natural Science Establishment of Rochester, New York. This is a perfect museum of natural history, and in it one sees all forms of animal life from the sponges to man, all admirably classified and arranged.

In the galleries are many exhibits of natural history and taxidermy. Particularly noticeable are those of the province of Ontario and the states of New York, Maine, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Colorado, North Dakota and Brazil. These exhibits include mammals, birds, bird's nests, reptiles, shells, insects and fossils. A special exhibit is that of the fossil footprints from Carson.

The exhibit of the Agassiz Association is on the gallery and gives an interesting illustration of the work and high aims of this important association in increasing the love for natural history studies.

13. Grave monument from Larissa in Thessaly.

14. Grave monument from Larissa in Thessaly.

15. Large grave monument from Larissa in Thessaly, representing a young man holding a hare on his right fore-arm and an apple in his left hand.

16. Grave monument from Bœotia. A young woman is represented, dressed in a long garment. In her left hand she holds a fruit, in her right some small object, originally represented in color.

17. Head of Apollo, found at Athens; archaic.

18. Bearded head of Hermes (Mercury) or Bacchus, found at Delos; archaic.

Sculptures of the Fifth and Fourth Centuries, B. C.

19. Large bas-relief, found at Eleusis and representing the goddesses especially worshipped there, Demeter (Ceres) and Persephone (Proserpina), with the young Triptolemos between them.

20. Relief from the Acropolis of Athens, representing Athena (Minerva), the so-called Mourning Athena.

Exhibit
No.

21. Statue of a Youth, from the Acropolis of Athens.
22. Slab from the Parthenon frieze, belonging near the middle of the east front. It represents three seated divinities, Poseidon (Neptune) and perhaps Apollo and Ceres.
- 23-25. Three slabs from the balustrade originally surrounding the temple of Niké Apteros (Wingless Victory) on the Athenian Acropolis. On the first is a Niké standing erect; on the second, another Niké untying her sandal; on the third, two Nikes leading a cow or bull to sacrifice.
26. Sculptured block from the Erechtheum.
27. Statuette of Athena (Minerva), found at Athens in 1859. It owes its celebrity to the fact that it was the first to be recognized as a copy, though an imperfect one, of the gold and ivory statue of Athena by Phidias.
28. Statuette of Athena (Minerva), found at Athens in 1880. It is a copy, made in the Roman period, of the gold and ivory statue of Athena by Phidias.
29. Female head, from the sanctuary of Hera (Juno) near Argos; found in the excavations conducted by the American School of Classical Studies at Athens in 1892.
30. Metope, from the Temple of Hera near Argos, representing a youthful warrior; found as No. 29.
- 31-32. Two heads, of about half life size, representing barbarians (Amazons or Persians); found as No. 29.
33. Female head, of about half life size, found on the same site as Nos. 29-32 by Rhangabé and Bursian in 1854.
34. Lion's head gargoyle from the Temple of Hera near Argos; found as No. 33.
35. Torso of a Niké, probably from the same source as Nos. 33, 34.
- 36-38. Three heads found near Tegea in Arcadia and belonging to the pediment sculptures of the temple of Athena Alea there. The temple was built soon after 395 B. C. by Scopas. The sculptures were probably executed by Scopas, or at least by one of his pupils. Nos. 36, 37 are heads of young men, the one severely wounded, the other still in active combat. No. 38 is the head of the Calydonian boar, which figured in the east pediment.
39. Niké (Victory), found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Epidaurus. It resembles the Niké of Præmnius, found at Olympia.
- 40-41. Two heads of Nikés from Epidaurus, similar to the foregoing.
- 42-48, 50. Sculptures found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Epidaurus and belonging to the pediment of the temple of As-

- clepius. They date from the first third of the fourth century B. C.
49. Nereid from Epidaurus, perhaps an acroterium of the temple of Asclepius.
51. Relief representing Asclepius seated; found as Nos. 39-50.
52. Lion's head gargoyle from the Tholos (circular building) at Epidaurus.
53. Square pedestal. On the front is an inscription, from the last line of which we learn that the object supported by the pedestal and, probably, the pedestal itself were the work of the artist Bryaxis (ca. 360 B. C.). On the three sides are three horsemen, who had been successful competitors in the cavalry exercise.
- 54-56. Three bas-reliefs found at Mantinea in Arcadia. Pausanias says that in one of the temples of Mantinea there was a group of statues by Praxiteles, representing Leto (Latona), Artemis (Diana) and Apollo, and adds that on the pedestal were sculptured a Muse and Marsyas playing the flute. Nos. 54-56 certainly belong to this pedestal, and are therefore to be regarded as a work of Praxiteles or his school. They represent the musical contest of Apollo and Marsyas, at which the Muses, the usual companions of Apollo, assist as arbiters. No. 54 represents Apollo, a Phrygian slave and Marsyas. The god is seated, holding the cithara with his left hand. Marsyas, whose violent attitude contrasts with the calmness of Apollo, is playing for the last time on the flute; between them stands the salpinx holding the knife with which he is to execute the impending sentence, the flaying of Marsyas. Nos. 55 and 56 represent the Muses.
57. Relief representing probably a priestess, found at Mantinea; a work of the fourth century.
58. Hermes (Mercury) with the infant Iphigenyus (Bacchus), an original work of Praxiteles, found at Olympia and now in the museum there. In his right hand he held some object, perhaps a bunch of grapes. This is the only authentic original sculpture by Praxiteles in existence, and is an unrivaled specimen of Greek art in the fourth century, B. C.
59. Hermes (Mercury) found on the island of Andros in 1833. It is, beyond a doubt, the finest statue in the National Museum at Athens. Its resemblance to No. 58, as well in workmanship as in pose, is obvious. It is therefore probably a work of the original or copy of the school of Praxiteles.
60. Youthful male head, above life size, found at Eleusis; an admirable work of the fourth century.

Head closely resembling the foregoing, also from Eleusis.

Head of a goddess, found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Athens; a masterpiece of the fourth century.

Female head found at Delos; a work
of the fourth century.

Head of Apollo, found at Laurium; a work of the fourth century.

Female head found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Athens, and representing probably Hygieia, the goddess of health;
work of the fourth century.

Colossal sculptures found at Ly-curia in Arcadia; a female head wearing a veil, another female head, a male head, and a large piece of drapery ornamented with figures and decorative patterns in relief. These fragments belong to a group of four statues, which stood in the temple of Despoina (Persephone), and which represented Despoina, Demeter,
Artemis (Diana) and the Titan
Zeus. The sculptor was Damophos, a Cretan artist, who flourished toward the middle of the fourth century.

Sculptures found at Eleusis. They include copies, made in the Roman period, of sculptures of the Parthenon period.

Grave relief from Thespiæ in Bœotia,
representing a standing youth and a dog.
The monument was executed in the latter part of the fifth century, but was used at an early time in the Roman period, when the inscription was engraved.

Grave relief from Aegina, representing a youth standing before a square pillar, in which there is a cat. He holds a scepter in his left hand and extends his right toward a suspended bird-cage(?).
At the left, crouches a young slave.

Grave relief from the Dipylon cemetery at Athens, representing a seated man clasping the hand of a young man between the two bearded men.

Grave relief found near Athens, representing a young man, his father, a sorrowing woman and a dog.

Grave monument in the form of a vase (slender, one-handled vase), found in the east of ancient Athens, near the Parthenon palace.

Grave relief, found near Athens, representing two women, a bearded man and a girl.

Grave relief from the Dipylon cemetery at Athens, commemorating a woman named Ameinocleia.

Grave relief from the Piræus, commemorating Ameinocleia.

Exhibit No.

81. Grave relief from Attica, commemorating Archestratê.

82. Grave relief, still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Dexileos, who, according to the accompanying inscription, fell in battle in 394 B. C. in the twentieth year of his age. He is represented on horseback, in the act of striking down an enemy.

83. Grave relief, still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Demetria and Pamphilê.

84. Grave relief, found in the Dipylon cemetery in 1890 and still there. It represents a standing woman, holding in her right hand an anachoe.

85. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery. It represents the deceased Hegeso, daughter of Proxenus, seated upon a chair.
Before her stands a female slave, holding out a box from which she takes some object—necklace or the like—which was probably represented originally by color.
This is one of the most beautiful of Attic
grave reliefs.

86. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Corallion, wife of Agathon.

87. Hound, serving as a grave monument, and still in the Dipylon cemetery.

88. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery. It represents two bearded men reclining on a couch, before which is a table with eatables. At each end of the
left, is the forward end of a boat with a boatman. Interpretation doubtful.

89. Votive relief of the class known as Funeral Banquets. This one goes under the name of The Death of Socrates.

90. Votive relief to Asclepius, from Thy-rea.

91. Votive relief from Piræus, representing Dionysus reclining on a couch, with a female figure seated at his feet; to the left, a company of three actors.

92. Three-sided pedestal, found at Athens by the ancient (street of Tripods). On the sides are Dionysus and two Nikês.

Sculptures of the Hellenistic and Roman Periods.

93. Colossal statue of Themis (Justice), found at Rhamnus in Attica. It is the work of one Charesstratus, who lived about the beginning of the third century, B. C.; one of the most important sculptures of the National Museum at Athens.

94. Colossal statue of Poseidon (Neptune) found on the island of Melos. The work seems to belong to the Hellenistic period.

Exhibit
No.

A trident is to be restored in the right hand.

95. Asclepius, found in Piræus.

96. Hermes, found at Atalante. It was probably made late in the Hellenistic period, after a model of the fourth century. In the right hand is a purse, in the left the caduceus (herald's wand).

97. Hermes, found at Træzen in Argolis. This is an excellent work of the Roman period, after a model of the fourth century. By the side of the god is a ram, which he grasps by the horns.

98. Statuette of Pan, from Sparta, holding the syrix (shepherd's pipe) in his left hand.

99. Colossal head of Athena (Minerva) found at Athens; an interesting copy, made probably in the third century, of the original represented by the Velletri Pallas.

100. Warrior in combat, found at Delos. The statue is remarkable as well for the vigor of its conception as for the anatomical knowledge it displays. In both respects it suggests comparison with the Borghese gladiator of the Louvre.

101. Youth from Athens. In the proportions and form of the body and in the somewhat archaistic style, this statue resembles the Orestes by Stephanus in the Villa Albani, Rome.

102. Bust of the Emperor Hadrian (second century A. D.) from Athens.

103. Bust of a bearded man from Athens.

104. Bust of Antinous, the favorite of the Emperor Hadrian; found at Patras.

105. Statue of a young man from Eleusis. He was represented as a victor in the games, in the act of placing a crown upon his head. It is a copy of a work of which other copies exist.

106. Statue of Bacchus (?) found in the American excavations at Sicyon.

107. Head of Medusa, in the Museum at Argos.

108-109. Two reliefs found in the Doric theater at Athens, representing dancing women; Roman period.

110. Bust of Hermarchus, disciple and successor of Epicurus.

111. Statue of Tyché (Fortune) found in Egypt and presented to the National Museum of Greece by Dragnet Pasha. The goddess holds in her right hand a horn of plenty, in her left a rudder.

112. Pedestal found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Athens. On it are represented various surgical instruments.

21. Statue of a Youth, from the Acropolis of Athens.
22. Slab from the Parthenon frieze, belonging near the middle of the east front. It represents three seated divinities, Poseidon (Neptune) and perhaps Apollo and Ceres.
- 23-25. Three slabs from the balustrade originally surrounding the temple of Niké Apteros (Wingless Victory) on the Athenian Acropolis. On the first is a Niké standing erect; on the second, another Niké untying her sandal; on the third, two Nikés leading a cow or bull to sacrifice.
26. Sculptured block from the Erechtheum.
27. Statuette of Athena (Minerva), found at Athens in 1859. It owes its celebrity to the fact that it was the first to be recognized as a copy, though an imperfect one, of the gold and ivory statue of Athena by Phidias.
28. Statuette of Athena (Minerva), found at Athens in 1880. It is a copy, made in the Roman period, of the gold and ivory statue of Athena by Phidias.
29. Female head, from the sanctuary of Hera (Juno) near Argos; found in the excavations conducted by the American School of Classical Studies at Athens in 1892.
30. Metope, from the Temple of Hera near Argos, representing a youthful warrior; found as No. 29.
- 31-32. Two heads, of about half life size, representing barbarians (Amazons or Persians); found as No. 29.
33. Female head, of about half life size, found on the same site as Nos. 29-32 by Rhangabé and Bursian in 1854.
34. Lion's head gargoyle from the Temple of Hera near Argos; found as No. 33.
35. Torso of a Niké, probably from the same source as Nos. 33, 34.
- 36-38. Three heads found near Tegea in Arcadia and belonging to the pediment sculptures of the temple of Athena Alea there. The temple was built soon after 395 B. C. by Scopas. The sculptures were probably executed by Scopas, or at least by one of his pupils. Nos. 36, 37 are heads of young men, the one severely wounded, the other still in active combat. No. 38 is the head of the Calydonian boar, which figured in the east pediment.
39. Niké (Victory), found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Epidaurus. It resembles the Niké of Præmion, found at Olympia.
- 40-41. Two heads of Nikés from Epidaurus, similar to the foregoing.
- 42-48, 50. Sculptures found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Epidaurus and belonging to the pediments of the temple of As-

- clepius. They date from the first third of the fourth century B. C.
49. Nereid from Epidaurus, perhaps an acroterium of the temple of Asclepius.
51. Relief representing Asclepius seated, found as Nos. 39-50.
52. Lion's head gargoyle from the Tholos (circular building) at Epidaurus.
53. Square pedestal. On the front is an inscription, from the last line of which we learn that the object supported by the pedestal and, probably, the pedestal itself were the work of the artist Bryaxis (ca. 360 B. C.). On the three sides are three horsemen, who had been successful competitors in the cavalry exercise.
- 54-56. Three bas-reliefs found at Mantinea in Arcadia. Pausanias says that in one of the temples of Mantinea there was a group of statues by Praxiteles, representing Leto (Latona), Artemis (Diana) and Apollo, and adds that on the pedestal were sculptured a Muse and Marsyas playing the flute. Nos. 54-56 certainly belong to this pedestal, and are therefore to be regarded as a work of Praxiteles or his school. They represent the musical contest of Apollo and Marsyas, at which the Muses, the usual companions of Apollo, assist as arbiters. No. 54 represents Apollo, a Phrygian slave and Marsyas. The god is seated, holding the cithara with his left hand. Marsyas, whose violent attitude contrasts with the calmness of Apollo, is playing for the last time on the flute; between them stands the slave, holding the knife with which he is to execute the impending sentence, the flaying of Marsyas. Nos. 55 and 56 represent Muses.
57. Relief representing probably a priestess, found at Mantinea; a work of the fifth century.
58. Hermes (Mercury) with the infant Dionysus (Bacchus), an original work of Praxiteles, found at Olympia and now in the museum there. In his right hand he held some object, perhaps a bunch of grapes. This is the only authenticated original sculpture by Praxiteles in existence, and is an unrivaled specimen of Greek art in the fourth century, B. C.
59. Hermes (Mercury) found on the island of Andros in 1833. It is, beyond a doubt, the finest statue in the National Museum at Athens. Its resemblance to No. 58, as well in workmanship as in pose, is obvious. It is therefore probably a work of original or copy of the school of Praxiteles.
60. Youthful male head, above life size, found at Eleusis; an admirable work of the fourth century.

Head closely resembling the foregoing, also from Eleusis.

Head of a goddess, found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Athens; a masterpiece of the fourth century.

Female head found at Delos; a work
of the fourth century.

Head of Apollo, found at Laurium; a work of the fourth century.

Female head found in the sanctuary
of Asclepius at Athens, and representing probably Hygieia, the goddess of health;
work of the fourth century.

Colossal sculptures found at Ly-curia in Arcadia; a female head wearing a veil, another female head, a male head, and a large piece of drapery ornamented with figures and decorative patterns in relief. These fragments belong to a group of four statues, which stood in the temple of Despoina (Persephone), and which represented Despoina, Demeter,
Artemis (Diana) and the Titan
Prometheus. The sculptor was Damophos, a senior artist, who flourished toward
the middle of the fourth century.

Sculptures found at Eleusis. They are reduced copies, made in the Roman period, of sculptures of the Parthenon period.

Grave relief from Thespiæ in Boeotia,
representing a standing youth and a dog.
The monument was executed in the latter part of the fifth century, but was used a great time in the Roman period, when an inscription was engraved.

Grave relief from Aegina, representing a youth standing before a square pillar, in which there is a cat. He holds a spear in his left hand and extends his right arm toward a suspended bird-cage(?).

Grave relief from the Dipylon cemetery at Athens, representing a seated man clasping the hand of a young man between the two a bearded man.

Grave relief found near Athens, representing a young man, his father, a sorrowing woman and a dog.

Grave monument in the form of a vase (slender, one-handed vase), found in the east of ancient Athens, near the Acropolis.

Grave relief, found near Athens, representing two women, a bearded man and a girl.

Grave relief from the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating a woman named Anastasia.

Grave relief from the Piræus, commemorating Ameinocleia.

81. Grave relief from Attica, commemorating Archestratê.

82. Grave relief, still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Dexileos, who, according to the accompanying inscription, fell in battle in 394 B. C. in the twentieth year of his age. He is represented on horseback, in the act of striking down an enemy.

83. Grave relief, still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Demetria and Pamphilê.

84. Grave relief, found in the Dipylon cemetery in 1890 and still there. It represents a standing woman, holding in her right hand an anachoe.

85. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery. It represents the deceased Hegeso, daughter of Proxenus, seated upon a chair.
Before her stands a female slave, holding out a box from which she takes some object—necklace or the like—which was probably represented originally by color.
This is one of the most beautiful of Attic
grave reliefs.

86. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery, commemorating Corallion, wife of Agathon.

87. Froud, serving as a grave monument,
and still in the Dipylon cemetery.

88. Grave relief still in the Dipylon cemetery. It represents two bearded men reclining on a couch, before which is a
left, is the forward end of a boat with a boatman. Interpretation doubtful.

89. Votive relief of the class known as Funeral Banquets. This one goes under the name of The Death of Socrates.

90. Votive relief to Asclepius, from Thy-rea.

91. Votive relief from Piræus, representing Dionysus reclining on a couch, with a
left, a company of three actors.

92. Three-sided pedestal, found at Athens by the ancient (street of Tripods). On the sides are Dionysus and two Nikês.

Sculptures of the Hellenistic and Roman Periods.

93. Colossal statue of Themis (Justice), found at Rhammus in Attica. It is the work of one Chares of Stratonicea, who lived about the beginning of the third century, B. C.;
one of the most important sculptures of
the National Museum at Athens.

94. Colossal statue of Poseidon (Neptune)
found on the island of Melos. The work seems to belong to the Hellenistic period.

Exhibit

- A trident is to be restored in the right hand.
95. Asclepius, found in Piræus.
96. Hermes, found at Atalante. It was probably made late in the Hellenistic period, after a model of the fourth century. In the right hand is a purse, in the left the caduceus (herald's wand).
97. Hermes, found at Trœzen in Argolis. This is an excellent work of the Roman period, after a model of the fourth century. By the side of the god is a ram, which he grasps by the horns.
98. Statuette of Pan, from Sparta, holding the syrix (shepherd's pipe) in his left hand.
99. Colossal head of Athena (Minerva) found at Athens; an interesting copy, made probably in the third century, of the original represented by the Velletri Pallas.
100. Warrior in combat, found at Delos. The statue is remarkable as well for the vigor of its conception as for the anatomical knowledge it displays. In both respects it suggests comparison with the Borghese gladiator of the Louvre.
101. Youth from Athens. In the proportions and form of the body and in the

- somewhat archaistic style, this statue resembles the Orestes by Stephanus in the Villa Albani, Rome.
102. Bust of the Emperor Hadrian (second century A. D.) from Athens.
103. Bust of a bearded man from Athens.
104. Bust of Antinous, the favorite of the Emperor Hadrian; found at Patras.
105. Statue of a young man from Eleusis. He was represented as a victor in the games, in the act of placing a crown upon his head. It is a copy of a work of which other copies exist.
106. Statue of Bacchus (?) found in the American excavations at Sicyon.
107. Head of Medusa, in the Museum at Argos.
- 108-109. Two reliefs found in the Dionysiac theater at Athens, representing dancing women; Roman period.
110. Bust of Hermarchus, disciple and successor of Epicurus.
111. Statue of Tyché (Fortune) found in Egypt and presented to the National Museum of Greece by Dranet Pasha. The goddess holds in her right hand a horn of plenty, in her left a rudder.
112. Pedestal found in the sanctuary of Asclepius at Athens. On it are represented various surgical instruments.

Diamond Match Company. Samples of diamond matches. No admission fee.

Irish Industries Exhibit. President, Countess of Aberdeen, Irish Village. Exhibit of Irish industries. Admission, cents.

Working Man's Home. Woman's Auxiliary, W. C. E. Philadelphia Branch. Social service section. Reproduction of one of the 172,000 cottages owned by workmen in Philadelphia. Free admission.

International Dress and Costume Company. President, G. W. Press. Exhibition of natives of different parts of the world in their appropriate costumes. Admission, 25 cents.

Electric Scenic Theatre, Arthur Schwartz, Concessionaire. Electric illumination as regards light effects. Admission, 25 cents.

Log Cabin and Restaurant, Emma Sinton, Concessionaire. Colonial relics of 16 from New England States. Free admission.

Libbey Glass Works, E. D. Libbey, President. Manufacturer of American glass and glassware. Admission, 10 cents.

Venice-Murano Exhibiting Co., E. nuezzi, Manager. Exhibit and manufacture of Venetian glass and glass ware, and mural decorative mosaics. Admission, 10 cents.

Irish Village, Mrs. Ernest Hart, Concessionaire. Exhibit of Irish Donegal village and industries. Admission, 25 cents.

Hagenbeck's Zoological Arena Co., Hoffheimer, Manager. Exhibit of caged animals, also ethnological collection of arms, marks, costumes, ornaments, from Ceylon, Pacific Islands and Northwestern America. Admission, 25 cents and $1.00.

Japanese Bazaar, M. F. Tetsuka, Manager. Exhibit and sale of Japanese articles. Free admission.

Dutch Settlements, Oceanic Trading Co., H. N. Nichols, Manager. Exhibit of village and natives of the South Sea Islands. Admission, 25 cents.

25. Ferris Wheel, G. W. Ferris. A vertical revolving wheel 264 feet in height, capable of carrying 2,160 people. Fare, 50 cents.
26. Ice Railway, Rankin and De la Vergne, Concessionaires. Sleighs running over ice and snow artificially made by the De la Vergne method. Fare, 10 cents.
27. Model of St. Peters, Rome, L. de B. Spridon, Concessionaire. Model of St. Peter's Church, Rome, scale one-sixtieth; also models of Cathedral of Milan, Piombino Palace and St. Agnese Church, portraits of the popes, papal coats of arms, etc. Admission, 25 cents.
28. Vienna Cafe, Konig and Griesser, Concessionaires. Restaurant.
29. French Pavilion and Cider Press, Cotton and Ziemen, Proprietors. Manufacture and sale of cider. Admission free.
30. Algerian and Tunisian Village, Ganon and Siflico, Concessionaires. Algerian and Tunisian village consisting of 30 bazaars, theater, cafe and grand bazaar. Admission, 25 cents.
31. East Indian Bazaar, Ardesher and Byranji, Concessionaires. Exhibit and sale of East Indian goods. Admission free.
32. Panorama of the Volcano of Kilauea, Lorin A. Thurston, Concessionaire. Panorama of the Volcano of Kilauea, Island of Hawaii. Admission, 50 cents.
33. Austrian Village and Old Vienna, M. Jentysch, Concessionaire. Old Vienna, representation of a street 150 years ago. Manufacture and sale of Austrian articles in wood, amber, meerscham, glass, etc. Restaurant, style "Constantinmuegel," and museum of Egyptian paintings. Admission, 25 cents.
34. Chinese Theater and Joss House, H. Sling, Manager. Restaurant, theater, joss house, and sale of Chinese articles. Admission, 10 cents.
35. Captive Balloon, C. F. Morgan, President. Balloon carries 15 to 20 passengers to a height of 1,200 feet. Trip, $2.00.
36. Dahomey Village, X. Pene, Concessionaire. Dahomey village of 30 houses, population of 69 people, museum of native arms, etc. Admission, 25 cents.
37. Ostrich Farm, E. J. Johnson, Concessionaire. Exhibit of 28 living ostriches. Admission, 10 cents.
38. Lapland Village, P. H. Coney, President. Village of 24 Laps with reindeer, showing every-day life of the Laplanders. Admission, 25 cents.
39. Hungarian Concert and Concert Hall, J. O'Connor. Concerts by the

40. Bedouin Camp, P. K. Bristani, Concessionaire. Showing Arab life in the desert. Performances from 10 to 12 A. M., and from 2 to 6 P. M. Admission, 25 cents.
41. Sitting Bull Log Cabin, P. B. Wickham, Manager. The original log cabin belonging to Sitting Bull and the one in which he was killed. Indian arms and curios, relics from the Custer battle-field. Admission, 10 cents.
42. The Barre Sliding Railway, D. L. Thayer, President. The length of the road is one mile, the cars being propelled by hydraulic water pressure. Each ride, 10 cents.
43. American Indian Village, Roddy and Wyatt. Winnebago Indian Village and sale of Indian work and curios. Admission, 10 cents.
44. Moorish Mosque of Tangiers, Jacob Benchetrit, Concessionaire. Sale of photos and Moorish work. Admission free.
45. Colorado Gold Mining, R. A. Campbell, Concessionaire. Model showing the working of a gold mine in Colorado. Admission, 10 cents.
46. Bulgarian Curiosities, E. S. Yovtcheff, Concessionaire. Sale of Bulgarian curios. Admission free.
47. Brazilian Concert Hall, A. Ribeiro, Concessionaire. Dances given by the natives of the State of Maranhão, North Brazil, and sale of curios. Admission, 10 cents.
48. The United States Sub-Marine Diving Co., J. J. Mannion, Concessionaire. Exhibit of sub-marine diving, showing manner of recovering articles lost at sea. Admission, 10 cents.
49. Camera Obscura, Carl Memethy and Adolph Gaul. Exhibit of views of a portion of the fair grounds. Transformed by a camera obscura. Admission, 10 cents.
50. French Novelties and Mosaics, E. Valensin, Concessionaire. Exhibit and sale of French novelties, and manufacture and sale of mosaics. Admission free.
51. Johore Bungalow and Village, Rounsevelle Wildman, Concessionaire. Johore Village, models of native vessels, curios, arms and native merchandise for sale. Admission 10 cents.
52. Pueblo Indian Village, S. B. Mills, Concessionaire. Indian Village, showing the manner of life of the natives. Indian curios for sale. Admission 10 cents.

JACKSON PARK.

Exhibit

Launch Co., E. R. Meeker and Chas. P. Villard. Steam launches—Transportation on Lake Front, South Pond, Grand basin and North Lagoon. Round trip, 25 cents.

Gondolas, World's Fair Venetian Gondola Co., James McLagan, Secretary. Venetian gondolas and state barges, operated on the lagoons. Charges, from 25 cents up per person.

Electric Launches, Electric Launch and Navigation Co., C. D. Wyman, General Manager. Transportation through lagoons and basins. Charge, 50 cents.

Whaling Bark "Progress," Arctic Whaling Exhibit Co., M. M. Felix, Manager. Whaling Bark "Progress" containing museum of marine curiosities and relics. In the South Pond. Admission, 5 cents.

Mammoth Crystal Cave, Horticulture Building, Keith and Allabough. Reproduction of the Mammoth Crystal Cave at Deadwood, South Dakota. Sale of curios found therein. Admission, 10 cents. Van Houten C. J. & Zoon. Exhibit of sea.

Movable Sidewalk, Long Pier, Multiple Speed and Traction Co., W. E. Ruess, President. Electrically propelled sidewalk. Charge, 5 cents.

Electric Intramural Railway, Columbian Intramural R. R. Co., W. E. Baker, General Manager. Elevated electric trolley about Jackson Park,  $6\frac{1}{4}$  miles long. Trip, 10 cents.

Esquimaux Village, P. D. Daniel, President of Arctic World's American Exposition Co. Esquimaux Village of 12 huts, sealskin tent, representative snow house, 37 Esquimaux dogs, 2 reindeer, kayacks, spears and whips, curios. Admission, 25 cents.

Cliff Dwellers Exhibit. Constructed by the H. I. Smith Exploring Co. The building is a reproduction of "Battle Rock" McElmo Valley scale  $\frac{1}{10}$ . Reproductions of "Cliff Palace," "Square Tower House," "Balcony House" and "High House" scale  $\frac{1}{10}$ ; also several thousand objects taken from ruins in the cliffs, including pottery, weapons, implements, ornaments, clothing and remains of mummified bodies. Admission, 25 cents.

A. THE APPLICATION OF STATISTICS TO ANTHROPOLOGY.

ie laws of chance. An equal number of black and colored balls are placed in a box hundred drawings are made one would expect to draw fifty white and fifty black. This is not actually the case but the balls are drawn in different proportions.

the frequency with which forty-nine, forty-eight, etc., white balls are drawn is shown grams. As these drafts depend upon chance, the characteristic curve indicating the icy of each number may be said to express a law of chance.

an apparatus designed by Francis Galton shot is allowed to fall down, striking on age a great number of regularly distributed pins. The frequency with which the rikes these pins depends upon chance. Therefore it may be expected that the cy of deviation from the vertical line will show an arrangement corresponding in er to the deviations from the average in drawing balls. A comparison of the dia- will show this to be the case. The longer the distance through which the shot falls ater is the number of disturbing points. The compartment vertically under the f entrance is the fuller the shorter the distance, and the outlying compartments the fuller the longer the distance through which the shot falls.

as it is shown that the curve formed by the surface of the shot in the compartments s the flatter the greater the number of disturbing causes. When the shot falls two separate holes a similar arrangement results.

stead of drawing these curves in steps as done in the previous diagrams, it is try to connect the central points of the sections by straight lines. The effect of this n in a number of diagrams.

en comparing the distribution of various measurements of man with the results of tions depending upon chance, their similarity becomes at once apparent. Slight- rities will be noticed, however, which show that they do not correspond absolutely. e seen that some curves are higher in the middle than others, showing that the hich produce deviations from the average are not so numerous in one case as in r. The correspondence between the two kinds of curves is sufficient to permit the ion of statistical methods which are based on the laws of chance to anthropometry. e measurements are grouped about an average; this average becomes the more e the greater the number of measurements which are combined in it. Its accuracy s in proportion to the square root of the number of cases which are combined. e computation of averages, of proportions and other tabulations are facilitated by f computing machines and tables, some of which are on exhibition.

INSTRUMENTS FOR TAKING MEASUREMENTS OF THE BODY.

ong the more important anthropometric measurements are stature, height sitting, of arms, etc. A full series of apparatus for taking measurements are shown. A

C. ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOMENCLATURE AND CLASSIFICATION.

Types of skulls, for explaining nomenclature and classification. Skulls are compared according to the proportion of their length and breadth; length and height; height and breadth of face; height and breadth of nose and the degree of projection of the teeth and alveoli. Accordingly there are distinguished, long and short, low and high, broad-faced and narrow-faced, broad-nosed and narrow-nosed, and prognathic or orthognathic skulls. All of these proportions and several others are more or less typical for various races.

Charts explaining the anthropometric terminology.

Instructions and blanks used for anthropometric investigations, explaining the method pursued in different institutions and countries.

In connection with this section measurements of the body, of weight and of strength are carried on in order to better illustrate the method and object of these inquiries.

D. RESULTS OF ANTHROPOLOGICAL INVESTIGATIONS.

Anthropometry of the North American mulattoes. The average stature of mulattoes is about the same as that of American whites of the Atlantic coast, averaging about 166 cm for men and 159 cm for women. The stretch of arms or finger-reach is, on the other hand, considerably longer, being 182 cm in men and 169 cm in women, as compared to about 177 cm in white men and 161 cm in white women. Consequently the finger-reach index of the proportion of finger-reach to stature is much larger than in whites, reaching 106 per cent in men and 106 per cent in women. The sitting height is lower than that of whites. The length of head is slightly longer, the width of head considerably shorter, giving the head a more elongated form. The width of the face is about that of the whites.

Finger prints of North American Indians, exhibited by Prof. F. Starr. According to Francis Galton finger prints are characteristic of each individual. A comparison of forms shows a great variety among the same group of people.

Charts showing the distribution of statures in the city of Paris, exhibited by Dr. L. Manouvrier. On one chart the stature of enlisted soldiers from Paris are tabulated. On another one the more or less favorable social conditions are entered. A comparison shows that the better the conditions the higher the stature.

The statures of soldiers enlisted during the War of the Rebellion, according to Dr. B. A. Gould, showing differences in stature according to the nativity of soldiers. Those born in the western states are taller than those born in the eastern states, who in their turn are taller than those born in Europe.

Distribution of statures in Italy, according to R. Livi. The map shows a general decrease in stature from north to south in Italy. The accompanying diagrams indicate that the variability does not show any regular distribution.

Distribution of length-breadth index in Italy. The map shows that the length-breadth index decreases from north to south, the head being decidedly short in the extreme north, decidedly long in the extreme south. It appears at the same time that people are more uniform in the north and in the south than in the intermediate region, thus indicating that in the latter district intermixture has taken place.

Curves showing the statures of Americans at various ages. A series of curves indicate how many among each one hundred individuals are taller and shorter than a certain given height. A person by stepping up against the curves at the point corresponding to his or her age may read off at once how many among each one hundred persons of his or her age are taller and shorter than he or she.

Anatomical and physiological measurements of the two sexes, exhibited by Dr. L. Manouvrier.

Diagrams representing the mean proportions of the body, according to age, sex and race, exhibited by Dr. L. Manouvrier.

A diagram exhibiting the forms of the tibia, exhibited by Dr. L. Manouvrier.

Correlation of dimensions of the body. The dimensions of the body are correlated in a way that, for instance, tall individuals have longer heads than short individuals. The length of the head is, however, not proportionately longer, but increases much more slowly than the length of the body. In the same way individuals with long heads are not such with short heads. Their statures, however, do not increase in proportion to the length of their heads but much more slowly. The nearer proportionate this increase, the closer is the correlation. Therefore, curves expressing mutual correlations come most nearly when the correlation is close. They form almost a right angle when the correlation is slight. The curves show that the correlation between the size of the head and the stature is slight, that the correlation between breadth of head and breadth of the body is very close.

Room C-10 to C-9, Types of European skulls and faces. Exhibitor, Prof. J. Kollmann. Extreme types are distinguished, one with a very narrow and high face, another with a very broad face. The correlation of the form of the face and of the skeleton of the skull is shown by means of pictures and photographs.

Photographs showing types of skulls found in Switzerland, exhibited by Dr. Bannert, Berne, Switzerland.

Length-breadth indices from various parts of Europe. The length-breadth of the skulls of Europeans averages 88 but is quite irregularly distributed. The population being of very diverse origin the index shows a wide range of variation. It is remarkable that the range of the country population of Bavaria and the Tyrol is still greater. The variability of these three groups exceeds very much the average variability found among other peoples, such as the North American Indians.

E. DRAWING INSTRUMENTS.

In order to make accurate comparisons between forms of the body orthogonal drawings are very serviceable. In such drawings perspective distortions are avoided. The drawings are either made by means of a point which is held vertically to the drawing board and which touches the skull, while a pencil which is placed exactly in the axis of the point makes the drawing (stereograph of Broca), or by means of diopters in which case the dioptra follows the outlines of the skull, while a drawing point marks the movements of the pencil.

Lambelli's tachycraniograph. This instrument allows to draw quickly cross sections of the skull in any desired direction full size, half size or one-third size.

Apparatus for recording outlines of the body. Outlines of the body may be recorded either by means of pantographs, by orthogonal projections or by determining a series of selected points. Dr. Jay W. Seaver's pantograph is an example of the first class of instruments; the various forms of the Démeny apparatus for recording the curvature of the back and of the median section of the body record directly orthogonal projections. Démeny's apparatus for horizontal cross-sections, the person steps into a ring fitted with adjustable points, which adjust themselves to the outline of the body and are clamped in this position. Adams' anthropograph is designed to draw cross sections of the body, which are recorded by means of a horizontal pencil that moves along the skin, its opposite end being guided by a certain curve. Then a sheet of paper is placed in the instrument and the pencil is allowed to follow the first curve. By this means the outline of the body is reproduced.

F. COMPOSITE PHOTOGRAPHS AND STATUES.

Apparatus for taking composite photographs. Photographs which are to be combined are placed in the frame and adjusted by means of a ground glass, so that eyes and mouth coincide. Then they are exposed a fractional time so that the total time of exposure is sufficient to produce a good negative. Results of such combinations of individuals selected among various classes of people, also combinations of crania, are shown. (Exhibit of Dr. H. P. Bowditch and Dr. J. S. Billings.)

Composite statues. Exhibited by Dr. Wallace Wood. Various types are distinguished, namely, the nervous, muscular, robust and soft. From a series of photographs of such types composite statues have been made.

G. CAPACITY OF THE SKULL.

The capacity of the cranial cavity may be measured by means of small shot, peas, millet and the like, the cranium being first filled with the material, which is then measured in graduates. Among various races the capacity shows certain variations, that of the negroes being considerably smaller than that of other races. (See also room C-7, C-8.)

H. DEVELOPMENT OF THE SKULL.

Room C-9, C-8.

Crania and skeletons of a few anthropoid apes are exhibited for purposes of comparison.

A series of skulls of individuals of various ages illustrate the laws of growth and development of the skull. A series of specimens shows that certain sutures remain sometimes persistent throughout life, while in others the deforming effect of premature closing of sutures is brought out. Among other variations in the form of skulls, the form of the temporal region, of the lower margin of the nose, of the palate, of the articulation between the occipital bone and the atlas are illustrated. In many regions of the world artificial deformation of the skull is practiced. The effects of various methods of deformation found in America are represented.

I. SKULLS OF RACES.

This series begins with casts of the famous prehistoric Neanderthal and Engis skulls. A cast of a skull from Bremen is placed next to the Neanderthal skull and brings out the remarkable similarity between the two.

Among the series of skulls the following groups are worth special remark:

The long and low skulls from northwestern Germany.

The series of ancient skulls from Italy.

The exceedingly high and short heads of Armenians and Oriental Jews.

Skulls from New Guinea, New Zealand and Sandwich Islands.

The skulls from Melanesia are supplemented by the series of casts of faces made by Dr. Finsch.

Skull of an ancient Greek, supposed to be that of Sophocles. Exhibitor, Dr. Mynter.

J. ANTHROPOMETRY OF THE JAPANESE.

A series of measurements has been made in the schools of Tokio. The results have been tabulated and show that the Japanese have an average stature of about 160 cm. The growth of stature, of stretch of arms and of height sitting has been tabulated. The stretch of arms is remarkably short as compared to that of European arms.

Section of Neurology.

Room C-7, C-8.

HENRY H. DONALDSON in charge.

Professor of Neurology, University of Chicago.

The section is intended to illustrate the principal features of the brain and the organs sense, like the eye, ear, etc.

In general it is the gross appearance, the weight and the form which are shown by the specimens and charts; some attempt has also been made to show the methods of recording the characters of the brain and also some of the methods for preserving specimens for study.

The following description is made according to the contents of the various cases which, in each instance, are designated by a letter in the right hand corner:

Case A contains a series of books and plates showing the different methods which have been used for depicting the brain.

As will be seen by examining the labels, a chronological order has been followed in the plates here exhibited.

The picture of the brain in Vesalius (1543), though not the earliest picture of the brain we have, is yet a very early one.

Above Case A the charts relate to the anatomy of the several sense organs.

Case B. In this case are collected a number of diagrams representing sections of the brain or its surface, and intended to be used as records for the location of diseased portions in any specimen. By thus making a record on a diagram it is possible to indicate exactly the position of the diseased portion than could be done by description alone. For recording the weight of the brain various printed forms are also useful and some of these are shown.

Above Case B are four representations of the central nervous system and the structures which envelop it, and also two diagrams indicating the foldings on the surface of the brain.

Case C, shown here, is a brain in connection with the spinal cord, intended to illustrate the continuity of those two structures; also a brain divided into the different parts, of which it is desirable to have separate weights.

The whole mass of brain substance within the skull is designated as the encephalon, and the various subdivisions bear separate names, as shown on the explanatory cards.

For many reasons great interest attaches to the extent or area of the surface of the brain.

This is illustrated by squares of paper to the left of the case. As the form of the brain is so singular, and specially liable to irregularity in the preserved specimens, a series of charts are here shown which represent the quantity of water which would weigh as much as the different brains or parts of the brain which they represent.

Above Cases C and D is a series of charts to illustrate the variations in the weight of the brain.

brain due to age, sex and stature; those above this case are for individuals mentally sound, whereas above Case D is a similar series of diagrams worked out for the insane. The charts show that the brains of women are less heavy than those of men; that shorter persons have smaller brains and that after growth ceases, the weight of the brain decreases with advancing age. These diagrams show that the brain grows up to the twentieth or thirtieth year.

A detailed description of these diagrams is posted beside them.

Case D contains models of the brain to be used either for reference in reading or for purposes of instruction. These represent but a small number of the models to be had from the various dealers, but they are fairly typical both as regards the material employed and the method for representation. Besides the charts showing the brain weight in the insane and which have already been referred to, there stand above this case two charts showing the variations of the brain weight under certain conditions, both from actual weighing of the brain and from observations on the capacity of skulls. In these charts special attention is directed to the position held by the group of criminals and the group of eminent men. The criminals are seen to have a brain weight similar to that of average population. The brain for the eminent men is on the other large as compared with the same standard.

Case E is primarily intended to illustrate the manner in which entire brains or portions of them may be best preserved.

Two objects are sought for in such preserved specimens: First, that they shall be permanent and cleanly to handle, and second at the same time show the natural relation of the different parts.

Above this case are a series of drawings intended to indicate the relations of the different nerve elements in the central nervous system. The fundamental idea underlying our present conception of this relation is, that the nerve cell and the nerve fibre are portions of the same unit, the fibre being but an outgrowth of the cell, and that no two units are in direct continuity with one another.

On Table F are wire models; the larger represents the relation of the bundles of fibres within the entire central nervous system, each important bundle being indicated by a special color.

The explanation of the details is given on a card below.

The smaller model shows in the same manner the course of the different bundles of fibres in the medulla oblongata, or that point at which the spinal cord passes into the portion of the brain lying nearest to it. The details may be gathered from the examination of the model itself.

Case G contains a series of photographs which form a portion of the plates illustrating Dr. J. C. Dalton's book on "Anatomy of the Brain." These photographs are the best which have ever been published on this subject.

Case H illustrates the development of the human brain before birth, showing how the brain surface becomes more and more folded with the increasing age of the unborn child.

There are also a series of wax models illustrating the different forms of the brain among different groups of animals.

The skulls indicate some of the variations caused in the size of the head through disease, one specimen illustrating the enlargement of the head of a child as the result of hydrocephalus, and another skull being that of an idiot in which the skull has remained extremely small although becoming very thick. To be compared with this microcephalic, or small sized skull, is that of another idiot in whom the skull, though somewhat peculiar in shape, is of average size.

It is thus indicated that the condition of idiocy is not necessarily associated with extreme smallness of the head, although such abnormally small skulls, as are represented by a microcephalic specimen, invariably belong to idiotic individuals.

Above the Cases G and H are three diagrams illustrating the localization on the brain surface of those portions the stimulation of which bring about movements in the parts of the body there named. The representation of these regions in the human brain is the result of direct experiment undertaken as a necessary preliminary to surgical operations.

Case I contains models showing the anatomy of the ear and eye, also a skull showing the bony labyrinth of the ear. Above Case I the charts refer to comparative anatomy and development of the eye. The changes which occur in nerve cells as the result of artificially exciting them are exhibited in the charts below and to the left.

Cases J and K. In the center of the room the flat cases, J and K, show a very instructive series of sections made through the entire brain. These are preserved in cells in a mixture of alcohol and glycerine.

Above these are two photographs, one representing a nerve cell with its various prolongations and showing especially well a prolongation which forms the nerve fibre; the other is a cross section of the large nerve controlling the leg of a frog.

In this latter photograph the small circles represent the individual nerve fibres, and by difference in the size of these circles it is possible to see the difference in the size of the individual fibres making up this nerve.

Case L contains a very careful series of models representing the entire brain and special portions of it; particularly to be noticed is the model of the brain cut into sections, a section bearing a photograph of the appearance of the specimen at that point.

This enables the observer to connect the appearances seen in cross section with the general characters of the brain itself.

Above Case L are three jars: 1 contains an abnormally small brain of an idiot, which shows the further peculiarity that one-half of it is much less well developed than the other. 2 contains a normal brain of a man, the specimen having been hardened in alcohol; 3 contains the normal brain of a man, the specimen having been hardened in nitric acid. In all three specimens the outer membrane, the pia, has been removed.

On the other side, Case M contains a series of models of the interior of the skull of a large number of animals, including such casts from the skulls of several races of

On comparing these specimens it will be noticed that the cerebral hemispheres undergo very great variation in their proportional development, and, as compared with the size of the medulla oblongata are larger in more intelligent animals.

Above Case M are four more specimens in alcohol: 1 contains a monkey's brain, showing the peculiar arrangement of the brain surface at its posterior or occipital end, a part of the human cerebrum or large brain, showing in a very beautiful manner the convoluted surface and ventricles which are there present; 2 is the brain of a microcephalic idiot, which is of very small size, and very irregularly developed, also the brain of a child at birth; 3 is the brain of a second idiot, but of much larger size, its volume being scarcely less than that of some normal brains. These two brains together illustrate the same condition which was illustrated by the skulls described above, viz., that idiots may possess brains of normal size. In the case of the two brains just mentioned the pia mater is not removed, hence the foldings on the surface are not so clearly seen.

Case N shows the method of Dr. Reid for determining those points on the skull which are of use to the surgeon intending to operate on the brain, there being a constant relation between the points and the parts of the brain lying beneath them.

The Section of Psychology.

JOSEPH JASTROW in Charge.

Professor of Experimental and Comparative Psychology in the University of Wisconsin.

The section of psychology comprises two rooms; the one fitted out as a laboratory in operation, and the other containing a collection of apparatus used in the experimental study of mental phenomena. The room devoted to the growth and development of children contains a series of illustrations of the growth of mental powers belonging to this section. An exhibit of the methods and results of modern psychology is naturally confined to those portions of the science that are most amenable to objective illustration. For this reason it is well to emphasize the fact that there are equally important divisions of the subject that are not represented.

The general divisions of psychology may be enumerated as, experimental psychology, including the study of sensation and movement, of the relations between mind and body, of the nature and time relations of elementary mental processes, such as distinction, choice, memory, attention, association and the like; comparative psychology, including the study of the unfolding of the faculties in the human infant and the mental development of children, the study of the various types of mind in animals, and the changes in thought and feeling that mark the advances from savagery to civilization; abnormal psychology, or the study of the divergences from normal mental action; in this division belong such topics as illusions, dreams, the actions of drugs, hypnotism, the various forms of insanity and idiocy, blindness and deaf-mutism, etc.

Psychology also has very direct and practical relations to education, to medicine, to anthropology and other sciences. In the present exhibit those methods and results that stand in close relations to the methods and results of anthropometry have received special attention.

These divisions and others in common use necessarily overlap, some being characterized by method and some by subject matter, and together serve merely as a rough index of the chief lines of activity in the modern study of psychology.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL LABORATORY.

The object of this laboratory is to illustrate the methods of testing the range, accuracy and nature of the more elementary mental powers, and to collect material for the further study of the factors that influence the development of these powers, their normal and abnormal distribution, and their correlation with one another. The laboratory is thus designed, not as are those connected with universities, for special research, or for demonstrations and instruction in psychology, but as a laboratory for the collection of tests. As in physical anthropometry the chief proportions of the human body are systematically measured, so in mental anthropometry the fundamental modes of action upon which mental life is conditioned are subjected to a careful examination. In both cases the first object is to ascertain the normal distribution of the quality measured. With this determined, each individual can find his place upon the chart or curve for each form of test and from a series of such comparisons obtain a significant estimate of his proficiencies and deficiencies. It should not be overlooked that mental tests of this kind are burdened with difficulties from which physical measurements are comparatively free. Our mental powers are subject to many variations and fluctuations. The novelty of the test often distracts from the best exercise of the faculty tested, so that a very brief period of practice might produce a more constant and significant result. Fatigue and one's physical condition are also important causes of variation. It is impossible in the environment of the present laboratory to secure the necessary time and facilities for minimizing these objections. They detract more from the value of an individual record than from that of the combined statistical result. So much remains to be done in this line of investigation that at every step interesting problems are left unanswered. But what has been done emphasizes the importance and probable value of further research. The problems to be considered when once the normal capacity has been ascertained are such general ones as the growth and development with age of various powers; what types of faculty develop earlier and what later; how far their growth is conditioned upon age and how far upon education; again, the difference between the sexes at various ages, differences of race, environments, social status are likewise to be determined. The relation of physical development to mental, the correlation of one form of mental faculty with others, the effect of a special training, these together with their many practical applications form the more conspicuous problems to the solution of which such tests as are here taken will contribute. In addition to the interest in his or her own record, the individual has thus the satisfaction of contributing to a general statistical result.

THE SERIES OF TESTS.

The apparatus is arranged on a series of tables, the attendant directing the tests from a place in back of them, while the subject, as a rule, is seated upon a chair placed between the tables. A railing separates the attendant and subject from those who may be observing the tests. Beginning on the left of the entrance from the aisle, the tests are arranged as follows:

Judgment of lengths by finger movements. Five bars with terminal stops are arranged horizontally, the one above and a little behind the other; the subject passes his forefinger and fro along these bars and so forms a judgment of their relative length. He indicates the result by placing a peg, bearing the number "5," in a hole on the bar which he regards the longest, a "1" on the shortest, and "2," "3" and "4" correspondingly. Having thus arranged the one series of lengths in what he determines to be the true order, the apparatus is reversed and another series with smaller differences is presented for arrangement in order. The sensibility involved in this test is the information obtained from the sensations accompanying the contraction of the muscles. The result is recorded in each case as correct or as involving a certain degree of error. The true lengths are 150, 165, 181.5, 199.7, 216.6 (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{10}$ ) for the coarse series; and 150, 157.5, 165.4, 173.6, 182.3 (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{10}$ ) for the fine series. The apparatus is entirely screened so that the subjects are never seen.

This method of arranging in order a coarse and a fine series of five stimuli has been adopted in several of the tests, on account of its advantage of combining a large number of comparisons in one result, and of permitting the subject to make his own record at his own convenience.

Judgment of weights. A series of five weighted hard rubber boxes differing in weight are presented, and the subject required to arrange them in order of weight. The weights are held and raised between the thumb and forefinger, the sensibility involved being the combined pressure-sense of the skin and the sense of resistance overcome by the contraction of the muscles in raising the weights. Two series of weights are used, the coarse weighing 300, 320, 341.3, 364.1, 388.4 grammes (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{4}$ ); and the finer, 310, 320.3, 331, 342 grammes (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{10}$ ).

Touch. The minimal distance is determined for the tip of the forefinger between the points that can just be felt as two. This form of sensibility differs greatly in different portions of the body; points separated by  $\frac{1}{4}$ , or  $\frac{1}{10}$  of an inch can be felt as two on the tip of the tongue, while on the back of the neck they may be separated by  $\frac{1}{4}$  of an inch and yet be felt as one. A series of fixed points are used, varying by half-millimeters up from 5 to 6 mm., and a result quickly reached. The points are necessarily applied at precisely the same moment and with a constant and known pressure.

Judgment of surfaces by feeling. A series of surfaces (about three inches square) are formed by winding wires of various diameters tightly around an iron form. Each turn of the wire rests close against the neighboring ones, so that a more or less rough or smooth surface is formed according to the grade of wire used. The subject places the forefinger of his right hand successively through five openings in a screen by which the surfaces are hidden from view, and feels the surfaces by passing the tip of the forefinger to and fro across it. Having estimated their relative roughness and smoothness he places a peg bearing a "5" over the coarsest surface, a "1" over the finest and the others accordingly. The sensibility involved is a form of active touch similar to that used in judging the texture of cloths, metals, etc. A coarse and a fine series are used, the wires having diameters of .051, .064, .081, .102 and .128 inches (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{4}$ ) in the one series; and .051, .057, .064, .072, .081 inches (a ratio of increase of  $\frac{1}{8}$ ) in the other series.

Rapidity of movement. The subject touches an electric key as rapidly as possible, each closing of the circuit being automatically recorded. In this way a record is taken of the maximum number of finger-movements that the subject can make in 15 seconds. The wrist is held in order to ensure an isolated and uniform finger-movement.

Sensitiveness to pain. A gradually increasing pressure is brought to bear upon the tip of the forefinger of the left hand, and the subject is asked to indicate the moment at which the pressure first becomes at all painful. This lower limit of pain is recorded to the nearest  $\frac{1}{4}$  of a kilogramme (1 kgm.=22 lbs.), by means of a coiled spring indicator. Three records are taken. (This apparatus is designed by Prof. Cattell of Columbia college.)

TABLE No. 3.

Equality of movements. The subject places the point of a lead pencil at the left end of a sheet of paper 15 inches long, and makes five movements by raising the pencil and bringing it down again, the attempt being to make the distances between the dots so recorded equal. The test is made with the eyes closed, the estimate of the distance moved depending upon the motor sensibility. The only limit of movement is that suggested by the length of the paper. The average distance between the dots and the average percentage of deviation are computed and recorded.

Reproduction of lines. Three lines, approximately one, two and three inches in length, are shown one at a time. The line is removed and the subject immediately thereupon draws a line as nearly as possible of the same length as the one just seen. The amount and direction of error of each reproduction is recorded.

Accuracy of aim. The subject attempts to touch with a hard rubber pencil a small cross printed on a sheet of paper (three inches square) and placed upon the table about inches away. The error, i. e., the distance between the center of the cross and the point actually touched is recorded by means of carbon paper upon a sheet beneath. The subject is thus prevented from seeing his error, while a circular screen upon the pencil hides the cross a little before the point approaches it and thus insures a direct and uniform movement. The subject attempts to strike the cross ten times, and the direction and amount of each error is noted.

Division of lengths. The apparatus (devised by Prof. Muensterberg, of Harvard University) consists of a surface of black felt, about twenty inches long, with three adjustable white strips for dividing off the surface. The strips at each end are set to form a constant distance (in the present test 40 cm = 10.2 inches) and the subject's task consists in moving the middle strips so as to divide the distance exactly in two; or again, to mark off one-third of the distance. A scale may be quickly turned into position and the error in it noted.

Right and left movements. The subject places the forefinger of each hand upon the center of a wire, and simultaneously moves the fingers out to an equal distance in opposite directions. By means of the buttons left at the ends of the movements and a scale, the difference in the extent of movement of the hands is determined. In this right and left-handedness play an important part. The instrument was designed by Fitz of Harvard University.

Accuracy of movements. Starting at the center of a sheet of paper twelve inches square the subject draws a line as accurately as possible, first toward a point at the edge of the sheet to the left, then to the right, then above and then below. The starting point and the four other points are marked by crosses. To prevent the natural retardation of movement as the pencil approaches the cross, a small circular screen is placed upon the pencil. The error and general directness of the movement are recorded. This test, the accuracy of aim and reproduction of movements, involves the guidance of movements by the eye.

Judgments of lengths by sight. By pressing one or another of five keys, five cards bearing lines of different lengths; the subject judges, the relative lengths of the lines and indicates his judgment by placing a peg bearing the number "5" upon the key that corresponds up the longest line, a "1" in the shortest and so on. The apparatus is then reversed and a second series of five lines with smaller differences presented for judgment. The lengths in the coarse series are 2.00, 2.10, 2.20, 2.31 and 2.43 inches in length (a ratio of increase of 10%); and in the fine series 2.00, 2.05, 2.10, 2.15 and 2.21 inches (a ratio of increase of 10%).

Estimation of lengths in four directions. The upper arm of a cross printed upon a sheet of paper eight inches square bears a small mark 50 mm. from the center; the subject attempts to place a mark upon the other three arms at an equal distance from the center. The divergences from 50 mm. are then measured to the nearest half millimetre. The arms of the cross are unequal and asymmetrically placed in order to insure judgment of length from the center outward.

Form alphabet. This name is given to a series of twenty-five characters, each consisting of a vertical stroke and two horizontal strokes, one above and one below. The horizontal strokes are either both long or both short, to the right or left, or long on one side and short on the other. Twenty-five typical variations have been detected and one of each singled out as the form to be identified. Over 200 of these forms are arranged in a definite order upon a sheet, 8½ inches square, with the form to be identified clearly indicated at the top. The subject finds and marks off as rapidly as possible as many of the forms exactly like the one designated as he can recognize within the time allowed, ninety seconds. The number correctly and the number incorrectly marked are recorded. The test involves the power of rapidly distinguishing between small differences in length, position and form.

TABLE No. 5.

Quickness of perception. Behind a photographic shutter there appears for a brief moment (about  $\frac{1}{10}$  of a second) a card bearing a series of black dots, or dots of different colors, or words, etc. The subject attempts to determine the number and color of the dots, and to read the words, within brief period of exposure. From the correctness of the answers given the quickness of perception is estimated.

Memory. A series of printed words, numbers, etc., appears successively behind an opening in a screen; as soon as the series is completed the subject attempts to write as many as possible of the words or numbers in their proper order. The number correctly recalled with and without regard to order, are recorded as an indication of the range of memory, or "memory span."

Reproduction of lengths by memory. In a former test (Table No. 3) the subject drew lines as nearly as possible of the same lengths as three pattern lines shown. He now draws these lines again according to his recollection of them. The increase of error is due to the fading of the sense-image in the memory.

TABLE No. 6.

Location reaction. A white spot upon a metal strip may be placed at any portion of about one-sixth of the circumference of a circular track (diameter about 36 inches). The spot is concealed by a screen, the falling of which is the signal for the subject to find and touch the spot as accurately and quickly as he can. The fall of the screen starts and the touching of the spot stops the swing of a pendulum-chronoscope. The time is thus measured to the nearest  $\frac{1}{10}$  of a second and the error in position to the nearest millimeter. This apparatus was designed by Dr. Fitz of Harvard University.

TABLE No. 7.—REACTIONS.

Simple reactions: Touch, hearing, sight. The time to be measured is that elapsing between the presentation of a stimulus and the indication by the subject that the resulting sensation has been received. The subject receives a tap on the back of the hand, hears the stroke of a bell or sees a white spot in back of a falling screen; the same movement that produces the touch, the sound, or the fall of the screen starts an electric chronoscope, registering one-hundredths of a second. The reaction consists in touching a key, which instantly stops the hands of the chronoscope.

Complex reactions: Choice of two touches. The right or the left shoulder of the subject is touched, and as quickly as possible he touches a key with his right hand if the touch has been on the right shoulder; with the left hand if upon the left shoulder. The increase of time above the simple reaction is that needed for determining the place of the stimulus and for choosing the proper movement.

Choice of five numbers and movements. The stimuli are the five numbers, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, exposed by the falling of the screen, and the reaction the touching of the particular one of the five keys bearing the number exposed. The time measured is that needed for reading the number and choosing the proper one of five movements.

The apparatus is also arranged for the determination of the time of a variety of mental processes, such as color distinction, naming pictures, reading, adding, classifying, associating, etc.

In all tests several records are made. These time measurements are important as a test of general mental alertness, and as a means of studying mental processes not readily susceptible of measurement by the usual methods.

TABLE No. 8.

Copying test. The time needed for writing ten given short words from a printed page is measured to the nearest second.

Association test. The time needed for thinking of and writing down an association each of ten given words is measured. The difference in time between this and the preceding test gives some indication of the readiness of association.

Picture and word test. The rapidity with which a given ten words or pictures can be found amongst forty is measured. This time serves as an index of general mental fitness, and also gauges the closeness of association between word and picture. The test is further arranged to yield some indications of memory, first as the power to recall secondly as the power to recognize. First the subject attempts after a given interval to write as many of the forty words or pictures as he can recall; and then he attempts to tick off on a sheet containing sixty pictures or words in irregular order (the original forty twenty others) as many as he can recognize as having seen on the former sheet. The number of pictures or words correctly recalled and correctly recognized gauges the capacity of this form of memory, while the time needed for the various stages of the test gives other useful indication.

OPTICAL TESTS.

On the west wall to the rear of tables 6 and 7 are arranged a series of tests of the range and accuracy of form and color vision.

Range of vision. The subject views at a distance of five meters (16.4 feet) a card in proper size a series of rings either complete, or open at one or two places to left, right, above or below. He is given a blank spaced off like the large card, and is the forms in their proper places as well as he can. All naming or reading is thus aided; while the smallest set of circles correctly drawn determines the range of vision. Sizes extend from 30 to 2.5 diopters. (The execution of this test is due to Dr. C. A. Feltz, of Philadelphia, Pa.)

Accuracy of vision. Groups of dots of various sizes 40 to 2.5 diopters are viewed at a distance of 5 meters, the subject counting the number of dots in each group. The smallest size of dot correctly counted indicates the accuracy of vision.

Color-sense. A series of 28 circular patches of color are arranged in their spectral order around the circumference of a large black disc. These colors are indicated by numbers from 1 to 28. Through a circular opening at the center of the large disc, any one of the colors may be made to appear; each central color is indicated by a letter, A B C, etc. The test consists in matching successively each of the ten central colors with one at the periphery. This the subject does as rapidly as possible; the nature of the error is an indication of defects of color-vision which the time furnishes an index of the development of color-sense.

Shade. Nine shades of grey are arranged upon a board, not in the order of their intensity, and are indicated by numbers. Then one of the shades is shown singly and the subject attempts to identify it by its number. The number and nature of the errors indicate his ability to see slight distinctions of shade.

In addition to these tests of which systematic records are made, there are tests of the discrimination of colors; preference of colors, singly and in pairs; preference of proportions, and other tests which cannot be further described.

Demonstration table. Upon a long table near the east wall are shown some pieces of apparatus and materials, illustrating a few typical principles in the study of sensation.

Among the points demonstrated may be mentioned, color contrast, color mixture, subjective colors, duration of the after image, stereoscopic combination, double images, retinal rivalry; peripheral vision, blind spot, estimation of size, visual interpretation, contrast of extent and intensity of pressure, upper and lower limit of audibility, etc., etc.

Charts, curves, etc. Along the west wall and portions of the east wall are arranged a series of curves representing in graphic form the results of investigations of various sensory, motor and mental faculties. The largest group is devoted to sets of curves showing the results of tests, many of them the same as those taken in the laboratory, and of similar purpose. These results are based upon tests taken at nine different colleges, upon 650 persons, with college students predominating. They represent the normal accuracy and distribution of certain forms of sense and motor capacity and mental powers, and the nature of the error when a constant error is involved. Other groups of curves illustrate the results of research upon the relation between mind and body, on memory, illusions, involuntary movements, reaction times, association, etc., etc.

Photographs of psychological laboratories. Upon the south wall and adjoining portions of the east and west walls, the chief psychological laboratories of this and other countries are represented by photographs. This collection gives a general view of the extensive material provisions that have been made for the further development and teaching of experimental psychology. The photographs are accompanied by outlines of courses of study in psychology. The foreign universities represented are Bonn, Geneva, Paris, Prague, Rome, Tokio; the American are Brown, Clark, Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Toronto, Wellesley, Wisconsin and Yale.

The matériel contained in this laboratory has been collected by the Section of Psychology of the Department of Ethnology, with the aid of the psychological department of the University of Wisconsin. With the exceptions already noted, the apparatus has been prepared and in most cases designed for the purposes of this laboratory.

The electrical supplies are exhibited by the Ansonia Electrical Company; the shutter used upon table No. 5 is exhibited by the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y.

APPARATUS ROOM.

The collection of apparatus aims to exemplify the chief forms of apparatus and material used in special research and general study of mental phenomena. Some of this apparatus is used as well by physiologists, physicists and physicians, but the greater portion has been designed especially for psychological purposes.

The apparatus has been collected by the Section of Psychology of the Department of Ethnology, the chief contributors being the psychological departments of the following universities: Brown, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Toronto, Wisconsin; the following instrument makers: Cambridge Scientific Instrument Co., Cambridge, England; H. Elbs, Freiburg, Germany; R. Jung, Heidelberg, Germany; J. D. Kageenaar, Utrecht, Holland; M. Kohl, Chemnitz, Germany; C. Krille, Leipzig, Germany; F. Mayer, Strassburg, Germany; W. Petzold, Leipzig, Germany; R. Rothe, Prague, Austria; E. S. Sighrer, Leipzig, Germany; Ch. Verdin, Paris, France; Milton-Bradley Co., Springfield, Mass.; Ganun & Parsons, New York; Meyrowitz Bros., New York; Queen & Co., Philadelphia; E. S. Ritchie & Sons, Boston; Yarnall, Philadelphia, together with a number of individual exhibitors.

The apparatus is classified throughout according to the purposes for which it is used and each bears a label explaining its mode of use and acknowledging its source. There are ten cases of apparatus, the contents of which are indicated as (beginning upon the left of the entrance from the aisle) Touch; the eye—light and form sense; color sense; color sense; binocular vision (in lower case, color contrast); hearing (in lower case, visual ances); movement (in lower case optical illusions); recording apparatus; time-measuring apparatus; reaction-time accessories.

In addition there are arranged upon platforms in the center of the room and near the wall, as well as on the tops of the cases, a miscellaneous series of apparatus too large to be exhibited in the cases.

Touch. What is popularly termed touch includes a group of sensibilities connected with the skin. The chief of these are the form and space sense of the skin, sense of pressure, sense of temperature, and the sensations accompanying muscular contraction.

Form-sense is most usually tested by aesthesiometers, which determine the smallest distance between two points that may be felt as two, this distance differing widely in different parts of the body. A variety of designs of such apparatus is exhibited. Another group of instruments have for their object the determination of the smallest outline and solid figures that may be distinguished when placed upon the skin; of the slightest differences of texture and in thickness that can be felt; of the perception of movement upon the skin; of the relation between lengths as judged by the skin and by the eye; of the combination of touch-impressions, and the like.

As types of apparatus for the study of the pressure sense, test-weights and special scales of pressure balances are exhibited. These are used to determine the smallest differences in weight that can be perceived under various circumstances. The temperature sense is represented by simple devices for locating and mapping the hot and cold spots, or special points of the skin specifically sensitive to heat or cold. A number of devices studying the extent and accuracy of the sense of movement completes the inventory of this case.

The eye—light and form sense. As the processes of seeing are most directly related to the structure of the eye, and the formation of the image and the movements of the eyes, the first group of optical apparatus is devoted to these points. The case contains several forms of artificial eyes by which the relations and functions of the several parts of the eye may be conveniently reproduced; special devices for illustrating the changes accompanying accommodation, the path of the rays, the formation of the image upon the retina, the movements of the eyeballs; also apparatus for determining the chief forms of all defects.

The methods of testing the form sense of the eye, i. e., the accuracy and range of vision under different conditions, are represented by perimeters, optometers, test-dots, test-letters, forms, test-diagrams, etc. Devices for demonstrating the blind spot, and a variety of other apparatus (shutters, diaphragms, dark-tubes) are also included in this section.

Color-sense. The first of the two cases devoted to the color-sense contains a variety of color-wheels, illustrations of color mixture, and methods of detecting color-blindness. The color-wheel is at once the simplest and most universal method of obtaining variations of color and shade. The various types differ mainly in respect to the manner of rotation, whether by hand, foot, clock-work or electric motor, while special wheels have been devised to permit the proportions of colors to be changed while the wheel is in motion. All these are represented. In a frame upon the wall are displayed the methods of preparing for experiments in color vision; these include slit discs sliding upon one another thus producing any desired proportion of the component colors; graded mixture, made by half-discs, and thus showing the resulting color and the components at the same time; distinction between pigment and color mixture; methods of measuring color proportions, etc.

The various methods of detecting color-blindness are displayed in this and the following case. For convenience these methods may be classified as the matching, the naming, the confusion and the quantitative methods. The matching method consists in placing fore the subject a series of pattern or typical colors and requiring him to select out all colors like them. The matching methods are represented by Halmgren's worsteds in various forms, by Gaeton's test wools, a series of wools arranged by Dr. Oliver, the Magnus Jeffries color card, etc. For practical purposes the distinction of colors as signals, and of naming them correctly is important and has led to a variety of devices for detecting the readiness with which given colors can be recognized and named. Several such devices are exhibited. The confusion method is represented by arrangement of colored bands, with narrow strips of a different color inserted upon them; by colored letters printed on colored backgrounds; by Stilling's test plates consisting of figures formed by irregular blotches of color upon a background of another color, and by other variations of these. In all these a person with a certain form of color defect is unable to read or distinguish what is clear to the normal eye. In the quantitative tests the object is to determine the precise amount of white and colored light that give rise to the two colors that are wrongly pronounced the same. The chief forms of such apparatus exhibited are those designed by Prof. Halmgren, Prof. Donders and Prof. Hering.

Color sense. Several of the pieces of apparatus already described are contained in the second optical case. In addition this case contains apparatus for illustrating changes of light and shade, contrast of light and shade, collections of discs for various purposes, chromotropes; and also apparatus used in testing the accuracy with which lines and angles and their positions in space may be estimated.

Binocular vision. The combination of the images in the two eyes to form one picture is a most important fact in vision; the apparatus whose special purpose is to illustrate the process of seeing or inferring the solidity of objects from the two retinal images is the stereoscope. As illustrations of the phenomena of binocular vision are shown rods and other apparatus for demonstrating double-images, devices for illustrating the horopter, diagrams for combining points of vision and a variety of general and special stereoscopes; methods of obtaining binocular color mixture are also shown.

The lower portion of this case is devoted to the phenomena of color contrast and subjective color. The chief point illustrated is that a background of one color will change a neutral gray into its complementary; green inducing pink, yellow blue, etc. A gray ring placed upon green paper and covered with white tissue paper seems pink; a gray ring formed by the rotation of black and white upon a green sector becomes pink; a black dot seen in reflection upon a white ground in proximity to a black dot viewed through red glass becomes greenish; of the two shadows of a rod, one formed by colored the other by white light, the one shadow will show the color of the light, the other the complementary color, etc. All these forms of color contrasts are shown. The change of color when presented upon different backgrounds and other related points are also illustrated.

Visual inferences: Optical illusions. The lower portions of the two cases at the north end of the east wall contain illustrations of inferences from visual sensations, in distinction to the primitive sensations themselves, and of a few types of optical illusions. Stereoscopic cards illustrate the inferences of solidity or the third dimension of space; several forms of the zoetrope illustrate the inference of movement from an interrupted series of changes of position; diagrams illustrating the interpretation of lines as the pictures of objects and other similar principles are also shown. The chief types of illusions illustrated are illusions of relative length and area due to contrast of particular outlines and angles; illusions of change of direction of straight lines, and deviation from parallelism of parallel lines as the result of intersecting angles, illusions depending upon irradiation, etc.

The selection of apparatus bearing upon the form and color sense has been made with the assistance of Dr. C. A. Oliver of Philadelphia. Dr. B. Joy Jeffries of Boston has contributed largely to the collection of apparatus for the detection of color blindness.

Hearing. The apparatus for the study of the sensations of sound, and particularly of cal perception, are so elaborate as to preclude their exhibitions hence here only the sim- types of apparatus are presented. These include bars for determining the upper of audibility, whistles for the same purpose; tuning forks for studying the relations of cal pitch and the sensitiveness to musical intervals; monochord for studying simple omena of pitch; resonators for the analysis of overtone; whistles for the study of n; Galton's apparatus for determining slight differences of pitch, and also a few es for studying the sensitiveness to slight differences of sound intensity; the power of l-location and the nature and accuracy of the sense of time intervals.

Movement. This group of apparatus illustrates the function of movement as an index ntal and nervous conditions. There is an ergograph, or apparatus for recording mas- contractions and thus studying the control over muscles, fatigue, co-ordination, etc.; paratus for demonstrating the changes in the volume of the arm accompanying on and mental effort; a sphygnograph for recording the pulse; several devices for ding the involuntary movements of the arm and body; dynamometers for testing the gth of muscular contractions; apparatus for determining the rapidity and regularity vements; a device for demonstrating tremor; arm holders, and other allied pieces of atus.

Recording apparatus. The value of the experimental study of mental phenomena ids so frequently upon the means of recording the results that one case is devoted to of recording apparatus. The most universal of these is a kymograph or revolving ; the drum is driven by clockwork at a very uniform rate and is covered with glazed upon which a coat of soot has been collected by holding it above a burning lamp. this rotating drum a series of writing points controlled by electricity or air, write record by tracing delicate white lines as they expose the paper by rubbing off the coating of black soot. These records are then bathed in shellac and made perma-

In the study of movement; in the recording of time intervals, in the analysis of the ons between physiological and psychological processes, in the study of the profi- of voluntary control, in the study of the interference of sensory and motor pro- , as a means of making electric contacts, and in a variety of other ways such an atus is indispensable. Several such kymographs, both simple and complex, with a y of attachments for insuring change of rate, convenience in manipulation, adapta- , different forms of experiment, etc., are represented either by the apparatus itself or otographs. Electrical attachments are represented by time markers, tuning forks, utographs, Depréz signals, electric keys, switches, magnets, etc.; pneumatic attach- by simple and complex tambours of various types; apparatus for recording the nents of the lips, of the voice, of the throat, of the pulse, of the respiration, of the ction of muscle, of the fingers and the like.

Time-measuring apparatus. The study of the time consumed by simple mental ses forms one of the main divisions of experimental psychology. The applications h study and the generalizations to which it leads are of importance and value in directions. Time-measuring apparatus is also needed in other types of psychologi- earch.

or measuring long intervals a stop-watch and a metronome are shown; the stop- measuring to the nearest fifth of a second, the metronome to the nearest one-quarter cond. More convenient is an automatic metronome which can be started and d by the closing of an electric circuit and which registers the number of oscillations, etronome may be made to register its oscillations upon a rotating drum; two forms rrupting clocks for this purpose are also exhibited. By means of these clocks a ange of intervals may be accurately recorded.

Tuning forks registering  $\frac{1}{10}$  or  $\frac{1}{100}$  second are exhibited. The chronoscope D'Arsonval enables the observer to read off on a dial  $\frac{1}{10}$  of a second, and has the advantage of being noiseless. A mechanical clock designed by Prof. Muensterberg also registers to  $\frac{1}{10}$  second; a water chronoscope, the time being measured by the amount of fall of a column of water, registers to  $\frac{1}{100}$  second or less; while the Hipp chronoscope (two mountings of which are shown) registers to the nearest  $\frac{1}{1000}$  second. There are also exhibited certain special reaction-time instruments, that record by the vibration of a fork the interval elapsing between the presentation of a stimulus and a response to it; those represented are designed by Beetz, Donders, Exner, Bowditch and Fitz.

Accessories for reactions. To complete the outfit for the study of reaction times there are needed, means for controlling the time-measuring apparatus; various forms of stimuli for impressing the various senses and presenting mental problems, and various simple and complex forms of reaction keys. In addition a shutter or other means of determining how much can be recognized within a brief interval of exposure is needed. Types of all these forms of apparatus are represented. For control the falling of a ball, or of a shutter, or the swing of a pendulum may be used, the theoretical being compared with the actual time. As types of stimuli for sound, a sound-magnet which also yields a premonitory signal, and electric bell are displayed; for touch a mechanical key and an induction-coil (furnishing an electrical stimulus), and also a special key by which a shock may be given to the finger by which the reaction is made; and for sight several forms of exposure apparatus by means of which any one of two or more objects may be shown simultaneously with the starting of the chronoscope. Apparatus for a "chain-reaction," in which the reaction of one subject gives the stimulus for the next, is also shown. In addition a variety of material used as a stimuli and in the study of memory, attention and association, such as sets of words, letters, numbers, pictures, colors, lines, etc., are displayed and described. Of reaction keys there are forms for simple reaction with the finger; for reaction with any one of the five fingers, a reaction-keyboard with fifty keys, a foot-key, a lip-key, speech-keys of several types, etc.

The platforms. The instruments exhibited upon the platforms are an apparatus for showing the relation between the attention and the moment of receiving a stimulus; a large apparatus for the study of movements of the arm with and without resistance; a color-wheel for foot-power; a general optical testing-board; a large stand for the study of æsthetic proportions; a time-sense apparatus; an apparatus for demonstrating the perception of distance; a square for visual estimates of length and area; a universal chronograph for recording intervals of various durations, and several others.

Photographs, etc. Both within the cases and about the walls are exhibited photographs of apparatus, which serve to supplement the collection.

THE GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT OF CHILDREN.

Weights and statures of American children, plotted for annual intervals. The discussion of weight for girls from five years to seventeen years of age are plotted.
 appears that in earlier years the variations from the average weight are only . The frequency of greater variations increases from year to year, which is shown by act that the curves showing the distribution of weights become flatter from year to . Beginning with the seventh year the curves become distinctly asymmetrical, the upper h being much longer than the lower one. This proves that a considerable number idren begin at this period to be far in advance of the average child of the respective while few only lag far behind. The nearer the age under consideration approaches eriod of accelerated growth, which begins with the eleventh year in girls, with the nth in boys, the more marked becomes the asymmetry, while later on it begins to near again. At the same time the curves begin to contract, which indicates that the of development becomes at this time again more uniform.
 be average stature of American children. The curves are based on material colin six American cities, Boston, Worcester, Mass., Toronto, Milwaukee, St. Louis, akland, Cal. The average from each city differs from the general average. These nces are caused by peculiar social and geographical surroundings and by the vary-mposition of the population of each city. As the number of children measured in ity was not the same, it was necessary to reduce the observations in such a way that and total shows the result which would have been obtained if the same number of en had been measured in each city. The curves for weight and height show that s a period of accelerated growth during the period preceding maturity. As this takes place earlier in girls than in boys, the resulting effect is that girls are, from e of 12 years to that of 14 years, heavier and taller than boys.

ie rate of growth of children of various cities depends upon the geographical and surroundings, and upon the nationalities composing the population of the city.
 ore the physical development of children of various cities shows certain differences.

children are a little less favorably developed than the average American child;
 f Worcester, Mass., are decidedly in advance; Toronto children are least favorably ped. The children of St. Louis, Mo., are in the beginning above the average, but n the end to be below the average. Those of Milwaukee show the opposite pheon. They begin near the average but end considerably above the same. The n of Oakland, Cal., are throughout taller than the average child. In some cases ults may be affected by peculiar conditions. Thus the better development of the n of Worcester, as compared to those of Boston, may be due to the fact that in the ity certain objections were raised which influence principally the less educated part population which is at the same time the poorer one. In consequence a portion of orer children were not measured, which fact tended to raise the general average.

The average of the measurements taken in any given city differs from the general average. Measurements collected in six cities are contained in the tables showing the development of American children. Therefore six such differences can be computed for each year. The mean of these six differences has been plotted. It appears that the mean differences increase very rapidly after the eleventh year. Up to that time the children of the various cities develop quite uniformly, but then the influence of surroundings and descent begins to make itself strongly felt, causing an increase in the mean value of the difference between the general average and that of each city.

Comparison of the physical and mental development of the children of Toronto, Canada. The measurements of all children whose mental ability was designated by the teacher as above the average were tabulated separately, as were the measurements of all children whose mental ability was designated by the teacher as below the average. In the diagram it is indicated how these two classes differ from the general average. It appears throughout that children whose mental ability is above the average are not as well developed physically as children whose mental ability is below the average. This is probably due to the fact that children who are adjudged as less able by their teachers devote more time to play and physical exercise than those who are adjudged as possessing high mental ability.

Growth of the head of American children. The growth and development of American children is such that boys from 5 to 12 years are slightly taller and heavier than girls. From 12 to 14 years of age the girls are ahead of the boys, while later the latter again overtake the girls and continue to grow when the girls have reached their greatest height and weight. The laws of the growth of the head differ from those of the body. The girl's head is always considerably smaller than that of the boys. Consequently it is always smaller in proportion to the stature except when growth ceases. At that time the boy's head is proportionately smaller. The difference between the breadth of the face of girls and boys is not as pronounced as the difference in the size of head. During their twelfth year girls have a wider face than boys. The face grows more rapidly than the head, as is shown by the steady increase in the proportion of breadth of face to length and breadth of head. The face of girls is, when compared to the size of the head, larger than that of boys. The length of the head increases a little more rapidly than the breadth of the head, and the head of girls is a little rounder than that of boys.

The growth and development of school children of St. Louis. The curves showing the growth of the school children of St. Louis are based on measurements of about 30,000 children. The laws relating to the growth of the head are brought out clearly in these curves. The curves showing the changes of the facial index from year to year prove that the faces of children become more elongated with increasing age. Exhibitor, Dr. W. T. Porter, Washington University St. Louis, Mo.

Growth of school children of Oakland, California. Exhibitor, Prof. L. Barnes, Leland Stanford, Jr. University, Palo Alto, California.

Growth of school children of Boston, Mass. When children of a certain height, say 55 inches, but of various ages are compared, it may be said that among each one hundred of a certain age, for instance 11 years, a certain number are shorter than 55 inches. At the age of 12 years a less number will be shorter than 55 inches, etc. In the diagrams the points indicating how many among each one hundred are shorter than a certain given height are connected by curves.

In each age well developed children and poorly developed children have been compared separately. Children of such stature or weight, that they are taller or heavier than 95 per cent of all those measured are called children of the 95th percentile grade. In the same way the 50th percentile grade means that just as many are below as above this class. The charts show comparisons between boys and girls of various percentile grades. It shows that the period during which girls are taller than boys is longer in short children than in tall ones, while on the other hand the period during which girls are heavier than boys is shorter in light children than in heavy ones. The annual increase in stature and weight for short and tall, and for light and heavy children has also been plotted. Exhibitor, Dr. H. P. Bowditch, Boston, Mass.

The effect of physical training upon the students of the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics. A series of measurements taken at regular intervals throughout the course of study show the effect of continued practice and of the discontinuance of the training, during summer vacation. This effect is also traced by a comparison of observations on the same individuals at intervals of one year. Exhibitor, Boston Normal School of Gymnastics. ### MENTAL DEVELOPMENT.

The application of the results of mental studies to education imparts a special value to those obtained upon children and exhibits the change with age of various forms of mental faculty. Only a very small portion of this field has been investigated and only a small selection of the results obtained are available for exhibition. Almost every one of the tests made in the laboratory could be applied to the study of the growth of sensibility, of motor control and mental grasp. It is with the object of illustrating the method and purpose of such studies and of fostering an interest in their extension that this selection of results has been made.

The chief groups of curves shown are a comparative study of the color sense, the material being contributed by Prof. Earl Barnes and Mrs. M. D. Hicks. Here are plotted the relative number of pupils choosing a certain color as the most pleasing of twelve given colors.

The change with age is quite definite, the chief changes being an increase in the preference of dark red and dark blue, and a decrease in the preference of yellow. For comparison the color preferences of Indians, Chinese and negroes are shown. Another series shows the color preferences for combinations of colors.

Another investigation, also contributed by Prof. Barnes, shows the increase with age in the number of statements and the change in the nature of the statements made in answer to questions as "what is a house, a tree, etc." A complex test made by the Educational Club of Philadelphia consisted first in finding how many of a certain ten words or pictures could be found amongst forty within a given time. Upon this followed a memory test where the child first writing down as many of the original forty words or pictures as he can remember, and then marking off upon a card containing sixty words or pictures all that he can recognize as having appeared on the original forty. The one test yields an indication of the length of the memory as the power of recall, the other as a power of recognition. Groups of curves exhibited show the growth of motor power, of memory both visual and auditory, of the change in conceptions and the like. Throughout these studies interesting results may be deduced from a comparison of boys with girls, and from marked and constant changes and certain critical periods. With more extended results the relations between age and education, nature and nurture, the influences of race, social status, etc., doubtless be determined.

ANTHROPOMETRY OF COLLEGE STUDENTS.

DR. D. A. SARGENT in Charge.

Room C-4, to C-3.

Composite statues of American college students, male and female. The two statues have been constructed from a long series of measurements of students in American colleges and secondary schools. The measurements of the statues are those which occur most frequently among the individuals measured. There are just as many individuals whose measurements are below those of the statues as there are individuals whose measurements are above those of the statues.

On a series of photographs and diagrams the methods of measurement are illustrated which have furnished the standards for the statues. An alcove is provided in which these measurements may be taken on those desiring the same.

One of the principal objects of these measurements is to determine the development of the body of any individual, as compared to that of the average individual. By this method existing defects are brought out, which can partly be remedied by proper physical exercise.

The standards differ according to sex and age. Therefore, tables have been constructed giving the results of the measurements for each year.

Anthropology of the North American Indians.

Located in Aisle C-2, C-3.

Comparisons of measurements of Indians, half-blood Indians and whites. The curves show that, from early childhood, the Indian's face is wider than that of the half-blood, whose in turn is wider than that of the white. The most important fact brought out by the curves is that the half-blood stands between the Indian and the white, but nearer to the Indian than to the white. In interpreting this fact we must bear in mind that half-bloods are usually children of Indian mothers and white fathers; but it may also be that Indian traits are transmitted with greater strength than those of the whites. The distribution of measurement among adult Indians, half-bloods and whites is also given. Its most characteristic feature is the flatness of this curve for half-bloods, which expresses the fact that forms which vary considerably from the average are found frequently among half-bloods, while the forms near the average are less frequent among them than among the races. The same curve shows a depression in the middle, which seems to be characteristic and probably indicates that, in the half-blood, there is a tendency to reproduce one or the other parental type, while the intermediate type is found comparatively rarely.

Fertility of Indian women. Among full-blood Indians, women with 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, children are more frequent than among half-bloods, while higher numbers of children are more frequent among half-blood women. Indian women have most frequently six or seven children; half-blood women have most frequently eight or nine children. The fertility of half-blood women is, therefore, higher than that of full blood women. At the age of 18, only 11 per cent. of Indian women have no children. This percentage decreases rapidly until the thirtieth year, when it remains nearly stationary at 2 per cent. The average number of children of Indian women increases until the fortieth year is reached, at which time the average number of children is 5.5. This number proves that the slight increase in the Indian population is due to high infant mortality.

The stature of North American Indians. The tribes may be divided into three groups: those whose stature is more than 170 cm., those whose stature is less than 170 cm., and those whose stature is less than 166 cm., and those whose stature is less than 166 cm. The average statures of the groups are plotted from year to year. The stature of males increases rapidly until the eighteenth year when the rate of increase begins to diminish. With 24 years the maximum is reached, when a gradual decrease in stature ensues. This tabulation has also been carried out after exclusion of all Indians attending school in order to exclude the select series of Indian training schools, but the result remained the same. As among whites, the average statures increase to the age of 35, the early maximum is remarkable. Among Indians the annual increase begins to diminish rapidly after the seventeenth year. The maximum is reached in the second half of the twenties.

Located in Aisle C-3, C-5.

Growth of Indian and half-blood children. A comparison of the average statures of Indian and half blood children shows that full blood boys as well as girls are, until their thirteenth year, taller than half blood children. About this time the half blood children overtake them and remain taller than the full bloods. The difference during the second period is more marked among the short tribes than among the tall ones.

Growth of Indian children. The result of a comparison of the growth of children of tall tribes, tribes of middle stature and of short tribes, is that boys and girls do not differ much in height until they reach about their tenth year, from which time the differences between them increase annually.

While among whites we always find a well marked period during which girls are taller than boys of the same age, this period is not so well marked in Indians. It is better marked among half breeds. This may be due principally to the lack of knowledge of the exact ages of Indian children. The fact that the phenomenon is more clearly marked in the case of half breed children suggests, however, that the laws of growth of the white and Indian races may be different.

Comparison between the statures of Indians and of half blood Indians. The curves illustrating the statures among the tallest Indian tribes prove that on an average the half bloods are taller than full bloods, men as well as women. This is the more remarkable as the half bloods contain a larger percentage of French blood, and as the average stature of all Americans of French descent is decidedly lower than that of the Indians. The curves show also that very high statures are more frequent among half bloods than among full bloods and that the former are more variable. Among the Indian tribes of medium stature the difference between half bloods and full bloods is still more marked, and among the shortest tribes we find a further increase of this difference.

Distribution of stature among the North American Indians. Three maps show the distribution of average statures, the frequency of statures over 178 cm. and of short statures under 167 cm. The three maps are much alike in their main features. The highest statures are found in the Mississippi valley. The mountainous regions in the east and in the west show lower statures. The Creek and Iroquois are remarkable on account of their high statures. As the intermixture of white blood tends to increase the height of the body, their high statures may be due to intermarriage with whites, which has been quite frequent among these tribes.

The great diversity of stature on the Pacific coast deserves special notice. Tribes of peculiarly short stature are the Pueblos, the tribes of Round Valley, California; of the shore of northern Oregon and of northern British Columbia. In all these regions tribes are found of different descent but living under the same conditions who are much taller. This shows that descent influences stature considerably.

Attention is called to the diagrams illustrating the statures of the eastern and those of the western Cherokees, the latter being by far the taller. This may be due to different surroundings, the eastern Cherokee being a mountain people, the western a plains people, or to the fact that the western Cherokee have a greater admixture of white blood.

Located in Aisle G-5, C-7

Cephalic index. The cephalic index among most of the North American tribes is higher than 80, that is to say the great majority of tribes are brachycephalic. The Eskimo are the most dolichocephalic people. Setting these aside the longest heads are found in southern California and in isolated spots of the southwestern part of the continent. The largest area of comparatively long heads is the Upper Missouri valley. Farther south flattening of the occiput is so prevalent that the natural formation of the head cannot be determined. Around the great lakes the average cephalic index is higher than farther east and west. It is of great importance to note that at the same time the variability increases which tends to show that there exists a mixed type in this region. The interior of British Columbia has a very brachycephalic population, and the same type is found in Alaska and in many parts of the Pacific coast wherever Athapaskan tribes are found.

The following tentative classification may therefore be made:

1st Type: Eskimos.

2d Type: Athapaskans.

3d Type: Indians of the plains.

4th Type: Californians.

The variability of the cephalic index of the North American Indian is throughout less than that of Europeans. Artificial deformation has the effect of increasing the variability. The variability is least along the foothills of the Rocky mountains. It is very high where the mesocephalic people of the east come into contact with the brachycephalic people of the northwestern plateaus. The low variability of the Iroquois is unexpected because they are considerably mixed with whites. As however the whites of New York state have nearly the same index as the Iroquois, the phenomenon is easily explained.

The high variability of the Pueblos is not solely due to flattening of the occiput, which is not more marked there than among the surrounding tribes.

Located in Aisle C-7, C-8.

Length-breadth indices of skulls of North American Indians. The curves showing distribution of length-breadth indices of skulls of prehistoric Americans differ very much from those obtained from the present Indian population, the principal reason being the prevalence of artificial deformations among them. This fact counts for the flatness of the curves showing the indices of skulls from various parts of Tennessee and Ohio. An attempt has been made to separate the least deformed skulls from the strongly deformed skulls from Tennessee. This attempt shows that the natural shape of the heads of the Indians from this region was probably similar to that of the desert population of the central states.

Indices of skulls from New England. This curve is remarkably similar to that giving the cephalic indices of the Micmac of Nova Scotia. The great frequency of very long heads which does not occur anywhere else in North America is probably due to admixture of Eskimo blood.

Skulls from Southern California. The three diagrams relate to skulls found in regions a short distance apart; nevertheless a remarkably different type prevails, the northern group of islands showing a prevalence of very long heads, while the group of islands near mainland show much shorter heads.

Skulls of Eskimo. While the eastern Eskimo are exceedingly long headed the heads of the western Eskimo are very much shorter, which is probably due to an admixture of blood of the adjoining Indian tribes.

Section of Ancient Religions, Games and Folklore.

STEWART OLSEN, In Charge.

Primitive religions and folk-lore, including games, are the subject of a special section in the Anthropological Building. This section which is known as the "Section of Religions, Games and Folk-lore" is located upon the main floor where the exhibit occupies a series of cases on the south side, and a line of flat cases, which extend across the entire building.

Folk-lore is the name given to the material which has come down to us in the sayings and customs of mankind. Its study, for which no special name has been devised, is an important branch of the science of anthropology. The chief object of the present collection is the display of things which illustrate folk-traditions and customs. The field being a vast one, the collection has been practically restricted to the subject of games. The basis of the collection was formed in the Museum of Archaeology of the University of Pennsylvania during the past two years. This university's collection has been supplemented by exhibits from individuals and the leading manufacturers of games in this country.

The objects are classified and arranged for comparative study, games of the same general sort being placed together. They are combined in twelve table cases running from the southernmost entrance on the west side to the corresponding entrance on the east side. Puzzles and the simple games of children commence the series.

CASE I.

Puzzles; Children's Games, Mancala. The ingenious objects which we designate as "puzzles" are represented by about 125 specimens exhibited by the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania. They begin with a collection of East Indian puzzles, "invented" by Aziz Hussain of Samartapore, among which may be seen many types of puzzles that are common in Europe and America. The Chinese puzzles of wood, bone and ivory, follow them. Chinese puzzles, long a household word, are very limited in number. Those which are made for export are invariable in form and consist of the familiar "Ring Puzzle," the "Geometrical Puzzle" and the "Dissected Cube." Their Chinese names are all descriptive, and the "Ring Puzzle," which they call "The Nine Interlinked Rings," was probably borrowed by Chinese from India. The number of types in the entire series of puzzles is surprisingly small. The one that was revived some years since under the name of the "Fifteen Puzzle," and which was described by an English writer some two hundred years ago, has suggested a large group. "Pigs in Clover," an American invention, is the most recent addition to the world's amusements of this character, and its wide diffusion and popularity is shown here in a great variety of specimens from different countries.

Some of the simpler amusements of children are suggested by the objects on the north side of this case. Here are to be seen Mr. William Wells Newell's "Games and songs of American Children," and "The Counting-out Rhymes of Children," by Dr. H. Harrington Bolton, two books which may be regarded as classical in their particular field. Mr. Pak Yong Kiu of the Korean Commission to the Columbian Exposition has furnished the following interesting addition to the collection of children's counting-out rhymes:

Hau al tá,
Tu al dá,
Som á chun,
Na al dá,
Yuk hong,
Ku chi,
Pol tá,
Chong kun,
Ko fu rá, Biong.

The wide diffusion of the custom of using counting-out rhymes among children and the general resemblance they bear to each other present problems of curious interest.

Among the imitative games of children, there are few more interesting than the toros mock bull fight of Spanish boys. A wicker mask from Madrid representing the bull's head, which is used in this sport, is suspended beside this case, within which may be seen a toy espadas or swords and the banderillos. Tops are shown to be of great antiquity and of very general use over the earth. Their age is illustrated by a wooden top from the Lyons, Egypt, discovered by Mr. Flinders Petrie at Kahun, belonging to 2800 B. C. They were common among the American Indians, north and south. A number of balls of baked clay and stone, which were whipped in a game on the ice, represent the primitive toys of the Sioux, while a more recent Sioux top of wood with a peg of brass shows foreign influences. Among the Omahas, tops were called Moo de de skay, a name which Mr. Fran-La Flèche says is not descriptive. The explorations conducted for the department by George A. Dorsey in Peru have contributed several interesting specimens to this collection. Two prehistoric tops from Ancon are identical in form with the ancient Egyptian, while another from an ancient grave at Arica is distinguished by a spindle, and is not like the modern tops of Japan. The use of pop-guns among the ancient Peruvians is shown by two beautifully carved specimens of wood contained in a llama skin pouch, from an ancient grave in Cañete valley. Pop-guns were used by many if not all of the American Indian tribes. Among the Omahas the children made them of willow branches, and then, by partly stopping one end, would convert them into squirt-guns. The toy squirt-gun sold in the Chicago shops is here shown beside the syringe from India used in the Hindu Diwali Festival.

Jackstraws, which are known in England as "Spithkins" and in France as Les Jonchets, next in order. The peculiar Chinese name appended to the Chinese specimens, the "Precious Things," suggests the probability that China was the country from which derived them.

The remainder of this case is devoted to the implements for a game that holds an unquestioned position among the world's games, and for which no place could be found in the case that follows. It is variously played with pebbles, shells and seeds in holes dug in the sand, or upon a board with cup-like depressions. The game appears to be found wherever Arab influence has penetrated. It is very generally played in Africa, in Asia Minor, in India. Two boards are exhibited, one brought from Jerusalem for the University sent by Mrs. John Harrison of Philadelphia, and another from the Caboot river in Africa. The Syrians in the Damascus house in the Turkish village in the Midway Plaisance know it under the name of Mancala, and it is a favorite game with the chief of the Dahomey village, who frequently plays it with his son before his hut in the Plaisance. Among the Dahomeyans this game is called Madaji, the board adjito and the seeds which they use adji. It is a game for two persons. As played in Syria there are several forms of the game. One is called la b madjnuni or the "crazy game." Ninety-eight cowrie shells are used, which are distributed unequally in the fourteen holes in the board, which is placed transversely between the two players. The first player takes all the pieces from the hole at the right of his row and drops them, one at a time, in the first hole on the opposite side, and so on, continuing around the board until the last one is let fall. He thereupon takes all the pieces from that hole and distributes them one by one as before, until, arriving at the last piece, he takes all the pieces again in his hands. This is continued until the last piece dropped either falls into an empty hole or completes two or four in the hole in which it falls. In the latter case the player takes the two or four for his own, as well as the contents of the hole opposite, and should there be two or four in the next hole or holes to the one at which he stopped, he also takes them with those opposite. The players continue in this manner until the game is finished the one gaining the highest number of cowries, wins. If a player's last piece falls in an empty hole, his turn is ended. Skill is of no avail in this form of the game, the result always being a mathematical certainty, accordingly as the cowries are distributed at the beginning.

CASE II.

Balls, Quoits, Marbles. The antiquity of the ball as an implement of sport is attested by the balls found associated with objects used in other games in old Egypt, where it is known at least 4700 years ago. Games of ball are common among savage and barbaric people, and ball games of Burma, Siam, India and Japan, as well as those of the American Indians, are suggested in this case. With the ball games are the sticks used in the widely diffused game which we commonly know as "Tip-cat." Tip-cat is played with a block of wood, about six inches in length, which is struck with a small club or bat and knocked into the air. The rules for playing are somewhat complicated, and as far as they have been compared, appear to be much the same all over the earth. The oldest specimen is from Kahun, Egypt, of 2800 B. C. Tip-cat is known by the Syrians in the Plaisance who have contributed the sticks they use as Hab. In Persia it is called Gut & Lamb, "stick and wood," a name given to it like our name "cat," from the way the stick leaps into the air. In China the game is called Ta-pang, "to knock the stick," and the Chinese in the United States call the "cat," To tsu or "Little Peach." In Japan the game is called In ten; the small stick ko, "son," and the long one wa, "father." In India the game is called Gutti danda; in Burma, Kyitha; in Ceylon ... "game," a name like that of Persia; our own name "cat."

The wicker baskets or cestas for the Spanish game of cesto or Fuente known in Spain, are next shown, with the bat used in the Spanish game. The ancient English bat for trap ball appears with them and these are followed by the implements used in the current American and English ball games exhibited by Messrs. Spalding & Bros., of Chicago. Cricket bats, baseball bats, and tennis rackets, and battledore and shuttlecock are displayed in order and are exhibited the Japanese form of the game and the Chinese shuttlecock, which is struck with the toes. The tossing games, composed of pebbles, cup and ball, granite, quoits, and ring games of various kinds, and the ring game used in the North American Indian examples of the cup and ball game composed of the same materials.

one called the "newest war game," in which the men or "winks" are played upon a board upon which are represented two opposing fortresses. The games of tossing cowrie and coins are next suggested, with the game played by Chinese children with olive seeds. Any natural objects are exhibited that are used by children in playing games resembling marbles, to which artificial objects they appear to lead. In Burma, the seeds of a large pepper, the Eulalia Parvifolia, are employed in a game called gohunyin, which is one of the commonest forms of gambling known in that country. In Asia Minor, knuckle bones or sheep, which are often weighted with lead, are used in the same manner, and in Damascus and the cities, in connection with marbles. Marbles, themselves, in the varieties known to commerce, are next exhibited.

CASE III.

Bowling, Billiards, Curling and Shuffle Board. The objects used to illustrate the games of bowling, billiards and shuffle board were made for this exhibit by the Brunswick-Bell Company, of Chicago, by whom they are displayed, and comprise miniature tables for these games, of remarkable accuracy and beauty of finish. On the north side of the case may be seen the implements used in the game of croquet as it is played at the present day. The first games of croquet manufactured in the United States were made from an English sample in 1803. The Chicago Curling Club here displays a collection of representative objects, including three sets of curling stones and the medals and ribbons belonging to the club and its members.

CASE IV.

Merrells, Fox and Geese, Chess and Draughts. An attempt has been made to bring together as large a number as possible of the simple board games like Merrells and Fox and Geese, with the hope that they would throw light upon that much discussed question, the origin of the game of Chess. The Chinese, Korean, Japanese and Siamese, and Malayan versions of several such games are exhibited. It is curious to note that the peculiar board game in the Japanese Fox and Geese game, called Juroku Musashi, or "Sixteen Soldiers," is the same as one from Peru for a similar game. The inference drawn was that they were of Spanish introduction, which seems to be confirmed by the information that the Japanese game was first known in that country in the sixteenth century. Merrells is displayed in a board made in the Damascus house in the Plaisance where the Syrians call it Sam ki, and in a diagram obtained from Chinese laborers from Canton, who call it Sam ki, or "Three Game," as well as by European boards.

A Japanese board for that famous game which the Japanese call Go, and the Chinese ki, or the "Game of Surrounding" follows. This is the game which is often erroneously referred to as Chess, in China. The Japanese name of this board, Go-ban, has furnished the name which we have applied to the simple game of "Go Bang," which we also call Japan.

The board and men for a highly developed game somewhat like Draughts, played by the Miami Indians of New Mexico furnishes a striking object for speculation and research. The board is a square divided into 144 small equal squares, each of which is crossed by intersecting diagonal lines. The moves are made one square at a time along these diagonal lines, the pieces being placed at the angles of the squares. Two or four persons

They each start with six men, and their object is to get their men across to the other side and occupy their opponents' places, capturing as many of his pieces as possible in the way. A piece is taken by getting it between two others, as in the modern Egyptian game of Seega, and the first piece thus taken may be replaced by an extra piece belonging to the player who makes the capture, which may move on the straight as well as the or "Game of the White Pigeon Ticket," the Tsai f, or "Character Flowering," and the Sing, or "Game of Guessing Surnames." In the first the tickets are imprinted with the eighty characters of the Tsin tsu man, or "Thousand Character Classic," one of the elementary text books of Chinese children. In the second the writer of the lottery assists patrons in their effort to guess the hidden character, by an original ode, in which it is in some way referred to. The third is the game of guessing the name of the successful candidate at the governmental literary examinations. Upon them all the peculiar traditions of the Chinese people have left their imprint.

CASE VI.

Knuckle-bones and Dice, Dominoes, Evolution of Playing Cards, Chinese playing cards, Pachisi, Patoli and Tab. No method of appealing to chance is more common than of tossing some object in the air and deciding the result by its fall. A coin is often at the present day, and many natural and artificial objects have found currency for this purpose. Nuts, cowrie, shells and the knuckle-bones of animals have been used from the earliest times, and the last, the knuckle-bones, have become the parent of many modern games. The American Indians across the entire continent played a game marked plum stones and other objects, which had many points of resemblance with those played by other peoples with dotted cubical dice. The specimens of such games exhibited comprise the game played with marked bone discs in a wooden bowl by the Natick Indians of Oldtowne, Me., contributed by Chief Joseph Nicolai; a set of marked stones and the basket and tallies used by the Sioux, and a similar set of marked bone wooden pieces, with the basket, from the Arapahoes. Among the Pueblo Indians of the southwestern United States blocks of wood are used in the same manner as dice, and among the Arabs of northern Africa, numerical values are attributed to the throws made with four and six similar pieces of reed. In India, cowries are used. Sortilege is also practiced with the implements that are used in games. In China, the cleft root-stock of the bamboo is commonly employed in fortune telling, and the blocks, which form part of the accessories of nearly all Chinese temples, may be seen upon the altar of the Chinese temple at Canton, commonly appealed to by Chinese gamblers, erected in this section. Knuckle-bone or astragali present a most interesting subject for investigation. From a prehistoric knuckle-bone of terra-cotta from Cuzco, Peru (No. 340), in the collection of Señor Montes, in the building, it appears that they were used by the ancient Peruvians. The Peruvians at the present day use four knuckle-bones as dice in a game. It is known in Kechua as taba, a word meaning four, which should not, in the opinion of Señor Montes, be confused with the Spanish word for knuckle-bone, taba, from which he does not think it was derived.

Knuckle-bones were used in games in Old Egypt, as was shown by the ivory specimen found with other gaming implements in the tomb of Queen Hatshepsut, B. C. 1600, and instantly referred to by the Greek and Latin authors. Numerical values were attributed to each of the four throws, which, among the Romans, were designated as Supinum, Planum, and Tortuosum, and estimated as three, five, one and six. Among the Persians and at the present day throughout western Asia, the four sides receive the names of the four classes of human society; thus among the Persians, according to Dr. Hyde, they are called "thief," Dibban, "peasant," Vezir and Shah, and so with the Turks, Syrians, Egyptians and other peoples. A pair of natural bones from the right and left leg of the animal are commonly used, which among the Syrians of Damascus are designated respectively as yisr and yemlul, "left and right." The transition from these tab as the Arabs call them, from kab meaning "ankle" or "ankle bone," to the cubical dotted dice was an easy one. The same numerical values and social designations were attributed to the oes in China and Corea; these forming part of the material used in the investigation of the origin of dominoes. Japanese and Siamese dice are also exhibited with the East and Chinese specimens, as well as dice made in various parts of Europe, comprising of iron dice purchased at Perugia; which, although presumably modern, have the pips ranged with the 6-5, 4-2 and 8-1 opposite, like those of old Etruria, instead of the 6-1, 5-2 and 4-3, the spots on opposite sides being equal to seven, as is otherwise general. With these are the spinning dice of various countries, including the East Indian chutree, the ch'eme, and the corresponding dice of Japan and Siam. A variety of dominoes is displayed, including those of Corea, which are identical with those of China, and these dominoes which were borrowed from the latter country.

A pair of knuckle-bones appears to be the parent of that large class of games which Mr. Cushing describes as the "backgammon group." With reference to dice backgammon evidence in this particular is very direct, but as to the similar games played with cowrie and wooden blocks, for which even a greater antiquity may be claimed, there is a likelihood of independent origin. Several games of the latter class from India, North America, Egypt, which have been referred to by Mr. Taylor, are exhibited in this collection. Pachisi, is the most popular game in India. It is played around a board, usually of cloth, in the form of a cross, according to the throws with cowries. Six or seven are ordinarily used and count according as the apertures fall. When long dice are employed, the game is called Chausar. This game was introduced from India to the United States, where it was first published in 1860 under the name of Parchesi, and is now very popular. Mr. Cushing has set up beside the Pachisi a Zuni game which he calls Ta sho li we, or "wooden cane cards," and which has many points of resemblance to the East Indian game. The moves are made according to the throws with wooden blocks three inches in length, painted red and black upon their two faces, around which are 40 stones, which is broken at the top and bottom, and the right and left, by four stones called the "doorways of the four directions." This game embodies many of the old conceptions of the Zunis. It is played by two or four players, who use colored stones to mark their course around the circle. These splints, which are placed at starting points, to which they correspond, have the following symbolism: At the top, Yellow, The Wind, Winter; at the left, Blue, West, Water, Spring; at the bottom, Red, Fire, Summer; at the right, White, East, Seed or Earth, Autumn. The colors of the wooden blocks symbolize the two conditions of man: Red, light or wakefulness; Black, darkness or sleep. The throws with the blocks, which are tossed, ends down, upon a sandstone placed in the middle of the circle, are as follows:

Black and 1 red count 2.

1 and 1 black count 3.

Black count 5.

1 count 10.

A count of three red gives another throw. When four play, the North and West move from right to left, and the South and East from left to right. When a player's stone is at a division of the circle occupied by his adversaries' piece, he takes it up and goes back to the beginning. It is customary to make the circuit of the stones either six times, beans or corn of the seven varieties being used as counters. This game is one of the seven sacred games of the Zunis and its ante-type, Sho li we, or "game of the four games that are sacrifices to the God of War and Fate. The sacred game is called Tsin thla nah na ta sho li we, or literally, "Of all the regions of the four games," and the blocks which are thrown in it bear complicated marks, consisting of color on one side. In the sacred game the players are chosen with great care in reference to their totem, and the region to which it belongs. A much more complete to or "The Tables of the Promotion of Officials," a game which has been known to us through Dr. Hyde's account as "The Game of the Promotion of Mandarins." It is played by two or more persons upon a large paper diagram, upon which are printed the names of the different officials and dignitaries of the Chinese government. The moves are made according to the throws with four cubical dice, and the players, whose positions upon the diagram are indicated by notched or colored splints, are advanced or set back, according to their throws. The paper chart here exhibited was purchased in a Chinese shop in New York City. It was printed in Canton and bears an impression about twenty-three inches square. This is divided into sixty-three compartments, exclusive of the central one reserved for entering at the lower right-hand corner. The latter contains the names of fifteen different starting points, from yan shang, or "honorary licentiate" down to shang, or "student," between which are included the positions of lin man shang "astrologer," and i shang, "physician." These are entered at the commencement of the game by the throws of "three, four, five, six;" three "fours;" three "sixes;" three "fives;" three "threes;" three "twos," and three "ones;" and then in the same manner, double "ones," and so on down to double "ones."

The sixty-three compartments, representing as many classes of officials or degrees of rank, comprise three hundred and ninety-seven separate titles, of which the highest, and the highest goal of the game, is that of man fa tin tai hok sz or "grand secretary." This, however, under favorable conditions, can only be reached by a player who starts from the lowest point, advancement in the game being regulated by rules similar to those which actually regulate promotion under government. Thus, a player whose fortune it is to enter as physician or astrologer can only obtain promotion in the line of his service, and must be content with a minor goal, as he is ineligible to the high civil office of grand secretary."

The dice are thrown into a bowl placed in the center of the sheet, the players taking in turn, and each continuing to throw until he makes a cast of doublets or fours. It is noticeable that "fours," as in Dr. Hyde's account, constitute the highest rank. A pair of "fours," according to the rules, is to be reckoned as tak, "virtue," and to a higher place than those of the other numbers. "Sixes" are next higher and are reckoned as ts' oi, "genius," and in the same manner, in descending degree, fives are reckoned as kung, "skill;" "threes" as lung, "forethought;" twos as yau, "tractation;" and "ones," chong, "stupidity." The game is much complicated by being played with money or counters, which is necessary under the rules. By this means advancement is purchased, degradation compounded for, and the winner of a high position rewarded.

The main point of difference between the game as it exists to-day, and as described by Dr. Hyde, is the number of dice employed, six being the number mentioned by him. The enlarged form of the diagram is of minor importance, as he himself says that the names of officials written on the tablet are many or few, according to the pleasure of the players. With the game of Shing kun to may be seen a copy of Dr. Hyde's treatise, De Orientalibus, containing the reproduction of the chart of the game which he made in 1800, 200 years ago. The names of titles of the Ming dynasty appear upon it, in curious contrast to those of the present Tartar domination. The two hundredth anniversary of the printing of the imprimatur of this precious volume occurs on the 20th of September of this year.

There is a very great variety of games of this character in Japan, new ones being published annually at the season of the new year. Illustrations of the more formal game are found upon a board divided into twelve parts are figured in the Chinese-Japanese Cyclopaedia. light by Mr. Wilkinson, it may be profitable to suspend further consideration of the matter until the results of his studies are made public. Italy appears to be the oldest home of the playing card in Europe, and the earliest Italian packs are said to be those of the Italians call Tarocchi. Several types of these cards are found in Italy. According to Welshire these games are known as the Tarots of Venice or Lombardy, the Tarocchi of Bologna and the Minchiate of Florence. The first of these, the old Venetian one, he regards as the parent of all. The sequence consists of 78 cards, i. e., of 22 emblematic cards or Tarots proper and 56 numeral cards made up of 16 figures or court cards, and 40 pip cards. The 22 Tarot cards bear emblematic designs which appear to be borrowed from a series of prints which are known to collectors as the Tarocchi of Mantegna or Carte di Baldini. The emblematic cards in the Venetian series usually bear the following names:

1. La Bagatella.
2. La Papessa.
3. L'Imperatrice.
4. L'Imperatore.
5. Il Papa.
6. Gli Amanti.

19. Il Sole.
20. Il Gindizo.
21. Il Mondo.
22. Il Matto.

No name is placed upon the 13th, which usually bears a skeleton with a scythe, representing "death."

The second game, the Tarocchino, of Bologna, through a direct descendent of the old Venetian tarots, is not so old as the third game, or Minchiate of Florence. The characteristic of the Tarocchino, its name a diminutive of tarocchi, is the suppression of the 2, 3, 4 and 5 of each numeral suit, thus reducing the numeral cards from 56 to 28.

This modification of the tarots game was invented in Bologna, early in the fifteenth century by Francesco Fibbia, Prince of Pisa, an exile in that city, dying there in 1419.

The third game is the Minchiate of Florence. It is more complicated than the Venetian game, twenty additional cards being added to the emblematic series. A pack of modern Venetian tarots made, in Milan, which are remarkable for their beautifully engraved painted designs; a pack of modern Tarocchino from Bologna, and a pack of seventeenth century Minchiate, are displayed in the south side of this case. All of these cards are in use in different parts of Italy.

The suit marks in Italian cards consist of money, cups, swords and clubs, called ri, copper, spade and bastone. The four court cards of the numeral suits are known Willshire has pointed out that the Italians early suppressed the emblematic cards in a game termed Trappolla, in which the true tarots were abolished as likewise the three, four, five and six of each numeral suit. This game, he states, was still in vogue in Silesia when Breilkopf wrote (1784). An interesting Austrian pack of this character is shown under the name of Trapollier spiel in which the shape as well as the suit marks of the Italian tarots are displayed.

The German cards manufactured in Germany are prefaced by a series of reprints of German cards of the last century exhibited by Mr. Macauley. They were obtained by him through the courtesy of the Bavarian National Museum in Munich, for which they were made from the original blocks of the old Munich card makers which have been conserved in the museum.

German cards (continued,; Swiss, Danish, Swedish and Russian cards; Spanish, Mexican and Apache cards. The collection of cards made in Germany comprises 58 packs, consisting chiefly of the current cards manufactured by card makers in Munich, Altenburg, Frankfurt A.-M., Berlin, Leipsig and Breslau. Among these is an extremely beautiful pack by B. Dondorf of Frankfurt with pictures suggesting the four quarters of the globe after designs by Haussmann. Toy cards, patience cards, comic cards, trick cards and cards which are labeled "Gaigel cards" appear, as well as cards made for special games, as the Hexen of "Witch" packs. Many of the cards manufactured in Germany are seen to bear the French suit marks of cœurs, carreaux, piques and trefles, or "hearts," "diamonds," "spades" and "clubs," instead of the old German suit marks, and the Court cards correspond at the same time with those of France and England. There is a number of packs with the French suit marks, which bear pictures of Swiss scenery and costumes. The cards made in Switzerland are from Schaffhouse and Geneva, and comprise a variety of designs including those which are especially designated as Swiss, German cards and German packs. Belgium is represented by a German tarot pack, and imitations of English cards which are made for oriental markets. Three packs of this character are shown, which were sent from Johore in the Malay Peninsula to the Exposition, with another pack from Beirut in Syria. The Russian cards in the collection contributed by Madam Semetchkin, the representative on the Russian Commission of the "Institutions of the Empress Marie," are similar to the modern French cards. The manufacture of playing cards in Russia is a monopoly of the state, and the revenues accruing to are devoted to the support of the great charitable institution of which Madam Semetchkin is the distinguished representative.

Tarots or Tarocchi cards are not used in Spain, nor are they found among Spanish cards. The regulation Spanish pack now consists of forty-eight cards of four suits, called, respectively, Dineros, "money;" Copas, "cups;" Bastos, "clubs," and Espadas, "swords." The numerals run from one to nine, the ten being replaced with the Caballo, the comprising the Sota or "knave," the Caballo, or "knight," and the "Rey" or "king." Cards manufactured at Vitoria, Burgos, Madrid, Barcelona, Valencia, Cadiz and Palamos are displayed. Great antiquity has been claimed for cards in Spain and it is urged that this is the country through which Europe received cards from the East, but heretofore, no Spanish cards of assured date earlier than 1600 have been known, and material evidence has been lacking. There was exhibited at the Columbian Historical Exposition, in Madrid in 1892-1893, a sheet of cards made in Mexico in 1583, which has been preserved in the Archives of the Indies at Seville, Spain, and which throw light upon the origin of Spanish cards. A copy made in water colors by an artist in Madrid is shown in this collection. It consists of an uncut sheet of about 11x17 inches, and bears on the back a pen and ink inscription with the date, 1583. The face displays an impression from a wooden block of 24 cards each 2x3½ inches. They are colored in red, blue and black, and represent the court cards and aces of the suits of money, cups, clubs and swords, and ten numeral or pip cards of the suit of swords. There are but three court cards for each suit, instead of four as in the present Spanish pack. The marks of the numeral suit consist of crossed swms, instead of being arranged as on the Spanish cards now current, and strongly point to the Italian affinities of early Spanish cards.

Side by side with this early Mexican pack is a colored plate representing leather cards made by the Indians of South America, and an original pack of leather cards used by the Apaches. From the arrangement of the swords on both of these sets, which were copied from cards introduced by the Spaniards, it appears that they were imitated from the present type of Spanish cards. Such is not the case with the corresponding marks on a pack of native cards from the Celebes, which are also exhibited. Their Spanish origin is clearly indicated by their number, 48, and by the devices, which still bear a faint resemblance to those of Europe, but the clubs and swords on both are indicated by cross lines, which confirm the impression created by the Mexican pack. The Japanese "Hana Karuta," or "Flower Cards" are also shown here; as another pack of oriental cards derived from those of Spain or Portugal. Their number, 48, and their name, Karuta, from the Portuguese, carta, clearly suggests their origin.

CASE XII.

French, English and American playing cards; Fortune-Telling cards; Dr. Busby; Authors, and miscellaneous card games. Tarocchi cards are called tarots in France, and the French tarot pack is similar to the Venetian. The earliest specimens of French tarots exhibited bear the name of Claude Burdel and the date, 1751. There is direct historic proof that France possessed cards at a very early time in the accounts of the treasurer of Charles VI., A. D. 1392. The earliest pack of French cards in this collection is one of which I have not been able to determine the date. It bears the name Pierre Montalan on the knave of spades and Claude Valentin on the knave of clubs. A variety of modern French packs are shown, including those made with Spanish suit marks and special cards for various games. The French suit marks, with which all are familiar, reappear on English cards, and according to Willshire it is most probable that cards made their way into England through France. He states that the time is not known, but that we are safe in believing that cards were not in use in England until after the reign of Henry IV (1405), and that they were certainly employed before 1463. The English cards here displayed consist entirely of those of the present day, but this deficiency in historical packs is compensated for in greater part by Lady Schreiber's great folio volume on English and Scottish, Dutch and Flemish cards which she has loaned for this collection. This great work, of which this is but the first volume, contains fac-similes of the cards in Lady Charlotte Schreiber's private collection and reveals the wealth of his-tical suggestions to be found upon playing cards, and their value, as thus collected, to the antiquary and historian.

America early received playing cards from Spain, and Spanish cards are made and imported into Spanish-American countries. In the United States English cards were naturally adopted. No very early packs are shown, but some interesting cards are found in the North American series, including a variety of cards with patriotic emblems made at the time of the rebellion, as well as the caricature cards of the recent political campaigns. The collection closes with the souvenir packs of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. Mrs. J. K. Van Rensselaer's work, entitled The Devil's Picture Book, a copy of which is exhibited, contains many interesting particulars concerning cards and card playing in America. Several interesting card boxes are shown in this collection, including a collection of the old-fashioned "fish" or card counters of mother of pearl, among which are some that belonged to Robert Morris, the financier of the Revolution. Treatises on American card games, exhibited by Messrs. Dick & Fitzgerald, conclude the series of playing cards proper.

Among the notions concerning the origin of cards in Europe is one that they were first introduced by the gypsies who used them in fortune-telling. It appears that they were early used for divinatory purposes in Europe, but according to Willshire, their employment in fortune-telling gradually declined among the upper classes until the middle of the eighteenth century, "though it was prevalent, no doubt, among the lower grades of society frequenting fairs and the caravans of mountebanks. About 1750, divination through cards again became popular in Paris, at least, for in 1751, 1752 and 1753 three persons were publicly known as offering their services for this intention." According to certain writers, the emblematic figures of the tarot cards are of very remote origin, stretching back as far as the ancient Egyptians, from whom they have descended to us as a book or series of subjects of deep symbolic meaning. "The discovery and explication of the meaning of the tarots employed in modern times was claimed by M. Count de Goebelin in 1781, who, in his Monde Primitif analyse et compare avec le Monde Moderne, gave a dissertation on the game of Tarots, in which he states that the tarot pack is evidently based on the sacred Egyptian number seven, and reviews the tarot emblems in detail.

The probable origin of the 21 tarot cards has already been suggested in connection with Chinese cards, and it is not surprising that the astrological notions associated with Tarots should find parallels in the speculations of the Kabbalists, who attached similar notions to the dice throws as are now found associated with them in China, from whence the 21 Tarot cards doubtless came to Europe. An explanation is therefore found for some of the resemblances upon which M. de Goebelin lays such stress. His fancies, however, never subjected to very severe examination or criticism, were seized upon by a perruquier of Paris of the name of Alliette, who combined with his ordinary occupation the practice of artomancy. He read the dissertation of Count de Goebelin, and thereby enlightened, changed the letters of his name and prophesied under the name of Ettilia. His writings furnish the basis of most of the treatises now extant upon the subject of fortune-telling with cards, and his name is found associated with several of the modern French tarot packs published especially for fortune-telling, in the present collection. During the exciting periods of the first consulship of Napoleon I, there lived, according to Mr. Willshire, a well known divineress named Madam Lenormand, whose predictions gained great repute. Her name, with that of Ettilia, appears on the French cards here exhibited, as well as on those made in America. Several French and German fortune-telling packs of an amusing character are to be found in the present collection, as well as others published in the United States, which are designed solely for purposes of amusement.

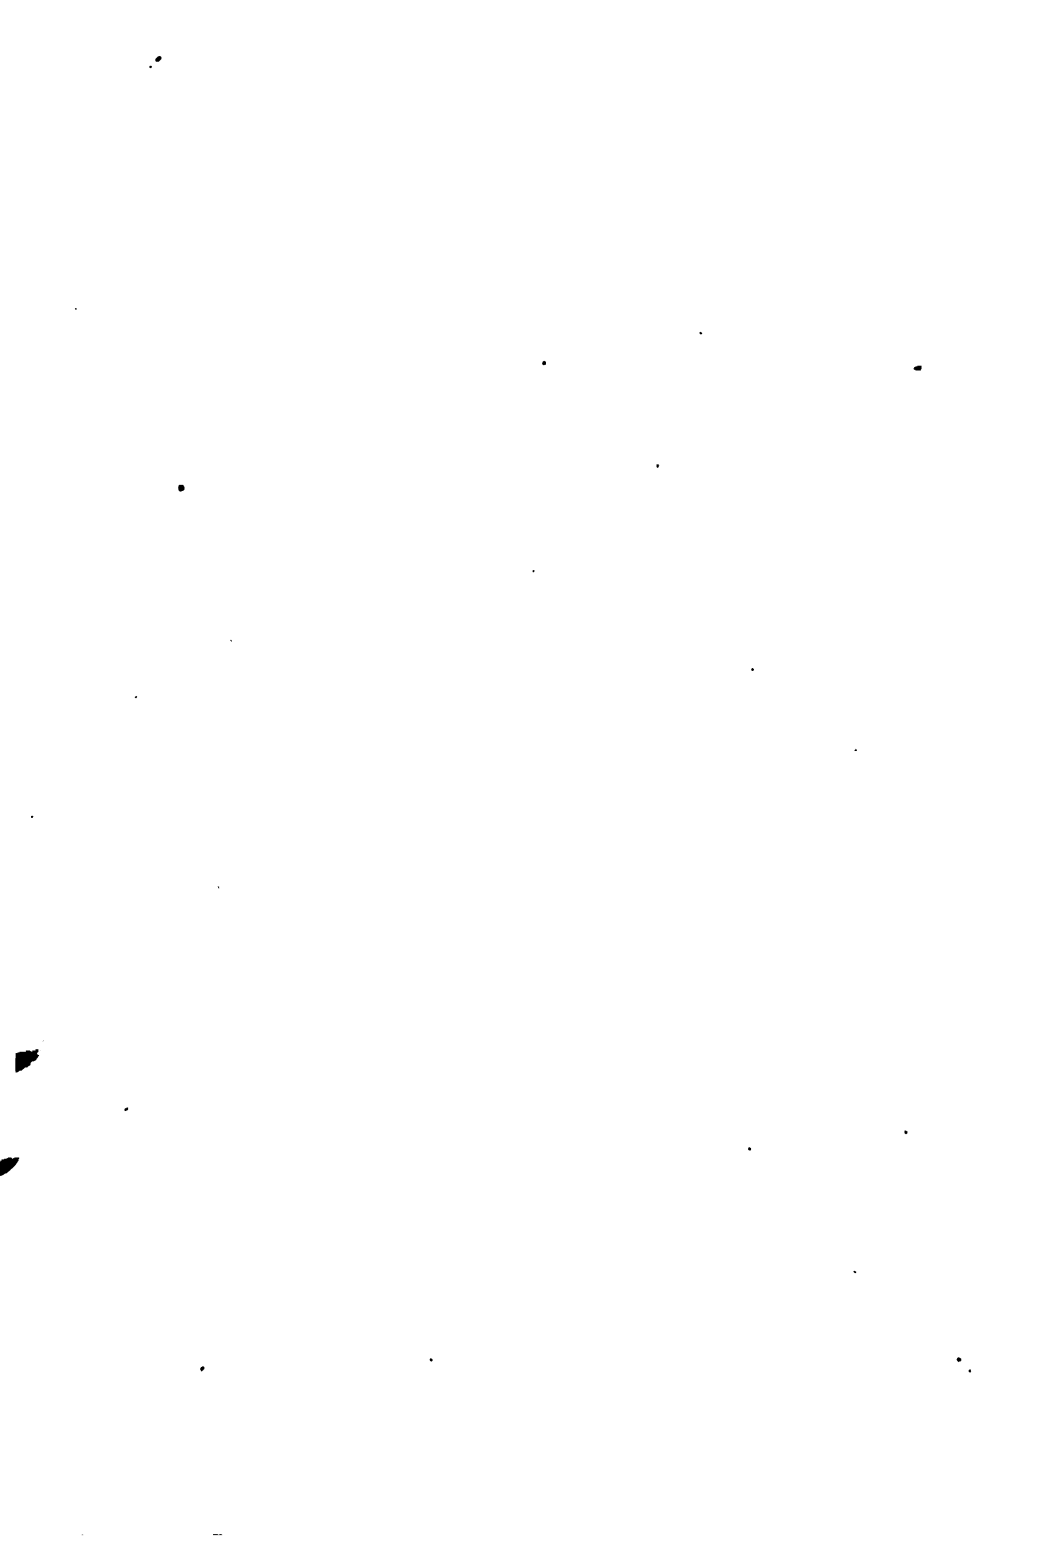

The entire northern side of this case is devoted to the card games other than regular playing cards, which owe their existence to the prejudice against cards or to the demand for simple and instructive amusements for children and young people. Mr. Milton Bradley has contributed some interesting notes on the history of such games in this country. In 1843 Mrs. Annie W. Abbott, a clergyman's daughter, of Beverly, Mass., offered to Mr. Ives, a publisher of Salem, Mass., a card game which she called "Dr. Buzby." This game, which was the first of its kind, was reluctantly published by Mr. Ives and met with an astonishing success, no less than 50,000 copies being sold in the following year. It will be remembered by many of the parents of the present day as among the earliest games ever learned and possibly played upon the sly through fear of reprimand. A pack of the original "Dr. Buzby" cards will be found at the beginning of this collection. The game of "Authors" was originated by a young man living in Salem, helped by some of his female acquaintances. The method of play was copied from "Dr. Buzby," but it contained an element of instruction and profit not found in the older game. He took it to a local publisher to see if he could have ten or a dozen packs printed, as it was too much work for him to print them. Mr. Smith, the publisher, saw the possibilities of the game and told him if he would let him make them he would supply his needs gratis, to which he consented. This was in 1861 and the sale of this game has since been wonderful. Many modifications and improvements of the original game are shown in the collection.

Soon after the publication of "Dr. Buzby," a teacher in a young ladies' school in Salem, devised a game of letters which has since become popular under the various names of "Spelling Puzzle," "Word Making and Word Taking," "War of Words," "Anagrams," "Logomachy," "Words and Sentences," etc. The publications of the Milton-Bradley Company, McLaughlin Bros. and E. I. Horsman are here exhibited, and no less than 78 different card games are displayed. They are classified in groups according to the methods of play, which, in spite of the ingenuity displayed in the designs of the cards, are relatively very limited in number, the ideas in the main being derived from games already played with regular playing cards.

FORESTRY BUILDING.

The Forestry Building is in appearance the most unique of all the Exposition structures. Its dimensions are 200x300 feet. To a remarkable degree its architecture is of the bower. On all four sides of the building is a veranda, supporting the roof of which is a colonnade consisting of a series of columns composed of three tree-trunks, each 25 feet in length, some of them from 16 to 20 inches in diameter and the others smaller. These trunks are left in their natural state, with bark undisturbed. They are contributed by the different States and Territories of the Union and by foreign countries, each showing specimens of its most characteristic trees. The sides of the building are covered with the bark removed. The main entrances are elaborately finished in different kinds of wood, the material and workmanship being contributed by several prominent lumber associations. The roof is thatched with tan and other barks. The visitor can make no mistake as to the kinds of tree-trunks which form the colonnade, for he will see upon each a tablet upon which is inscribed the common and scientific name, the State or country from which the trunk was contributed. The plan of installation in the Forestry Building is the same as that in the Agricultural Building.

How to Find Exhibitors and Their Exhibits.

The list of exhibitors from the United States will be found in the first portion of this catalogue, the foreign countries with their exhibits installed in Forestry Building following alphabetical order. Each country has its exhibits numbered consecutively, and as far as practicable each exhibit has a card attached to it bearing the name of the country and the words "Official Catalogue Number," and that number corresponds with the number in this Catalogue. For example, if a card is found with the following matter thereon:

Department N. Forestry.
DEPARTMENT N.
 Official Catalogue No. 21

The visitor will turn to 21 in the United States portion of the Catalogue where will be seen the following entry:

21. United Indurated Fibre Co., Chicago.
 Pails, washtubs, measures, basins, vases, etc. C-10 110

It may be that the visitor's attention is first directed to the Catalogue and he may be desirous of finding this exhibit. The first thing he should do is to see what the location is. That being C-10 he will refer to the diagram on the opposite page, which shows that the floor of the Forestry Building is laid off into four divisions lettered A, B, C and D. Each of these divisions contains sections numbered from 1 to 15. In the southeast quarter is A, the southwest quarter C, in the northeast quarter B, and in the northwest quarter D. The plan of installation is exceedingly simple, and it will be readily seen that the exhibit the United Indurated Fibre Co. is located in the southwest quarter in close proximity to section C-10.

The class number 110 serves many purposes and one especially. A visitor, for instance, would like to see all the exhibits of pails, washtubs, etc., in the Forestry Building. He immediately turns to the classification grouping, where he will read in class 110 the following: Paper and woodenware generally, as pails, tubs, platters, brooms, coopers' stock. He then refers to the list of exhibitors and by glancing down the right hand side for 110 sees all exhibitors alphabetically arranged who are exhibiting pails, tubs and other articles enumerated in that class.

This rule applies to every exhibit in the Forestry Building, whatever its character may be, and by following the above plan the visitor will experience no difficulty in locating the exhibitor or his exhibit.

No attention should be paid to any numbers which may be affixed to exhibits, except as appearing on cards in the form given above.

CLASSIFICATION

1. The term "classification" is used in many different ways. It may refer to the classification of objects, or to the classification of ideas, or to the classification of actions. In this paper, we will be concerned with the classification of objects.
2. The classification of objects is a very important part of many sciences. It is the basis of many of our most important theories, and it is the foundation of many of our most important practical applications.
3. The classification of objects is a very difficult task. It is a task that requires a great deal of knowledge and skill. It is a task that is often overlooked, but it is one that is essential to the success of many of our most important endeavors.

CHICAGO:
W. B. CONKEY COMPANY, PUBLISHERS
TO THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION, 1893.

Dressing room, State Commissioners' room (decorated by Japan), California, Cincinnati and Kentucky rooms, the Superintendent's room, and another Dressing room. The furniture and decorations of the State rooms are contributions from the women of such states. With very few exceptions, all entertainments given in the building are open to the public, and no fee is charged under any circumstances.

The Woman's Building was designed by a woman, and its decorations and all exhibits displayed within its walls are the work of women.

HOW TO CONSULT THE CATALOGUE.

The list of exhibits from the United States, in all departments, occupies the first portion of the catalogue. This is followed by several special exhibits, and after them all foreign countries represented, the latter being arranged in alphabetical order. The list of each country or special exhibit is numbered consecutively throughout all departments. As far as practicable there will be attached to each exhibit in the building a card bearing the name of the country or special organization contributing it, and the words "Official Catalogue No." followed by a number corresponding to a similar one, under the same heading, in the catalogue. For example, if a card reads:

WOMAN'S BUILDING
GREAT BRITAIN
Official Catalogue No. 40

By turning to that number in the catalogue, under the heading of Great Britain, it will be found that the exhibit is a sketch, made by the Queen of England, of a pug dog. On the other hand, should the visitor's attention be directed to this entry in the catalogue and wish to find the exhibit, he will notice that while most of the articles from Great Britain are in the north wing, between A-1 and F-1, this special exhibit is located in the northeast gallery.

To find the exhibit of any particular person without consulting the general index, which of course is the simplest method, one must know the character of the article exhibited, and then run through the group headings in the classification in the front of the catalogue until the group in which such an exhibit should be classed is found, when, by referring to that group under the proper country heading, all exhibitors of that article will be found alphabetically arranged. The figures at the extreme right of the columns indicate the class subdivision to which exhibits belong.

No attention should be paid to any numbers which may be affixed to exhibits except those appearing on cards in the form given above.

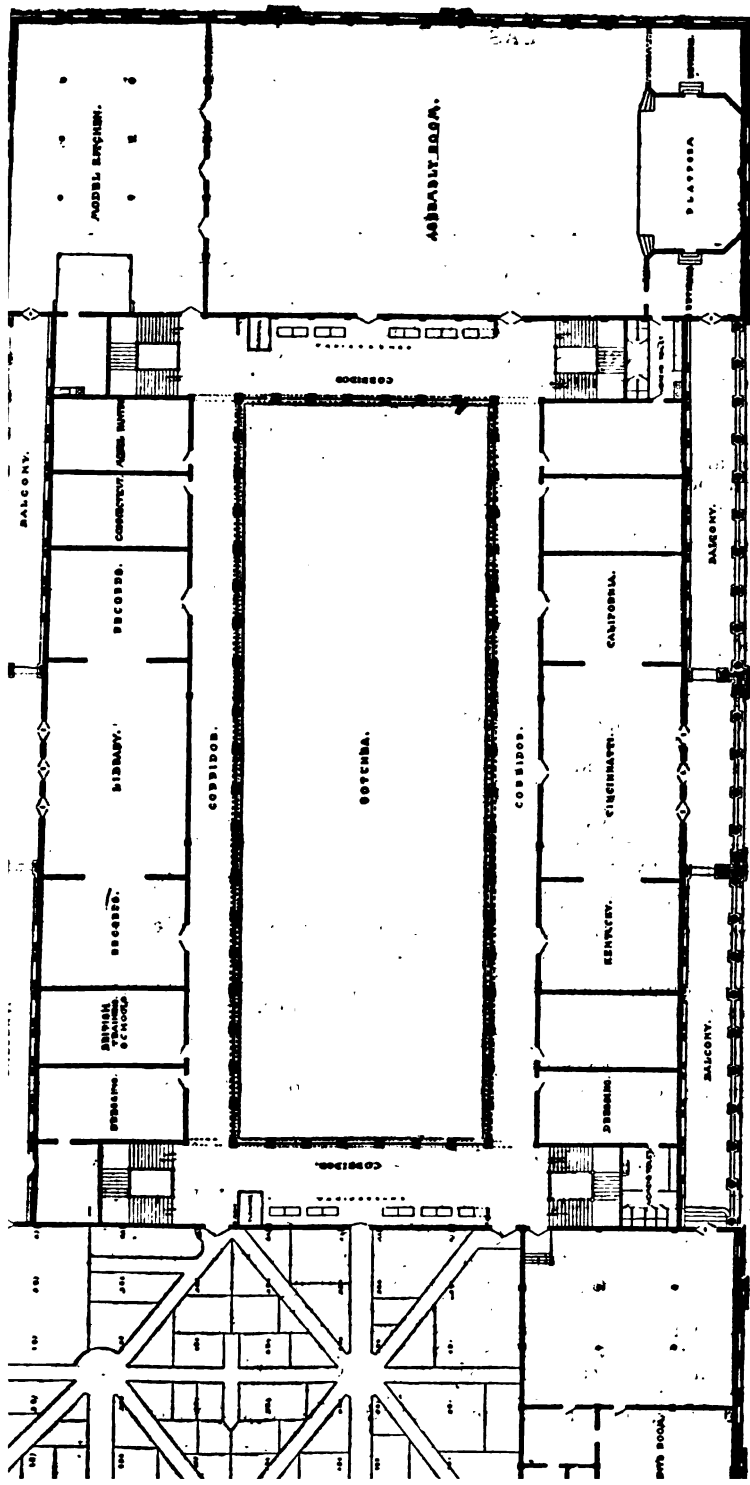

The abbreviations used in this catalogue are as follows:

As.—Assembly.	Ex.—Exhibit.	Rec.—Record.
C.—Centre.	Gal.—Gallery.	Rot.—Rotunda.

Keppel Collection of Engravings, Etchings, Etc.

LOCATION—West Gallery, Sections A to C.

The aim of the present exhibition is to show, so far as space permits, what has been done by women engravers during the last three centuries. It has been gathered together with much care and owes its interest largely to the kindness of several collectors of Europe and America and, in the case of modern work, to the hearty co-operation of the artists themselves.

Owing to the limitations of space it has been found impossible, even were it desirable, to represent all who have of late years, worked with the etching needle, but sufficient is shown to exemplify the schools of France, England and America at their best.

Until comparatively recent years a woman engraver was the exception and though we find scattered through the three hundred years that have elapsed since the birth of the art, a fair number of women who have distinguished themselves in engraving, they are here rather through the force of their own individuality than from any general tendency toward a recognition of the equality of the sexes.

Doubtless strong opposition was at first to be overcome, but prejudice has lessened year by year until now the pictures by women are admitted to our public exhibitions on exactly the same basis as those executed by men, solely on their merits.

It is on this footing that the present exhibition should be judged.

In America not only have women established their right to an equal hearing with their male co-workers in the graphic arts, but in etching they can lay claim to at least three whose rank is of the highest, while in the field of wood engraving such good work has been done that it seems impossible for technical excellence to surpass it.

Exhibit No.	Class'n No.
Ghisi, Diana, Italy, 1535. Born in Mantua. Her plates date from 1581-1588. Engraved chiefly after Raphael, Tuccari and Giulio Romano. Her father and brother were also engravers. The Woman Accused Before Christ. (Line engraving after Giulio Romano. First State.)

 85. Old South Church. (Original etching.)
 86. The Road to the Beach. (Original etching.)
 "Another attractive work is 'The Road to the Beach,' at Nonquit, Massachusetts, which was exhibited at the Paris Salon. It is very simple in theme—merely a stretch of low coast land with a few scattered shrubs and a wide road stretching away toward the slightly-lifted horizon line. But a great deal has been told for this simplicity. The very spirit of such a scene is caught and given. Even without the title we should know that there was salt in the air and the sea at the end of the road." (Mrs. Schuyler van Rensselaer.)

 96. Long Beach, York Harbor. (Original etching.)
 97. The Road to the Farm. (Original etching.)
Moran, Mrs. Mary Nimmo, New York.
 "Mrs. Thomas Moran is as yet the only woman who is a member of the New York Etching Club, and no name stands higher on its roll. Her work would never reveal her sex. It is, above all things, direct, emphatic, bold—exceeding in these qualities, perhaps, that of any of her male co-workers."—The Century Magazine.
 "The Goose Pond" was the etching which procured Mrs. Moran's election to membership in the London Royal Society of Painter-Etchers.

LEATHER AND SHOE TRADES BUILDING.

It became evident to a number of prominent men identified with the Leather and Shoe Trades industries of the United States, that a Leather Exhibit Building, in which to display their manufactures at the World's Columbian Exposition, was a necessity; more particularly when it became known that such excessive demands had been made for exhibition space upon the Departments of Manufactures and Liberal Arts. Seeing the necessity of securing much more space than could possibly be allotted to them in the Manufactures and Liberal Arts Building, an organization called the Leather and Shoe Trades Association was formed to raise a fund to carry out a plan to exhibit the products of the leather and accessory trades in their own building. Through this Association, consisting of over two hundred names, a fund to the amount of $110,000 was raised. The Executive Committee of this Association, the men to whom the chief credit the building is due, is as follows: H. J. Macfarland, chairman, Chicago; J. W. Oakley, Chicago; J. E. Mooney, Cincinnati; E. S. Converse, Boston; J. W. Brooks, Boston; J. R. Benson, Boston; W. B. Rice, Boston; A. G. Webster, secretary, Boston.

This building (575 feet long by 150 feet wide) was commenced December 5, 1892, and completed and ready for the reception of exhibits on April 1, 1893. It contains all domestic exhibits of leather, boots and shoes, rubber boots and shoe and of the allied trades, also the exhibit of leather in all forms, from all the foreign countries at the World's Columbian Exposition.

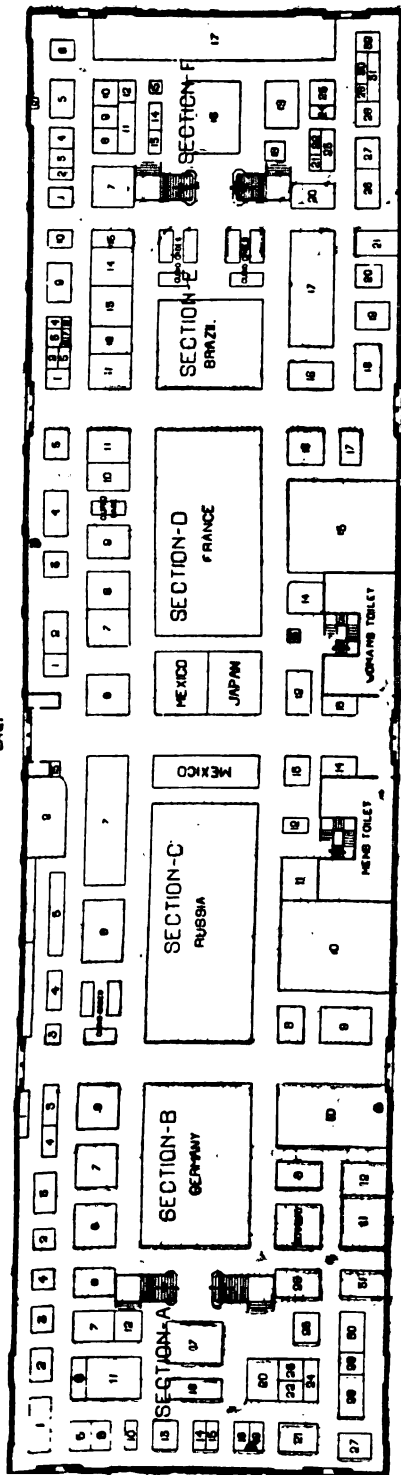

Fine exhibits have been prepared by the following countries: France, Germany, Russia, Uruguay, Japan, Mexico, Brazil.

There are also shown here leather curios from the different countries of the earth; also native foot gear, clothing, harness, saddles and such articles from museums and private collections as have been made famous by age or association.

Also it is expected that the manufacturing exhibit, located on the second or gallery floor of this building, will manufacture fully one thousand pairs of shoes daily, when in operation. The entire second floor will be devoted to machinery, which will include manufacturing exhibit and shoe and leather working machinery, as well as "Dead Exts" made by the representative manufacturers of shoe machinery throughout the United States.

KEY TO INSTALLATION.

For the purpose of the installation of exhibits the Leather and Shoes Trades Building is divided into sections, lettered from A to F on the first floor, and from A to K on the second floor. Each section is numbered from 1 up, according to the number of the exhibits, each exhibit space being given one number. The foreign countries occupy the central portion of the building, and their location is fully shown on accompanying diagrams.

How to Find Exhibitors and Their Exhibits.

The list of exhibitors from the United States will be found in the first portion of this catalogue, the foreign countries with their exhibits installed in the Leather and Shoe Trades Building following in alphabetical order. Each country has its exhibits numbered consecutively, and as far as practicable each exhibit has a card attached to it bearing the name of the country and the words "Official Catalogue Number," and that number corresponds with the number in this Catalogue. For example, if a card is found with the following matter thereon:

Department H.                      Leather and Shoe Trades.

United States.

Official Catalogue Number 118

the visitor will turn to 118 in the United States portion of the Catalogue where will be found the following entry:

118. Mooney, W. W. & Sons, Columbus, Ind.

Harness and saddlery leather. B-11    697

It may be that the visitor's attention is first directed to the Catalogue and he may be desirous of finding this exhibit. The first thing he should do is to see what the location is. That being B-11 he will refer to the Key to Installation, which states that the Leather and Shoe Trades Building is divided into sections, lettered from A to F on the first floor, and from A to K on the second floor. On looking at the diagrams it will be seen that each section is numbered from 1 up, according to the number of exhibit spaces which the section contains. The exhibit, therefore, of W. W. Mooney & Sons will be found in Section B, and in the exhibit space numbered 11.

The class number 697 serves many purposes, and one especially. A visitor, for instance, would like to see all the exhibits of harness and saddlery leather in the Leather and Shoe Trades Building. He immediately turns to the classification grouping, where he will read in group 111, class 697, the following: Tanned leathers—belting, grain and harness leather, sole leather—calf and goat skins, sheep skins. He immediately turns to the list of exhibitors under group 111, and by glancing down the right hand side for 697 finds all exhibitors alphabetically arranged who are exhibiting harness and saddlery leather and other articles enumerated in that class.

This rule applies to every exhibit in the Leather and Shoe Trades Building, whatever its character may be, and by following the above plan the visitor will experience no difficulty in locating the exhibitor or his exhibit.

No attention should be paid to any numbers which may be affixed to exhibits except those appearing on cards in the form given above.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING.

THIS structure is 420 feet long by 350 feet in width, its main floor covering an area of 157,500 square feet. Its galleries have an area of 33,500 square feet additional, making a total of 191,000 square feet of floor space. Of this area about 175,500 square feet are devoted to exhibit purposes and circulation and 16,500 square feet to offices and corridors.

The building was designed by the supervising architect of the treasury, and erected under his supervision. It is of "modern renaissance" architecture, the main feature being a central dome 120 feet in diameter, and 275 feet from the ground to the top of the flag pole. This dome is constructed of steel, and is supported on sixteen columns. The entire cost of the main building was $325,000, or $2.07 per square foot of its floor area, or three cents per foot of its cubic space.

The limit of cost for the Government Buildings at the World's Columbian Exposition was fixed by law at $400,000. From the balance of the appropriation not consumed in the erection of the main building four auxiliary structures have been erected, specially adapted to the exhibits of the United States Naval Observatory, the United States Army Medical Department, and for the Weather and Indian Bureaus respectively.

The sections governing the matter are as follows :

SECTION 16. That there shall be exhibited at said exposition by the Government of the United States, from its Executive Departments, the Smithsonian Institution, the United States Fish Commission and the National Museum, such articles and materials as illustrate the function and administrative faculty of the Government in time of peace, and its resources as a war power, tending to demonstrate the nature of our institutions and their adaptation to the wants of the people; and to secure a complete and harmonious arrangement of such a Government exhibit, a board shall be created to be charged with the selection, preparation, arrangement, safe-keeping, and exhibition of such articles and materials as the heads of the several Departments, and the directors of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum may respectively decide shall be embraced in said Government exhibit. The President may also designate additional articles for exhibition. Such board shall be composed of one person to be named by the head of each Executive Department, and one by the directors of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, and one by the Fish Commission, such selections to be approved by the President of the United States. The President shall name the chairman of said board, and the board itself shall select such other officers as it may deem necessary.

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to place on exhibition, upon such grounds as shall be allotted for the purpose, one of the life-saving stations authorized to be constructed on the coast of the United States by existing law, and to cause the same to be fully equipped with all apparatus, furniture and appliances now in use in all life-saving stations in the United States, said building and apparatus to be removed at the close of the exhibition and re-erected at the place now authorized by law.

SEC. 17. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause a suitable building or buildings to be erected on the site selected for the World's Columbian Exposition for the government exhibits, as provided in this act, and he is hereby authorized and directed to contract therefor, in the same manner and under the same regulations as for other public buildings of the United States; but the contracts for said building or buildings shall not exceed the sum of four hundred thousand dollars, and for the remainder of the fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, there is hereby appropriated for said building or buildings, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of one hundred thousand dollars. The Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the said building or buildings to be constructed, as far as possible, of iron, steel and glass, or of such other material as may be taken out and sold to the best advantage; and he is authorized and required to dispose of such building or buildings, or the material composing the same, at the close of the exposition, giving preference to the city of Chicago, or to the said World's Exposition of eighteen hundred and ninety-two, to purchase the same at an appraised value, to be ascertained in such manner as he may determine.

SEC. 18. That for the purpose of paying the expenses of transportation, care and custody of exhibits by the government and the maintenance of the buildings or buildings hereinbefore provided for, and the safe return of articles belonging to the said government exhibit, and for the expenses of the commission created by this act, and other contingent expenses, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, upon itemized accounts and vouchers, there is hereby appropriated for the remainder of this fiscal year and for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of two hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, That the United States shall not be liable, on account of the erection of buildings, expenses of the commission or any of its officers or employes, or on account of any expenses incident to or growing out of said exposition for a sum exceeding in the aggregate one million five hundred thousand dollars.

In compliance with the provisions embodied in Section 16 above quoted, the President, by executive order of August 19, 1890, appointed a "Board of Control and Management of the Government Exhibit at the World's Columbian Exhibition," composed as follows:

Sevellon A. Brown, Chief Clerk, Department of State.
A. B. Nettleton, Assistant Secretary, Treasury Department.
Major Clifton Comly, United States Army, War Department.
Captain R. W. Meade, United States Navy, Navy Department.

A. D. Hazen, Third Assistant Postmaster General, Postoffice Department,
H. A. Taylor, Commissioner of Railroads, Department of the Interior,
E. C. Foster, General Agent, Department of Justice.
Edwin Willits, Assistant Secretary, Department of Agriculture.
G. Brown Goode, Assistant Secretary, Smithsonian Institution and National Museum.
J. W. Collins, Assistant, United States Fish Commission:

And further the President, by the same order, designated Honorable Edwin Willits to be the Chairman of said Board. This Board held its first regular meeting on the 3d of September, 1890, and completed its organization by the election of Mr. F. T. Bickford as Secretary.

A study of the law, with a view to the development of the powers conferred, and duties and limitations imposed upon the Board, disclosed many features which were susceptible of more than one interpretation; and recourse was had to the law officers of the Treasury for guidance.

Under the provision of Section 18, which subjects the "itemized accounts and vouchers" to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, jurisdiction in detail over the affairs of the Board was assumed by officials of that department, and their rulings have formed, of necessity, the dominant standard of judgment. By virtue of an early ruling based upon the provision of Section 16, which empowers the heads of the Executive Departments, and the directors of the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, and of the United States Fish Commission, to designate the articles which should compose the contributions of their respective branches, the initiative in respect to each article exhibited was vested in the heads of the branches, while the power of final approval being retained in the Treasury, the Board of Management served as an intermediary between the two authorities.

The exhibit of the government, prepared in accordance with the terms of the law, consists of "articles and materials," illustrative of the functions of the government; and while no branch of the government has been excluded by any authoritative act, yet in consideration of the limitations of space and money, reference has been given to those branches whose functions were found to be most susceptible of illustration by "articles and materials," as distinguished from those whose jurisdiction covered facts, processes, and, in general terms, information. Thus, it is that many of the sub-branches of the government, as for example, the accounting, auditing, law, diplomatic, financial and statistical offices are represented by small exhibits, or by none at all; these having an advantage over their fellows in the fact that their operations are made accessible to the public in annual reports and special bulletins.

The retirement from public life of some of the officials originally designated to comprise the Board of Control and Management has given rise to certain changes; and the board, as it exists at the date hereof, is composed as indicated on the title page of this volume.

19. Maps showing the expansion of the territory of the United States under Treaty Provisions.

1. Territory of the United States in 1789. The Preliminary Treaty of Peace with Great Britain, signed at Paris, November 30, 1782, with a separate article relative to the boundary of the United States, was followed September 3, 1783, by the Definitive Treaty of Peace, Article II of which defined the boundary line. It was signed at Paris by John Adams, Benjamin Franklin and John Jay acting for the United States, and by D. Hartley for Great Britain. This map shows what was considered to be the actual territory of the United States when the Constitution was adopted.
2. Territory of the United States in 1803. On April 30, 1803, was signed at Paris the treaty for the cession of Louisiana to the United States. The plenipotentiaries on the part of the United States being Robert R. Livingston and James Monroe, and the plenipotentiary on the part of France was Barbe Marbois. By a convention concluded the same day the United States agreed to pay sixty million francs for the newly acquired territory.
3. Territory of the United States in 1821. On February 22, 1819, was concluded at Washington a treaty with Spain, by Article II, of which the territory then known as East and West Florida was ceded to the United States. The negotiators of the treaty were John Quincy Adams, Secretary of State, on the part of the United States, and Luis de Onís, plenipotentiary of Spain, on the part of Spain.
4. Territory of the United States in 1845. (Texas annexation.)
5. Territory of the United States in 1848. On February 2, 1848, was concluded the "Treaty of Friendship, Limits and Settlement" between the United States and Mexico, which terminated the war between the two countries, and the fifth article of which defined the boundary line. It was signed at the city of Guadeloupe Hidalgo by N. P. Trist, plenipotentiary on the part of the United States, and by Luis G. Cuevas, Bernardo Couto and Migl. Atristain, plenipotentiaries on the part of Mexico.

6. Territory of the United States in 1853. On December 30, 1853, an additional treaty relative to the boundary with Mexico was concluded at Mexico, being signed by James Gadsden, plenipotentiary on behalf of the United States, and Manuel Diez de Bonilla, Jose Salazar Ylarregui and J. Mariano Monterde, plenipotentiaries on the part of Mexico.
7. Territory of the United States in 1867. On March 30, 1867, was concluded at Washington a convention for the cession of the Russian possessions in North America to the United States for the sum of $7,200,000. The negotiator on the part of the United States was William H. Seward, Secretary of State, and on the part of Russia Edouard de Stoeckl, Russian minister to the United States.

- 654. United States lock, Springfield, model 1873.
- 655. United States lock, Springfield, model 1884; safety notch in tumbler.
- 656. Confederate States percussion lock, Richmond, Va., 1862.
- 657. Sharps' percussion lock, for paper cartridge; C. Sharps' patent, October 5, 1852. Lawrence primer, R. S. Lawrence's patent, April 12, 1859.
- 658. Sharps' lock, for metallic cartridge.
- 659. Joslyn lock, for metallic cartridge; Joslyn Fire Arms Company, Stonington, Conn.
- 660. Joslyn lock, for metallic cartridge; face of hammer differs from No. 659. Joslyn Fire Arms Company, Stonington, Conn.
- 661. English percussion lock, Tower, 1861.
- 662. Spencer lock, for metallic cartridge.
- 663. Starr lock, for metallic cartridge; Starr Arms Company, Yonkers, N. Y.
- 664. Unknown model; trunnions on sear; probably foreign.
- 665. Left hand percussion lock, "J. Bishop" on plate.
- 666. Confederate States percussion lock, 1863. Cook & Brother, Athens, Ga., No. 3,088.
- 667. Confederate States percussion lock, Fayetteville, 1864.
- 668. United States percussion lock. Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Company, Hartford, Conn.
- 669. Confederate States percussion lock.
- 670. Prussian percussion lock; made at Potsdam.
- 671. United States percussion lock; two hammers for single barrel; Lindsay's patent.
- 672. Ancient flint lock of supposed Spanish origin; eighteenth century; presented to the National Armory Museum by Mr. Samuel Powell, of Newport, R. I., through Capt. Howard Stockton, November 15, 1871.
- 673. Albanian flint lock.

TROWEL BAYONETS.

- 674. Rice trowel bayonet, first models; nickel-plated; blade welded to triangular bayonet, 1868.
- 675. Intrenching knife and scabbard; prepared under the direction of Col. J. G. Benton, September, 1879.
- 676. Combination bayonet; designed by Col. J. G. Benton, January 12, 1878.
- 677. Combination bayonet, with steel scabbard.
- 678. Dahlgren bowie-knife bayonet; from Naval Bureau of Ordnance.
- 679. Trowel bayonet scabbard; designed and made by L. F. Bruce, December 8, 1879.

AMMUNITION.

SERVICE PROJECTILES.

- 680. 12-inch breech loading rifle, solid shot.

- 701. 2-inch breech loading rifled mortar shell, 630 pounds.
- 702. 2-inch breech loading rifled mortar shell, 800 pounds.
- 703. 2-inch breech loading rifled mortar shell, fired and recovered.
- 704. 2-inch breech loading rifle cored shot.
- 705. 2-inch breech loading rifle cored shot.
- 706. 2-inch breech loading rifled howitzer shell.
- 707. 2-inch breech loading rifle shell.
- 708. 3.2-inch breech loading rifle shell.
- 709. 3.2-inch breech loading rifle shell, fired and recovered.
- 710. 3.2-inch breech loading rifle shell for point fuse.
- 711. 3.2-inch breech loading rifle shell.
- 712. 3.2-inch breech loading rifle shell for point fuse.
- 713. 3.2-inch Hotchkiss shrapnel.
- 714. 3-inch Hotchkiss shrapnel.
- 715. 6-pounder Driggs-Schroeder armor piercing shell.
- 716. 6-pounder Seabury common shell.
- 717. 6-pounder Hotchkiss common shell.
- 718. 3.6-inch shrapnel with fuse.
- 719. 3.2-inch shrapnel with fuse cut.
- 720. Maxim Nordenfeldt 6 pounder with fuse cut.

ELECTRIC WELDED PROJECTILES.

(Loaned by the American Projectile Co.)

- 701. 12 black enameled 4-inch steel common shell; navy.
- 702. 4-inch steel common shell; navy.
- 703. 4-inch steel common shell, with section removed to show interior; navy.
- 704. 4-inch steel common shell for carrying high explosives; navy.
- 705. 4-inch shrapnel.
- 706. Piece of 4-inch tubing from which 4-inch common shell are made; navy.
- 707. 3.2-inch shrapnel; army.
- 708. 3.2-inch shrapnel with section removed to show interior; army
- 709. 3.2-inch shrapnel fired, uninjured; army.
- 710. 57 millimetres (6-pounder); army.
- 711. 57 millimetres with section removed to show interior; army.
- 712. 57 millimetres, rough, before finishing; army.
- 713. 6-inch steel common shell with section removed to show interior; navy.
- 714. Piece of 6-inch tubing from which 6-inch shell are made; navy.
- 715. Section of 6-inch tubing from which 6-inch shrapnel are made; navy.

SHELL FOR PNEUMATIC DYNAMITE GUN. (ZALINSKI.)

- 716. 8-inch projectile.
- 717. 15-inch projectile.

CARTRIDGES FOR CANNON.

- 718. Charges for 3-inch muzzle loading rifle.
- 719. Charges for 3.2-inch breech loading rifle.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Exhibit
No.

- 720. Charges for 3.6-inch breech loading rifle.
- 721. Charges for 3.6-inch breech loading mortar.
- 722. Charges for 5-inch breech loading rifle.
- 723. Charges for 7-inch howitzer; breech loading.
- 724. Charges for 8-inch rifle; breech loading.
- 725. Charges for 10-inch rifle; breech loading.
- 726. Charges for 12-inch rifle; breech loading.
- 727. Charges for 12-inch breech loading mortar; steel.
- 728. Charges for 12-inch breech loading mortar; cast iron hooped.
- 729. Charges for 7-inch Ames rifle.
- 730. Charges for 8-inch muzzle loading converted rifle.
- 731. Charges for 11-inch muzzle loading converted rifle.
- 732. Charges for 15-inch muzzle loading, smooth bore.

CARTRIDGES FOR SMALL ARMS.

- 733. Samples of reloaded Morse cartridges.
- 734. Board containing 110 samples of projectiles for small arms collected from different nations.
- 735. Twelve boards containing specimens of cartridge manufacture.
- 736. Cabinet containing different kinds of cartridges.

PRIMERS FOR CANNON.

- 737. Board containing 64 samples and specimens, foreign and American manufacture, caps and primers for small arms and cannon.
- 738. Board containing 21 specimens showing effects of firing on cannon.
- 739. Service friction primers.
- 740. Electric primers.
- 741. Obturating primers, friction and electric.
- 742. Vent-sealing Seabury primers.
- 743. Armstrong electric and friction primers.
- 744. German friction primers.

FUSES.

- 745. Frankford Arsenal combination, 28 seconds.
- 746. Frankford Arsenal, percussion.
- 747. French Combination, "Walters."
- 748. Armstrong base percussion.
- 749. Armstrong time and concussion.
- 750. Hotchkiss base percussion, large.
- 751. Hotchkiss base percussion, flat head.
- 752. Hotchkiss base percussion, small.
- 753. Hotchkiss point percussion, large.
- 754. Hotchkiss point percussion, medium.
- 755. Hotchkiss point percussion, small.
- 756. Hotchkiss point percussion, made at Frankford Arsenal.

Exhibit
No.

- 757. Hotchkiss point percussion, 47 millimetres.
- 758. German Krupp, time and percussion.
- 759. German Krupp, percussion.
- 760. Moffat combination.
- 761. Bowman, time.
- 762. Driggs base percussion.
- 763. Schenke percussion, large.
- 764. Schenke percussion, small.
- 765. Danish percussion.
- 766. Swiss combination.
- 767. Swiss field.
- 768. Frankford aluminium combination.
- 769. Dutch combination.
- 770. Russian combination.
- 771. Swedish combination.
- 772. Paper, time fuse, 5 seconds.
- 773. Paper, time fuse, 8 seconds.
- 774. Paper, time fuse, 10 seconds.
- 774a. Paper, time fuse 15 seconds.
- 775. Paper, time fuse 20 seconds.
- 776. Lead fuse train showing method of manufacture.

SERVICE TOOLS AND EQUIPMENTS.

- 777. Set of hand reloading tools.
- 778. Set of bench reloading tools.
- 779. Mill's small arms cartridge belts.
- 780. Headless shell extractor.
- 781. Inspecting mirror for Springfield rifle.
- 782. Dodge's blanket roll support.
- 783. Merriam's knapsack.

SHOOTING GALLERY AND BALLISTIC MACHINES.*PRESSURE OF POWDER IN GUNS.

- 784. Bomford & Wade's experimental gun, 3-inch cast iron, illustrating early methods of obtaining powder pressures.
- 785. Six-pounder bronze gun tapped for wall pressures.
- 786. Small eprouvette mortar with copper shot in muzzle.
- 787. Crusher gauge for muzzle loading guns, large.
- 788. Crusher gauge for muzzle loading guns, small.
- 789. Crusher gauge for breech loading guns, large.
- 790. Crusher gauge for breech loading guns, small.
- 791. Rodman pressure gauge.

MEASUREMENT OF VELOCITY.

- 792. Gun pendulum (model).
- 793. Shultz chronoscope.

Exhibit
No.

- 794. Navez-Leurs chronograph.
- 795. Vignotti chronograph.
- 796. Benton thread and electric velocimeter.
- 797. Le Boulange chronograph.
- 798. Breger chronograph.
- 799. Sebert velocimeter with instrument for reading record.
- 800. Drop chronograph.
- 801. Self-registering projectile.

RANGE FINDERS.

- 802. Watkin's depression range finder.
- 803. Paddock's interpolator.
- 804. Watkin's field range finder.
- 805. Gautier's telemeter.
- 806. Wejdon range finder.
- 807. Pratt range finder.
- 808. Gordon range finder.
- 809. Russell range finder, combination.
- 810. Russell range finder, triangular.
- 811. Richards' hand telescope for stadia work.
- 812. Labbez range finder.

INSTRUMENTS FOR AIMING GUNS.

- 813. Zalinski sight (old).
- 814. Zalinski sight (new).
- 815. Loraine sight.
- 816. Frankford Arsenal sight for field guns.
- 817. Gunners' quadrant.
- 818. Pointing rod for 3.6 mortar (field).
- 819. Belgian aiming device.

MEASURING INSTRUMENTS.

- 820. Opisometer for measuring lengths.
- 821. Micrometer for measuring surface lengths.
- 822. Set of measuring rods, interior diameters, micrometer points.
- 823. Adjustable measuring rods.
- 824. Star gauge for measuring interior diameter of guns.
- 825. Cylinder gauge.
- 826. Chamber gauge.
- 827. Gas check seat gauge.
- 828. Ring gauges for 3-6-inch shrapnel.
- 829. Profile templet for 3-6-inch shrapnel.
- 830. Eccentric calipers for shell.
- 831. Brass thickness gauge.
- 832. Exterior and interior rests (Flagler) for star gauge.

- 833. Caliper arm, steel and wood, for diameters of heavy guns, micrometer points.
- 834. Supporting saddle and suspension ring for caliper arms.
- 835. Vernier calipers, capacity 36 inches.
- 836. Special instrument for measuring large diameters to within .0001 inch.
- 837. Instrument for measuring extension and compression.

MACHINES IN OPERATION.

- 838. Springfield armory gun making machines.
- 839. Turning butt of stock.
- 840. Bedding stock for barrel.
- 841. Planing stock.
- 842. Bedding stock for lock.
- 843. Bedding stock for trigger guard.
- 844. Rotary filing of receivers.
- 845. Profiling trigger guard.
- 846. Rifling barrels.
- 847. Milling metal parts.
- 848. Rotary for clamp milling.
- 849. Turning exterior of barrels.
- 850. Drilling bore of barrels.
- 851. Gas furnace.
- 852. Drop hammer. Loaned by Merrill Bros., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FRANKFORD ARSENAL CARTRIDGE MACHINES.

- 853. Double acting press, cutting and cupping blanks for shell
- 854. Draw press, drawing out shell.
- 855. Heading machine, making flange of shell.
- 856. Filling and foiling primers.
- 857. Priming shells.
- 858. Making bullets, calibre .45.
- 859. Assembling bullets, calibre .30.
- 860. Loading cartridges.
- 861. Weighing cartridges.
- 862. Gauging cartridges.

TESTING MACHINES IN OPERATION.

- 863. Selier's Testing Machine; Emery's patents; capacity 100 tons. Hydraulic power.
- 864. Riehle Bros.' Testing Machine, capacity 100 tons. Screw power.

SAMPLES OF TESTED MATERIAL FROM WATERTOWN ARSENAL.

- 865. Old steel rails bent transversely, showing effects due to continued service.
- 866. Hemp and manilla ropes and hawsers of large size tested in tension.

Exhibit
No.

- 867. Set of initial tension rings from 12-inch cast iron mortars, body and diagram.
- 868. Set of steel and cast iron specimens strained alternately in tension and compression.
- 869. Leather, rubber and cotton belting tested in tension.
- 870. Specimens of chain cable broken in tension.
- 871. Yellow pine post tested in compression.
- 872. Spruce post tested in compression.
- 873. Cylindrical cast iron column 10 feet long by 6 inches diameter; core 3.95 inches diameter; tested in compression.
- 874. Square cast iron column 10 feet long by 6 inches by 6 inches; core 4.39 inches by 5 inches.
- 875. Latticed steel column, height 23 feet 10.57 inches; area, 12.95 square inches.
- 876. Phoenix wrought iron column, height 25 feet 2.65 inches. Diameter cylinder 11.8 inches; diameter over flanges 15.5 inches.
- 877. Brick piers, showing relative strength when laid in lime mortar and neat cement.
- 878. Brick piers, showing relative strength with brick laid flat and on edge.
- 879. Brick piers, showing effect of enlarging at bottom.
- 880. Riveted joints of  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch,  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch and  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch boiler plate.
- 881. Eye bar, showing reduction of cross section before rupture.
- 882. Set of specimens of cast iron, wrought iron and steel, with from .09 per cent to .9 per cent of carbon, showing effect of temperature on strength, with diagram.

RELICS.

- 883. Case containing two bullets which met in mid-air.
- 884. Board containing two bullets and one medallion. One bullet British and one American found on battle-field at Lundy's Lane, Canada.
- 885. Sword presented by General Washington to General Lafayette. Loaned by Captain Borup, United States Army.
- 886. Old percussion pistol for firing cannon. Loaned from Washington Headquarters, Newburgh, N. Y.
- 887. Section muzzle loading rifle barrel, containing five charges of powder and balls.
- 888. 12 Old Muskets; relics of the Rebellion.
- 889. Springfield rifle, model 1873 "Officers"; used at Little Big Horn.
- 890. Springfield rifle, model 1868; captured from Indians.
- 891. Springfield breach loading musket; fired 20,119 times.
- 892. Specimen wrought iron tube used for converting smooth bore cast iron guns into rifles.
- 893. Confederate torpedo, from Light House Inlet, Charleston, S. C.
- 894. Confederate torpedo; one of those stretched across the Louisville road, Savannah, Ga.

Exhibit
No.

- 895. Confederate torpedo, Tretwell's, percussion.

- 902. Wheat's shell, copper, flanged.
- 903. Whitworth's blind shell.
- 904. Whitworth's long shell.
- 905. Confederate Armstrong shell captured at Fort Fisher.
- 906. Confederate shell, copper band on base, flanged.
- 907. Confederate shell, lead band on base, flanged.
- 908. Laidley's shell.
- 909. Henry shot, copper band.
- 910. Allen shot.
- 911. Reed's shell.
- 912. Dimick shell, fired.
- 913. Fifteen-inch steel spherical shot fired against wrought iron target at Sandy Hook, N. J.
- 914. Gorgas shell.
- 915. Lawson shot.
- 916. Jones' shot.
- 917. James' canister.
- 918. Hotchkiss shot, fired.
- 919. Hotchkiss canister.
- 920. Absterdam shell.
- 921. Parrott shell iron cup.
- 922. Parrott shell, fired, brass band, shell cut.
- 923. Hotchkiss shell, brass cup in section.
- 924. Schenkl shell.
- 925. Confederate wrought iron shot.
- 926. Confederate shell, brass and wood base, dowelled.
- 927. Confederate shot, corrugated brass band at base.
- 928. Confederate shell, two copper bands.
- 929. Confederate shell, copper cup with long wood sabot at base.
- 930. Confederate shot, lead band, wood base.
- 931. Abbot's blind shell, iron and lead, disc on base.
- 932. Confederate shot, lead and wood bands.
- 933. Confederate shell, lead.
- 934. First shot fired from Fort Sumter, found in the quarters of General Beauregard.
- 935. First shot fired at Fort Sumter, Blakely projectile.
- 936. Small cannon balls found at Fort Montgomery, revolutionary.

NAVY DEPARTMENT.

MODEL BATTLE SHIP "ILLINOIS."

1. This structure, the suggestion of Commodore R. W. Meade, United States Navy, contains the greater part of the Navy Department exhibit.

In outside appearance it is identical with the coast-line Battle Ships "Indiana," "Massachusetts" and "Oregon." The following are the principal data: Length, 348 feet; extreme breadth, 69¼ feet; draught, 24 feet; displacement, 10,231 tons; twin screws, 9,000 I. H. P.; sea speed, 15 knots; armament, four 13-inch B. L. R.; eight 8-inch B. L. R.; four 6-inch B. L. R.; twenty 6 pdr. R. F.; six 1-pdr. R. F.; two Gatlings, and Whitehead or Howell Automobile torpedoes. All guns except 13-inch and 8-inch are service guns. The heaviest armor is 18-inch, lightest 3-inch; all vital parts are protected.

The "Illinois" is built in Lake Michigan on a substantial foundation of piling and heavy timbers. The sides of hull are brick covered with cement. The sides of the superstructure, the 13-inch and the 8-inch redoubts, turrets, and guns are wood framing covered with cement; all other parts of hull and fittings are, as nearly as possible, like those of coast-line Battle Ships. Nothing is shown below the berth deck, which rests on timber framing over pile heads, making it impossible to exhibit any of the motive power.

BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR.

Exhibit
No.

2. Hull and Fittings.

Hull proper, with berth deck, main deck, superstructure deck, pilot house, conning tower and military mast.

Turrets, redoubts and sponsons.

Anchor davits, compressors, chocks, cable and hawser bitts, nippers, capstans, winches and windlass.

Exhibit
No.

Boat cranes, boat davits, skids and chocks.
 Awning and deck stanchions.
 All rails, ladders, hatches, hatch coamings, hatch canopies and gratings.
 Skylights and air ports.
 Ventilators and cowls.
 Pumps, water tight bulkhead doors.
 Magazine and shell rooms, with flood cocks and overflow pipes.
 Steering gear with stands, wheels and indicators.
 All internal fittings for quarters of officers and men, and reserved spaces, such as sick bay, offices, armory, torpedo-rooms, store-rooms, closets and coal bunkers; and generally all that pertains to the construction and fitting of hull for use as a vessel of war.

3. Boats and Gear.

One balsa, 18 feet.
 One steam cutter, 30 feet.
 One steam cutter, 33 feet (both steam cutters fitted to carry spar torpedoes).
 One cutter, 24 feet.
 One cutter, 26 feet.
 Two cutters, 28 feet.
 Two dinghys, 20 feet.
 One whaleboat gig, 30 feet (commanding officers' boat).
 Two whale boats, 29 feet.
 One sailing launch, 32 feet.

With the following gear, most of which is common to all boats:
 Awning stanchions; backboard; boat chest complete; boat hooks; boat breakers and stands; boat buckets; foot boards or gratings; oars; rollers; rowlock; rudder; side light boxes; signal mast; spars complete; ensign staff, flag staff; boat stretchers; stern benches; thwarts; tiller; thole-pins with trailing chains; copper well; windlass and bars; and yoke for steering.

Boat in frame (made by bending machine) showing skeleton of 26 feet service cutter.

4. Equipage and Stores.

Anchor and capstan bars.
 Belaying pins.
 Blacksmith's forge.
 Blocks of all kind used in the navy.
 Brushes, cleaning and painting.
 Buckets.
 Butts.
 Carpenter's bench, chest, supplies, and tools.
 Casks.
 Chests.

Baskets, coal.

Boat stove with cooking utensils.

Fenders, boat, pudding.

Fire grenades.

Galley and fittings.

Irons, hand and leg.

Jackets, cork.

Scrapers.

Slings, canvas, breeches, channel.

Squillees.

Turnbuckles.

Wire awls.

9. Outfits and stores, sailmaker's.

Awnings, ship, boat.

Exhibit
No.

Bags, coal, clothes, hammock, mess, peajacket.
Bolt rope.
Canvas, samples of each kind used in the navy.
Clews.
Cots, cabin, hospital, wardroom.
Fids, setting and splicing.
Hammocks.
Measuring line.
Needles, seaming, 4, 6, 8, thread.
Palms, roping, seaming.
Sail hook.
Sail knife.
Sail pricker.
Screens, ladder.
Tarpaulins.
Water bag.

10. Electric material and apparatus, United States Navy standard.

Ampere meter.
Ardois signal outfit.
Controlling board.
Dynamos, 16 K. W.
Engines, 16 K. W., with beds.
Ground detectors.
Junction boxes for branches, feeders, and projector mains.
Lamps, 16 c. p., ceiling, portable, projector.
Lanterns, battle, deck, magazine, signal (green, red, white).
Lights, running (masthead, side, towing), stay, top.
Molding for wire.
Motors, ventilating.
Projectors for search lights complete.
Receptacles.
Regulators, hand.
Resistance, adjustable (for search light leads).
Sockets.
Switches.
Switch boards.
Switch and receptacles combined.
Voltmeter.
Wiring complete for incandescent and search lights.
Wire guards for lamps.

11. Flags and signals.

Bunting, samples of each kind used in the service.
Flags, distinctive, president, secretary, flag officers.
Flags of all nations.
Flags, national (ship and boat).

Exhibit
No.

Signals, Ardois.
Signals, army.
Signals, general service.
Signals, international.
Signals, Very's night, with implements.

12. Lamps and lanterns.

Candles for running lights.
Lamps, navigator's, swinging.
Lamptrimmer's outfit.
Lanterns, dark, hand.
Lights, standing; stay; running (ship's and boat's).

13. Library books and stationery.

Blanks, Bureau of Equipment.
Library books, full set for ships of first class.
Returns, Bureau of Equipment.

14. Nautical Almanac Office.

Phototachometer, with which the velocity of light was measured during the years 1880-82.
Publications of the Nautical Almanac Office, (a) American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac, (b) Astronomical papers.

15. Naval Observatory. (In Observatory buildings, on shore.)

Astronomical clocks.
Barometer, Aneroid, used by Captain Hall in his last Arctic expedition.
Chronographs and scales.
Chronometers, some of historic interest.
Chronometer curves.
Diploma, awarded Naval Observatory at Paris, in 1889.
Drawings of nebulae, stars, and a total solar eclipse.
Drawings of details of Gardner time system.
Eclipse camera.
Electrical testing instruments.
Electric transmitting instruments and table.
Equatorial instrument, 5-inch.
Equatorial House.
Gardner correcting clock and attachments.
Gardner standard time clock.
Gardner transmitting clock and attachments.
Magnetic outfit.
Magnetic traces.
Meridian transit instrument.
Photographs of new Naval Observatory buildings, instruments, and various astronomical and magnetic phenomena; also time ball station, S. F., and members of International Astrophotographic Congress.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT EXHIBIT.

Photomicrograph.

Prisms of Naval Observatory.

Sextant correcting apparatus and sextant mirror testing apparatus.

Standard time map.

Time ball and detaching apparatus.

Thermistats.

Time gongs.

Transit House.

Navigation instruments and apparatus.

Aluminum circles, 7½ inch.

Barometers, aneroid, electric registering, mercurial.

Binnies, compensating, with correcting appliances.

Chronometers.

Chronometer.

Compass, parts of, floats, needles, pivots, etc.

Compasses 7½ inches, 6½ inches (telltale), 4 inches (boat).

Deck clock.

Dividers.

Drawing instruments.

Slide rule and tripod.

Log, chronometer and mechanical.

Log, chronometer, spy.

Log, chronometer, 14 sec.

Log, chronometer, with quadrant.

Log, chronometer.

Log, chronometer.

Log, chronometer, adjusting, horizontal vibration, vertical force.

Log, chronometer, 25 lbs.; deep sea, 80 lbs.; hand, 14, 9, 7, 5 lbs.

Log, chronometer, deep sea, hand.

Log, chronometer, registering taffrail.

Log, chronometer.

Log, chronometer, octant.

BUREAU OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY.*17. Outfit.

All medicines allowed ships of first class.
All surgical instruments and appliances used in the navy.
Hospital stores.
Dispensary and hospital furniture.
Bedding for ship's hospital (Sick Bay).
All blank forms, books and stationery furnished to battle ships.
Dispensary.
Operating room and table.
Sick bay.

BUREAU OF NAVIGATION.18. Hydrographic Office.Chart construction.

A set of 16 volumes of antique charts, illustrating the progress of chart construction from 1640 to the present day.

A portfolio of enlarged photos, showing the general methods used, and the personnel equipment and outfit of a party engaged in a hydrographic survey.

A progressive exhibit of the various steps and operations of the process of chart construction, from record books and rough plotting sheets to the final printed sheet.

A set of sample charts published by the United States Hydrographic Office, illustrating the style, scope and quality of the work done.

Relief map of the Atlantic Ocean and adjacent continents.

Relief map of the Caribbean Sea and West India Islands.

Charts.

Hydrographic Office charts arranged in portfolios according to naval stations.

United States coast and geodetic survey charts.

United States army engineers' charts of lakes.

British admiralty charts.

Sailing directions.

A complete set of sailing directions (guide books of the ocean).

Light lists (lists of lighthouses of the world).

Buoy and beacon lists.

Tide tables.

Notices to mariners.

Nautical books, pamphlets and monographs, publications of the United States Hydrographic Office, relating to the navigation of the waters of the known world.

A set of sailing directions, of various nationalities, from 1787 to 1879.

Exhibit
No.

Marine meteorology.

All publications, bulletins, monographs, charts and notices relating to the general subjects of climate, weather, storms, currents, prevailing winds, fogs, rains, ice, temperatures, etc.; with directions for utilizing the favorable and avoiding the dangerous meteorological conditions. On the charts, the positions of ice, wrecks and floating derelicts are noted; and the methods of using oil to smooth heavy seas graphically shown.

Instruments.

The following instruments besides those mentioned under Equipment and Naval Observatory:

Deep sea sounding machine, complete.

Deep sea thermometers.

Engineers' transit and solar attachment.

Bureau of Navigation theodolite.

Plane table.

Surveyor's chain.

One hundred foot metal tape measure.

Telemeter rod.

Paper protractors.

Portable magnetometer.

Dip circle.

Meter scale.

Personal equation instrument.

Maximum and minimum thermometer.

Thermograph.

Barograph.

Hydrograph.

Samples of oil distributors.

19. Branch Hydrographic Office.

The Branch Hydrographic Office forms an exhibit in itself, and is situated in the model battle ship "Illinois." It is a sample of the branch hydrographic offices which have been established at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Savannah, New Orleans, San Francisco, Portland, Oregon; Port Townsend, Washington, and Chicago. The object of these offices is to collect, compile, publish and distribute to mariners and others interested in nautical matters, at no expense to them, information for the use of seafaring men of all nationalities. There are constantly at hand, kept corrected to date, complete sets of charts, sailing directions and all nautical publications required by seafaring people.

20. United States Naval Academy.

Copies of the latest annual register of the United States Naval Academy Volumes of annual registers for the years past.

Copies of the regulations of the United States Naval Academy.

Exhibit
No.

Copies of Soley's "Historical sketch of the United States Naval Academy."

Programs of the monthly, semi-annual and annual examinations.

A complete set of text books and reference books used in every department of instruction.

Copies of the blank forms used at the academy, bound in a portfolio. In each department of instruction, copies of the questions set for the examinations, and, in answer to the questions, the complete papers of (1) Three candidates for admission. (2) Three cadets of each class, for each monthly examination and for the semi-annual and annual examinations.

A copy of the class standing of the cadets in each class, in every branch of instruction, for each month and term, and for the year.

From the department of mechanical drawing: A series of drawings made by the cadets.

From the department of astronomy, navigation and surveying—A set of charts made by cadets, under instruction, as the result of their own hydrographic surveying.

From the department of steam engineering—(1) A set of working drawings made by the cadets. (2) A set of pieces of metal, unfinished and rough, assigned to the cadets for work in the machine shop. (3) A ferry launch compound engine of 75 horse power, made by the naval cadets.

From the department of seamanship, naval construction and naval tactics—A selection of knots and splices, made by the naval cadets, in their work of the seaman.

A set of drawings, illustrating the physical development of cadets, in certain definite directions.

A plan of the grounds of the naval academy and surroundings.

Photographic views of scenes within the walls.

Accoutrements used by the naval cadets in fencing, boxing and gymnastics.

21. Watch, quarter and station bills.

A set of watch, quarter and station bills showing disposition of crew for all exercises.

BUREAU OF ORDNANCE.

22. Great guns and mounts.

13-inch breech-loading rifles, Mark I. Dummy, with breech mechanism.

In forward and after turrets, main deck.

13-inch mounts. Dummy.

8-inch breech-loading rifles, Mark III, 85 cals. Dummy. In 4 superstructure turrets.

8-inch mounts. Dummy.

6-inch breech-loading rifles, Mark III, 30 cals. In main deck sponsons

6-inch central pivot carriages, Mark IV.

Exhibit
No.

23. Rapid fire and machine guns and mounts.

- 5-inch rapid fire gun, Dashiell breech mechanism. Exhibit.
- 5-inch recoil mount, complete. Exhibit.
- 4-inch rapid fire gun, Dashiell breech mechanism. Exhibit.
- 4-inch recoil mount, complete. Exhibit.
- 6-pdr. rapid fire guns, Hotchkiss and Driggs-Schroeder.
- 6-pdr. hydraulic recoil top carriages, with shields.
- 6-pdr. cage stands, and 6-pdr. rail sockets.
- 1-pdr. rapid fire guns, Hotchkiss.
- 1-pdr. hydraulic recoil top carriages.
- 1-pdr. cage stands.
- 1-pdr. shelf mounts, in lower military top.
- 47 m. m. revolver cannon, Hotchkiss, and mount. Exhibit.
- 37 m. m. revolver cannon, Hotchkiss, and mount. Exhibit.
- Gatlings, cal. 45, on shelf mounts in upper military top.

24. Small arms.

- Rifles, Hotchkiss, cal. 45, 2d model, with spare parts.
- Rifles, cal. 22, for gallery practice.
- Revolvers, cal. 38, Colt's Navy, double action, with accessories and spare parts.

25. Great gun ammunition.

- 13-inch common cast iron shell.
- 8-inch armor-piercing shell.
- 8-inch common cast iron shell.
- 6-inch armor-piercing shell.
- 6-inch common cast iron shell.
- 13-inch cartridge and burster bags.
- 8-inch cartridge and burster bags.
- 6-inch cartridge and burster bags.
- 13-inch powder tanks.
- 8-inch powder tanks.
- 6-inch powder tanks.

26. Rapid fire, machine gun, and small arm ammunition.

- 5-inch rapid fire cartridges.
- 4-inch rapid fire cartridges.
- 6-pdr. rapid fire cartridges.
- 6-pdr. rapid fire drill cartridges.
- 1-pdr. rapid fire cartridges.
- 1-pdr. rapid fire drill cartridges.
- 47 m. m. revolver cannon cartridges.
- 37 m. m. revolver cannon cartridges.
- Gatling cartridges, cal. 45.
- Small arm cartridges, rifle, cal. 45; revolver, cal. 38.

No.

27. Torpedo station and torpedoes.

Spar torpedoes. Boat outfit.

Reel box, containing 300 feet double conductor insulated cable and crank.

Supply box, containing 1 monkey wrench, 3 open end wrenches, 1 rectifier, 6 pieces emery cloth, 1 pair cutting plyers, 1 piece akonite tape, 2 earth plates, 12 pieces of rubber tubing, 1 sample splice, 1 spool hemp twine, 1 knife, 1 screw driver, 6 dummy detonators, 1 sample detonator splice, 1 dummy gun powder fuze, 24 spherical rubber packings, 36 paper fasteners, 2 safety pins for circuit closers, 1 spring for circuit closers, one  $\frac{3}{8}$  inch by 16 inch screw tap, 12 screws for boat spars, 4 reeving lines, and 2 reeving line weights.

Four boxes (tin), containing 8 detonators each, in wooden blocks.

Thirty-two gunpowder igniters and 18 fuzes.

Two glass jars, each containing 6 blocks dry gun cotton.

Twelve secondary boat spars and toggles.

One Farmers's D. E. machine, pattern "C," complete.

Boat's wire box, containing 4 spar leading wires, 2 machine connecting wires, 4 secondary spar caps and rivets, and 4 secondary spar butts and rivets,

Chemical box, containing two prs. forceps, 2 prs. scissors, 2 bottles distilled water, 2 bottles for litmus paper,  $\frac{1}{2}$  quire litmus paper in tin cylinder, 2 lbs. sod. carbonate, 1 piece boiled tape, and 2 glass rods.

Two sets boat fittings—in place in steam launches; heel rests, hinge plates, swivel crutches with bearings, cross beam and hoods, spar clamp, securing rods and elevating arms, guide rings, worm shafts, elevating wheels and clutches, complete.

One testing magneto.

Two boat spars.

Twelve service torpedoes, pattern "D," one empty.

Twelve service and 12 exercise torpedo spindles, and 28 torpedo pins.

One boat's firing battery; 2 spare cells; 1 battery tester (4 ohms), 1 hand firing key, 3 lbs. sal. ammoniac, and 12 spare fuze bridges.

Four circuit closers with screws, 4 spherical rubber packings, and 4 rubber diaphragms.

One contact spar leading wire, spare rubber diaphragms, washers, and spherical packings, and 2 spar clamps.

Spar torpedo instructions, 2 copies.

Spar torpedo—gun powder:

Similar to the one used by Lieut. W. B. Cushing, U. S. N., in the destruction of the Confederate Ironclad "Albemarle," at Plymouth, N. C., Oct. 18, 1864.

Spar torpedo—gun powder:

Similar to those used, with mechanical fuzes, during the war, attached to the bow of a monitor.

Exhibit
No.

Spar torpedo—gun powder:

Naval torpedo station; manufactured for service use, prior to 1883.
Exercise, 7 lbs. gun powder.

Boat, 75 lbs. gun powder.

Ship, 100 lbs. gun powder.

Spar torpedo—gun cotton:

Naval torpedo station; manufactured for service use.

Pattern "A," 1883; 31 ½ lbs. gun cotton.

Pattern "B," 1883; 31 ½ lbs. gun cotton.

Pattern "C," 1884; 31 ½ lbs. gun cotton.

Pattern "D," 1885; 34 lbs. gun cotton.

Contact, 1886; 34 lbs. gun cotton.

Exercise, pattern "C," 1884; 4 ½ lbs. gun cotton.

Exercise, pattern "D," 1885; 4 lbs. gun cotton.

Automobile torpedo:

Naval torpedo station, designed 1869-1872; motive power, compressed air.

Automobile torpedo:

"Howell," two forms; designed by Capt. J. A. Howell, U. S. N.

Fly wheel pattern, 1874.

Latest type, 1892; motive power, energy derived from a fly wheel in rotation.

Automobile torpedo—"Hall:"

Designed by Lieut. M. E. Hall, U. S. N.

Motive power, compressed air.

Dirigible torpedo—"Lay Haight:"

Design of 1881, controlled by means of an electric cable; motive power, liquified carbon dioxide.

Mines—gun powder:

Four various designs used in defense of rivers and harbors, during the war, by the Confederates.

Mines—gun powder:

Submarine mines, called "Devils," used by the Confederates during the war, for the destruction of boats engaged in raising buoyant mines.

Mines—gun cotton:

United States Naval Mine, spherical form, charge 180 lbs. gun cotton.

United States Naval Mine, latest form, charge 125 lbs. gun cotton.

Mines—indicator for:

Circuit indicator and cut out, designed by Comdr. G. A. Converse, U. S. N., for use with mine groups.

Naval Torpedo Station—Explosives:

Samples of picric acid, sodium picrate, potassium picrate, ammonium picrate, barium picrate, strontium picrate, calcium picrate, magnesium picrate, naphthalene, methyl alcohol mono-nitro-benzene, meta-di-nitro-benzene, phenol, and benzene.

Exhibit
No.Naval Torpedo Station—Fuzes, etc.:

Specimens of electric fuzes, igniters, primers, and detonators (dummy), made at the Torpedo Station for service use. Apparatus for testing detonators before firing and after. Specimens showing the effect of explosion of service detonators.

Naval Torpedo Station—Fuzes:

One of the earliest forms of electric torpedo fuze, devised by Col. Samuel Colt. Recovered by dredging in the Potomac river in 1882. It had been planted by Col. Colt in 1848.

Naval Torpedo Station—Gun Cotton:

Samples of gun cotton. Specimens showing the effects of detonation of gun cotton.

Naval Torpedo Station—Gun Cotton, manufacture of:

Plan of gun cotton factory. Processes of manufacture illustrated by photographs. Samples of cotton waste used in the manufacture of gun cotton.

Naval Torpedo Station—Gun Cotton, shaping of:

Sample blocks of gun cotton shaped for torpedo war heads by means of saw and lathe.

Photographs, illustrating processes.Naval Torpedo Station—Instruction of Seamen:

Course of instruction for seamen qualifying for the rate of seaman gunner, illustrated by photographs.

Collection of igniters, primers, fuzes and detonators, made by seamen under instruction.

Collection of articles recovered by seamen under instruction, during 1891-2, from an English transport that was sunk in 10 fathoms of water, in Newport harbor, in 1778, to prevent her falling into the hands of the French fleet under Count d'Estaing.

Naval Torpedo Station—Torpedo Trials:

Collection of photographs illustrating the trials of various torpedoes.

26. Accessories and Implements.

- Accessory boxes for 6-pdr., 1-pdr., and revolver cannon.
- Accoutrements for landing party.
- Ammunition boxes for 6-pdr., 1-pdr., and revolver cannon.
- Ammunition hoists for 13-in. and 8-in. guns.
- Armorer's tools and chest.
- Bayonets.
- Boarders' rattle.
- Cartridge boxes, 4-in. and 5-in. R. F.
- Cutlasses.
- Drill aprons.
- Fire buckets, with hooks and lanyards.
- Gong.
- Gun implements, 6-in. complete: Boring bit, priming wire, vent drill and wrenches.
- Gun swabs.
- Hydraulic jacks.
- Implements for taking impressions of bore and chamber of great guns.
- Loading tray.
- Locks, 6-in. B. L. R., with spare parts.
- Magazine dresses, shoes, and tools.
- Mushrooms, spare, for taking pressures.
- Ordnance mat, for stop leaks.
- Powder, samples of each kind used in the navy.
- Powder tanks, 200 lbs., 50 lbs.
- Pressure gauges, with discs.
- Primers, electric, friction, and percussion.
- Purchase, differential.
- Rammers, sectional.
- Shell extractor.
- Shell tongs.

PATENT OFFICE.

Exhibit
No.

1. Air and gas engines.

Eighteen models illustrating the development of the modern hot air and gas engines from the earliest patented engine to the latest improved form of engine used.

2. Amalgamators.

Fifteen models illustrating improvements on separators and amalgamators.

3. Boot and shoe making machines.

One hundred and eleven models illustrating the development in the various classes of machines used in making boots and shoes from the earliest boot trees down to the perfected machines now in use.

4. Brick and tile making.

Thirteen models illustrating improvements in clay making apparatus; eleven models illustrating improvements in brick molds; fifty-seven models illustrating the development of brick-making machinery from the earliest patented machine to the latest machines used; and fifteen models illustrating improvements in tile and pottery machinery. In all ninety-six models.

5. Bridges.

Nine models illustrating improvements in bridges.

6. Carding and combing.

Fifty-eight models illustrating the development of machines for cleaning, carding and combing textile fabrics from the earliest inventions patented to the latest patented improvements in these machines.

7. Centrifugal machines.

Fifteen models illustrating the development of the centrifugal machine from the first machine patented to the latest machines in use.

8. Cloth finishing machines.

Thirty-nine models illustrating the development of cloth finishing machines from before the beginning of the present century up to the improved modern machines; ten models illustrating improvements in cloth measuring; and thirteen models illustrating improvements in cloth cutting. In all, 62 models.

Exhibit
No.

9. Cordage machines.

Thirty-two models illustrating the development of machine for making cord and rope, and for winding spools from the earliest patented machines to the machines now in use.

10. Dynamos and electric motors.

Seventy-nine models illustrating the development of dynamo and electric motor from the earliest attempts at a motor, and the first dynamo to the perfected machines of the present.

11. Electric lighting.

Nineteen models illustrating the development of the arc and incandescent light from the earliest used to the modern automatically regulated arc light and the modern perfected incandescent light.

12. Excavating apparatus.

Eight models illustrating improvements in earth augurs; 10 models illustrating improvements in road scrapers; 26 models illustrating improvements in ditching and dredging apparatus. In all 44 models.

13. Felting and fulling.

Eighteen models illustrating the development of machinery for felting and fulling cloth from the machines patented half a century ago to the latest improved machines; and 10 models illustrating improvements in hat making machinery. In all 28 models.

14. Fences and gates.

Fifteen models illustrating improvements in farm gates and 9 models illustrating improvements in means for stretching wire fences. In all 24 models.

15. Fire arms.

One hundred and twenty models illustrating the development of fire arms from the earliest shoulder piece known, to the latest perfected breech-loading magazine rifle adopted by the government; and 45 models illustrating the development of the pistol down to the latest perfected revolver. ## 20. Knitting machines.

Sixteen models illustrating the development of the straight knitting machine; and 17 models illustrating the development of the circular knitting machine. In all 33 models.

21. Laundry and washing apparatus.

Sixty-three models illustrating the development in laundry appliances from the beginning of the present century up to the present time.

22. Leather working.

Eighteen models illustrating the development of the art of splitting and cutting leather from the early patented inventions to the late improved machines.

23. Locks.

Nineteen models illustrating improvements in locks; 5 models illustrating improved padlocks; 13 models illustrating improvements in time locks; and 6 models illustrating improvements in safes. In all 43 models.

24. Locomotives.

Thirty-seven models illustrating the development of the locomotive and traction engine from the earliest locomotive used to the latest improved engines now in use.

25. Looms for weaving.

Fifty models illustrating the development of the loom from pre-historic times down to the perfected power loom used to-day.

26. Marine propulsion.

Two hundred and eighty-three models illustrating the development of the screw propeller, the paddle wheel and other means for marine propulsion from the earliest devices used to the latest improved devices.

27. Metal working machines.

Nine models illustrating improvements in horse-shoe making machines; 5 models illustrating improvements in chain making; and 17 models illustrating improvements in file-cutting and gear cutting. In all 31 models.

28. Nail making machines.

Twenty-seven models illustrating the development of nail making machinery.

29. Navigation.

Fifty-eight models illustrating the development of the modern appliances for steering vessels from the earliest patented device to the modern improved steam steering apparatus; 27 models showing improvements in anchors, and 8 models showing improvements in logs and sounding apparatus. In all 93 models.

Exhibit
No.

30. Ordnance.

Fifty-seven models illustrating the development of ordnance from the earliest cannon known to the modern breech-loading gun; 29 models illustrating the improvements in mounting ordnance; and 30 models illustrating the development of the machine gun, including the latest improved guns. In all 116 models.

31. Paper making apparatus.

Thirty-nine models illustrating the development of the modern pulp making machine; 14 models illustrating the development of the paper making machines, and 8 models illustrating the improvement in calendering devices. In all 61 models.

32. Plows and cultivators.

Fifty-two models illustrating the development of the plow from the first rude plow used to the latest improved sulky plow.

33. Printing presses.

One hundred and six models illustrating the development of the modern printing press from the first press used by the discoverer of the art to the latest improved perfecting newspaper press in use at the present time.

34. Refrigeration.

Thirteen models illustrating the development of the art of refrigeration including complete modern apparatus.

35. Sawing and planing machines.

Seventeen models illustrating the development of this art from the earliest American inventions to the latest improved machines.

36. Screw-making machines.

One hundred and six models illustrating the development of screw-making machines and taps and dies, including the late improvements.

37. Seeders and planters.

Twenty-seven models illustrating the development of mechanical seed-planting devices from the early patented machine to the latest improved machines.

38. Sewing machines.

One hundred and thirty-two models illustrating the development of the sewing machine from the earliest recorded patented mechanical sewing device to the latest improved machines of the present.

39. Sheet metal working apparatus.

Forty-two models illustrating the improvement in machines for shearing and otherwise working sheet metal within the last half century.

40. Soldering apparatus.

Six models illustrating improvements in soldering tools, and 10 models illustrating improvements in soldering machine. In all 16 models.

Exhibit
No.

41. Spinning machines.

Twenty-three models illustrating the development of the spinning devices from the prehistoric distaff and spindle to the modern perfected spinning mule.

42. Steam pumps.

Thirteen models illustrating the improvement in steam pumps within the last half century.

43. Steam engines.

Ninety models illustrating the development of the steam engine from the earliest steam operated devices to the late improvements in the modern compound engine.

44. Steam engine governors.

Thirty-five models illustrating the improvements in the governors from the earliest form patented to the present.

45. Steam hammers.

Twelve models showing improvements in steam hammers.

46. Stone crushers.

Sixteen models illustrating the improvements in means for crushing stone and ore.

47. Tanning.

Thirty-two models illustrating the improvements in apparatus for tanning and dressing hides.

48. Telegraphy.

Thirty models illustrating the development of the electric telegraph from the first device patented to the modern duplex and multiplex telegraphs, including also the printing and autographic telegraphs.

49. Telephony.

Forty models illustrating the development of the telephone from the earliest patented telephone to the latest instrument in use.

50. Thrashing and cleaning grain.

Thirty-five models illustrating improvements in machines for thrashing and appliances for cleaning and treating grain to prepare it for grinding; and 19 models illustrating improvements in devices for weighing grain. In all 54 models.

51. Typewriters.

Forty models illustrating the development of the typewriting machine from the first American invention to the modern perfected machines.

52. Wire-working machines.

Twenty-six models illustrating improvements in machines for working wire made within the last half century.

53. Wood-turning machines.

Thirteen models illustrating the development of the wood-turning lathe from the earliest known form to the improved modern lathe.

Exhibit
No.

54. Wood-working machines.

Twelve models illustrating the improvement in wood-working machines from the beginning of the present century to the present day.

55. Publications of the Patent Office.

One hundred and nine volumes of publications of the Patent Office, including the Official Gazette, the Decisions of the Commissioners and other publications of the office.

Grebes. Colymbidæ—Grebes. Spheniscidæ—Penguins. Tinamidæ —Tinamons. Rheidæ—Rheas.

194. A Collection of Humming Birds comprising species of sixty-four genera.

195. A Collection of Birds of Paradise, embracing the following species:

Incomparable Bird of Paradise—Astrapia nigra. Spotted Bower Bird—
Chlamydera maculata. Greater Bower Bird—Chlamydera nuchalis.
King Bird of Paradise—Cicinnurus regius. Magnificent Bird of Paradise—Diphyllodes magnifica. D'Alberty's Bird of Paradise—Drepanornis albertisi. Grand Promerops—Epimachus speciosus. Superb
Bird of Paradise—Lophorina superba. Black Bird of Paradise—
Manucodia atra. Caruncled Bird of Paradise—Paradigalla carunculata. Greater Bird of Paradise—Paradisea apoda. Empress Augusta Victoria's Bird of Paradise—Paradisea augusta-victoriae. Lesser Bird of Paradise—Paradisea minor. Raggi's Bird of Paradise—Paradisea raggiana. Red Bird of Paradise—Paradisea sanguinea. Six-wired Bird of Paradise—Parotia sefilata. Gould's Bird of Paradise—
Phonygama gouldi. Satin Bower Bird—Ptilonorhynchus violaceus.
Prince Albert's Rifle Bird—Ptilorhis alberti. Magnificent Rifle Bird—
Ptilorhis magnifica. Rifle Bird—Ptilorhis paradisea. Wilson's Bird of Paradise—Schlegelia wilsoni. Twelve-wired Bird of Paradise—
Seleucides nigra. Wallace's Standard Wing—Semioptera wallacei.
Regent Bird—Sericulus melinus. Fiery Bird of Paradise—Zanthom-elas ardens.

196. A collection of Game Birds, including representatives of the following families:

Ducks, Geese and Swans—Anatidæ. Plovers—Charadriidæ. Pigeons and Doves—Columbidæ. Curassows—Cacatidæ. Crowned Pigeons—Gouridæ. Mound Fowls—Megapodidæ. Turkeys—Meleagridæ.
Guinea Fowls—Numididæ. Bustards—Otididæ. Partridges and Quails.
—Perdicidæ. Pheasants—Phasianidæ. Rails—Rallidæ. Snipe—Sco-lopacidæ. Grouse—Tetraonidæ. Tinamous—Tinamidæ.

197. A Collection illustrating the confusion caused by the application of the same popular name to different species of birds. The following birds are represented:

Bee Bird, Buzzard, Chimney Swallow, Goldfinch, Jacksnipe, Martin,

Exhibit

Oortolan, Pheasant, Redstart, Robin, Screech Owl, Tree Sparrow, Woodcock, Blackbird, Carrion Crow, Coot, Jackdaw, Kingfisher, Oriole, Partridge, Quail, Redwing, Rook, Sparrow Hawk, Turtle Dove, Yellowhammer.

Special groups, with artistic accessories, as follows:

North American species approaching extinction:

- 198. Carolina Paroquet.
- 199. Ivory Billed Woodpecker.
- 200. Passenger Pigeon.
To illustrate protective coloration:
- 201. Ptarmigans in Summer.
- 202. Ptarmigans in Winter.
To illustrate remarkable habits:
- 203. Swallow-tailed Kite, feeding.
- 204. Carolina Paroquets, roosting.
- 205. California Woodpeckers and their store house.
- 206. Jacanas, walking on lily-pads.
- 207. Prairie chickens courting.
- 208. Flamingoes and their nests.
- 209. Bower Birds and their play house.
- 210. Crocodile Birds and crocodile.
- 211. Lyre Birds and dancing mound of the male.
- 212. Butcher birds and their larder.

REPTILES AND BATRACHIANS.

- 213. A systematic series of alcoholic specimens, representing the following families of American Reptiles and Batrachians.

Reptiles.

Crocodiles—family Crocodylidae.

Tortoises—families Chelydridae, Kinosternidae, Testudinidae, Emydidae, Cheloniidae, Dermochelydidae and Trionychidae.

Lizards—families Eublepharidae, Gekkonidae, Anolidae, Iguanidae, Helodermatidae, Anguidae, Anniellidae, Xantusiidae, Teiidae, Scincidae, Bipedidae, Amphisbaenidae.

Snakes—families Typhlopidae, Leptotyphlopidae, Ilysiidae, Boidae, Charinidae, Natricidae, Nothopsidae, Amblycephalidae, Boigidae, Elapidae, Hydrophidae, Crotalidae.

Batrachians.

Salamanders—families Proteidae, Cryptobranchidae, Ambystomatidae.

Plethodontidae, Desmognathidae, Salamandridae, Amphiumidae.

Cæcilians—family Cæciliidae.

Sirens—family Sirenidae.

Toads and Frogs—families Bufonidae, Pelobatidae, Hylidae, Cystignathidae, Engystomatidae, Dendrobatidae, Ranidae.

214. A group of North American turtles, showing the more prominent types in their natural surroundings.
215. A group of North American poisonous snakes, showing the various forms of dangerous snakes in their natural surroundings.
216. Cast of a Jamaica Boa, representing a type of the arboreal, non-poisonous American snakes.

FISHES.

217. A systematic series of fishes in alcohol, representing the American families, as follows:

Orthogoriscidæ—The Ocean Sun-fishes. Tetrodontidæ—The Swell-fishes. Diodontidæ—The Porcupine-fishes. Ostracionidæ—The Trunk-fishes. Balistidæ—The Trigger-fishes. Hippocampidæ—The Sea-horses. Syngnathidæ—The Pipe-fishes. Malthidæ—The Bat-fishes. Lophiidæ—The Anglers. Ceratiidæ—The Small Anglers. Antennariidæ—The Frog-fishes. Soleidæ—The Soles. Pleuronectidæ—The Flounders. Macruridæ—The Grenadiers. Fierasferidæ—The Fierasfers. Ophiidæ.—The Donzellas. Brotulidæ—The Brotulids. Gadidæ—The Cod-fishes. Merlucidæ—The Whittings. Lycodidæ—The Eel Pouts. Ammodytidæ—The Sand Lances. Cryptacanthidæ—The Wry-mouths. Stichiidæ—The Eel Blennies. Xiphidiontidæ—The Butter Eels. Anarrhichadidæ—The Wolf Fishes. Cebedichthyidæ—The Monkey Blennies. Blenniidæ—The Blennies. Opisthognathidæ—The Big-eyed Blennies. Bathachidæ—The Pad-fishes. Leptoscopidæ—The Small Star-gazers. Uranoscopidæ—The Star-gazers. Bathymasteridæ—The Ronquils. Chiasmodontidæ—The Great Swallowers. Thichodontidæ—The Sand-fishes. Gobiocidæ—The Clinging Gobies. Liparididæ—The Sea Snails. Cyclopteridæ—The Lump-fishes. Callionymidæ—The Dragonets. Gobiidæ—The Gobies. Triglidæ—The Gurnards. Agonidæ—The Alligator-fishes. Cottidæ—The Sculpins. Hemitriptidæ—The Sea Ravens. Scorpenidæ—The Rock-fishes. Chiridæ—The Chiroids. Scaridæ—The Parrot-fishes. Labridæ—The Wrasses. Pomacentridæ—The Demoiselles. Cichlidæ—The Cichlids. Embiotocidæ—The Viviparous Perches. Gerridæ—The Moharras. Polynemidæ—The Thread-fins. Acanthuridæ—The Surgeons. Chaetodontidæ—The Bristle-toothed Fishes. Ephippidæ—The Angel-fishes. Xiphiidæ—The Sword-fishes. Trichuridæ—The Cutlass-fishes. Scombridæ—The Mackerels. Carangidæ—The Pompanoes. Coryphaenidæ—The Dolphins. Stromateidæ—The Butter-fishes. Pempheridæ—The Pempherids. Zenidæ—The Dories. Bramidæ—The Hen-fishes. Nomeidæ—The Nomeids. Latilidæ—The Blanquillos. Mullidæ—The Sar-mullets. Holocentridæ—The Squirrel-fishes. Berycidæ—The Berycoids. Scænenidæ—The Weak fishes. Sparidæ—The Sea Breams. Pimlepteridæ—The Rudder-fishes. Pristipomatidæ—The Grunters. Centrarchidæ—The Sun-fishes. Elasmomatidæ—The Elasmomes. Serranidæ—The Sea Basses. Percidæ—The Perches. Apogonidæ—The Coral Fishes. Centropomidæ—The Sergeant Fishes Pomatomidæ—The Blue-fish. Elacatidæ—The Crab-eaters. Priacanthidæ—The Big-eyes. Aphredoderidæ—The Pirate Perches. Sphyrænidæ—The Barracudas. Echeneididæ—The Remoras. Trachypteridæ—King-of-the-Herrings. Atherinidæ—The Silversides. Mugillidæ—The Mulletts. Gasterosteidæ—The Stickle-backs. Aulorhynchidæ—The Flute-mouths. Fistulariidæ—The Trumpet-fishes. Centriscidæ—The Snipe-fishes. Belonidæ—The Silver Gars. Exocoetidæ—The Flying Fishes. Amblyopsidæ—The Cane Fishes. Luciidæ (Esocidæ)—The Pikes. Umbridæ—The Mud-minnows. Dallidæ—Alaskan Black-fishes. Cyprinodontidæ—The Toothed Minnows. Characinidæ—The Characins. Percopsidæ—The Trout Perches. Halosauridæ—The Halosaurids. Chauliodontidæ—The Viper Fishes. Steronptychidæ—The Hatchet-fishes. Stomiatidæ—The Stomiatoids. Scopelidæ—The Luminous Fishes. Synodontidæ—The Lizard-fishes. Argentinidæ—The Smelts. Salmonidæ—The Salmon and Trout. Alepidosauridæ—The Handsaw Fishes. Alepocephalidæ—The Alepocephalids. Hiodontidæ—The Moon-eyes. Albulidæ—The Lady-fishes. Elopidae—Big-eyed Herrings. Chanidæ—The Milk Fishes. Clupeidæ—The Herrings. Dorosomidæ—The Gizzard Shad. Engraulidæ—The Anchovies. Catostomidæ—The Suckers. Cyprinidæ—The Minnows. Sternopygidæ—The Electric Cat-fishes. Gymnotidæ—The Electric Eel. Siluridæ—The Cat-fishes. Loricariidæ—The Mailed Cat-fishes. Symbranchidæ—The Symbranchids. Congridæ—The Conger Eels. Anguillidæ—The Eels. Muraenidæ—The Morays. Nemichthyidæ—The Snipe Eels. Synphobranchidæ—The Synphobranch Eels. Simenchelyidæ—The Pugnosed Eels. Saccopharyngidæ—The Gulpers. Eurypharyngidæ—The Pelican Fishes. Notacanthidæ—The Spring Eels. Amiidæ—The Bow Fins. Lepidosteidæ—The Gar Pikes. Polyodontidæ—The Paddle-fishes. Acipenseidæ—The Sturgeons. Chimaeridæ—The Chimæras. Myliobatidæ—The Eagle Rays. Trygonidæ—The Sting Rays. Torpedinidæ—The Torpedos. Raiidæ—The Skates. Pristidæ—The Saw-fishes. Squatinidæ—The Angel Sharks. Heterodontidæ—The Port Jackson Sharks. Alopeciidæ—The Thresher Shark. Sphyrnidæ—The Hammer-headed Sharks. Galeorhinidæ—The True Sharks. Spinacidæ—The Dog Sharks. Scymnidæ—The Sleeper Sharks. Petromyzontidæ—The Lampreys. Myxinidæ—The Hag-fishes. Branchiostomatidæ—The Lancelets.

INVERTEBRATES.

A synoptic series, showing by means of specimens, models, drawings and explanatory labels, important forms and anatomical details of the orders of invertebrates, contained in the groups Protozoa, Porifera, Cœlentera, Vermes and Echinodermata.

219. Marine Invertebrates.

A systematic series of specimens of marine invertebrates in alcohol, including representatives of the following classes:

Spongia—Sponges. Anthozoa—Coral Polyps. Polygymedusæ—Hydrozoa. Crinoidea—Sea Lilies. Asteroidea—Star Fishes. Echinoidea—Sea Urchins. Holothuroidea—Sea Cucumbers. Annelida—Worms. Crustacea—Crabs, Shrimps, etc. Brachyzoa—Moss Animals. Tethyodea—Ascidians. Arachnida—Sea Spiders.

220. A collection of marine invertebrates in alcohol, from the Bay of Naples, received from the Naples Zoological Station.

221. Mediterranean Octopus—A group, with accessories, representing the Octopus in its natural surroundings.

Comparative Anatomy and Related Subjects.

The exhibit includes seven series of specimens as follows:

Homologies of the principal bones in the various classes of vertebrates.

General Homologies.

222. Mounted skeletons of man and horse with corresponding bones labeled.

223. Mounted and disarticulated skeletons of cat, crow, turtle, lizard, frog and fish, with principal bones labeled.

Homologies of principal bones of the skull.

224. Crania of sturgeon, gar pike, grouper, menpoma, frog, boa constrictor, turtle, alligator, penguin, goat and puma, with corresponding bones colored alike.

Homologies of bones of the extremities.

225. Fore and hind limb of grouper, sea turtle, alligator, eagle and dog with corresponding bones bearing similar numbers.
226. Manus and pes of horse, camel, bison, moose, tapir, bear, lion and seal with corresponding bones numbered alike.
Modifications of the limbs for locomotion.
227. Extremities of fish, sea turtle, manatee, cormorant, great auk, sloth, bat, monkey and man.
Location, structure and growth of teeth.
228. Series of crania, teeth, and sections of teeth.
Structure and growth of horns.
229. Series of horns and sections of horns of solid and hollow horned animals.
Structure of the long bones.
230. Series of bones bisected to show the solid or hollow character of the long bones of various animals.
Structural variations of domestic animals.
231. Skulls of various breeds of dogs showing cranial variation.
232. Skeletons of several breeds of dogs showing differences of size and proportion.
Anatomy, Embryology and variation of the domestic fowl.
Embryology.
233. Model showing genital organs of hen.
234. Sixteen models showing various stages in the development of the chick.
Anatomy.
235. Skeletons of two breeds of domestic fowl.
236. Model showing muscles, blood vessels and viscera of fowl.
Variation.
237. Specimens of wild jungle fowl.
238. Specimens showing a few of the variations in size and color of modern breeds of the fowl.
239. A series of specimens and models representing the chemical elements and compounds of the human body.

MISCELLANEOUS ZOOLOGICAL EXHIBITS.

240. Variation under domestication as illustrated by the domestic pigeon, being a group of thirty-four specimens, including the Wild Rock Pigeon, and examples of the principal breeds of domestic pigeons, as follows:
Pouters.
Red Pouter. Blue Pouter. Isabella Pouter.
Carriers.
Black Barb. Dun Carrier. Blue Rock Carrier.
Tumblers.
Booted, white English Fantail. Blue-tailed Turbit. Yellow-winged Turbit. Yellow, shell-crested Turbit. White Owl. Turbiter. Black Tumbler. Red Parlor Tumbler. Black Bald Tumbler. Black Jacobin. Bluet. Satinette.

Plymouth Rock cock and hen. Black Java cock and hen. Silver Wyandotte cock and hen. Jersey Blue cock and hen.

Asiatic breeds.

Light Brahma, cock and hen. Black Langshan, cock and hen. Partridge Cochins, hen. White Cochins, cockerel.

English breeds.

Silver Grey Dorking, cock and hen. White Dorking, cock and hen. Hamburgs.

Silver Spangled Hamburg, cock and hen.

French breeds. La Fleche, cock and hen.

Games. Red Pile Exhibition, game cock and hen. Maroon game cock.

Domesticated Mammals.

The exhibit includes examples of one or more races of the following domesticated mammals:

242.*Dogs.*243.*Cats.*244.*Mangooses.*245.*Genets.*246.*Sheep.*247.*Goats.*248.*Cattle (Zebu, domestic buffalo and ak).*249.*Guinea pigs.*250.*Rabbits.*ANIMAL PRODUCTS.

This collection is intended to illustrate the utilization of the various parts of the different animals, and the uses of substances derived from the animal kingdom in the arts and industries. It includes the following:

251. Collections showing the utilization of hair, wool, bristles, etc.

252. Feathers, quills and their uses.

253. Fish scales and articles made from them.

254. Tortoise shell and its manufacture.

255. Furs of various kinds.

256. Collection of leathers (including a loan collection of fancy leathers belonging to Tiffany & Co., New York).

257. Horns and antlers and articles made from them.

258. Hoofs and claws.

259. Teeth of various kinds and collections illustrating the uses of different kinds of ivory.

PHYSICAL GEOLOGY.

The exhibit illustrates three classes of Geological phenomena, and is arranged in the following manner:

I.—Vulcanology.

- 264. Map of the world showing in red the distribution of active and recently extinct volcanoes; compiled mainly from Neumayer's Erdegeschichte.
- 265. Geological map of the United States showing in red the areal distribution of recent volcanic rocks (and hence of recent volcanoes) in the United States; compiled by Prof. C. H. Hitchcock, in 1886, and published in the Transactions of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.
- 266. A model of the Ice Spring Craters, a group of recently extinct volcanoes near Fillmore, Utah, modeled from surveys made under the United States Geological Survey; scale, 100 feet=1 inch; horizontal and vertical the same; size of model 5 feet square.
- 267. A large series of photographs showing characteristic volcanic phenomena as below:
  - Two enlarged views of the volcano on Bogoslof Island, Bering Sea.
  - A series of views of Bogoslof, and Mounts Shishaldin and Makushia in Alaska.
  - A series of views of Hawaiian volcanoes and lava flows.
  - A series of views of Vesuvius, Italy, and the volcanoes of the adjacent islands; including Stromboli, Etna and Vulcano in various stages of volcanic activity.
  - Views of a recent volcanic cone and lava fields near Snag Lake, California.
  - Three views of the grand volcanic neck known as Mato Teepee, Bear Dodge, or the Devil's Tower in Wyoming.
  - Views of Columnar volcanic rocks in the Yellowstone National Park; near Orange, New Jersey, and Bonn, Prussia.
  - Views of geysers and hot springs in the Yellowstone National Park.
- 268. A series of specimens of volcanic products in characteristic forms, as lavas, fragmental ejectamenta and sublimation products, as follows:***
  - Columnar basalt, Bonn, Prussia, and the Giant's Causeway.
  - Slaggy and glassy lava, Hawaiian Islands and Yellowstone National Park.

*These collections in the cases are accompanied, whenever possible, by photographs of the immediate regions from which they were collected.

Exhibit
No.

Pumiceous and glassy lavas (obsidians), Yellowstone National Park and the Mono craters, California.

Vesicular lava, near Flagstaff, Arizona.

Lava showing the aa, pahoehoe, and other structures dependent upon their varying degrees of viscosity; lava stalactites and dribble cones from the Hawaiian Islands.

Volcanic bombs from Lipari, Etna, the extinct volcanoes of Mt. Trumbull and Sunset Peak, Arizona.

Lapilli from Ice Springs Buttes, in Utah, and Sunset Peak, Arizona.

Sand and rock fragments, ash, etc., from Bogoslof Island.

Fine pumiceous dust from beds in Montana and Nebraska.

A series comprising forty hand specimens illustrating the various kinds of lavas, and also two large specimens of polished paleozoic lava (felsite) from eastern Massachusetts.

Volcanic sublimation products, including sulphur, ammonium chloride and iron oxides from various American and foreign sources.

Siliceous and calcareous sinters from the geysers and hot springs of the Yellowstone National park, and travertines from extinct hot springs in Arizona.

The possible economy of volcanoes is illustrated in the sulphur and other sublimation products, pozzuolani (a natural concrete) building stone, and the beautiful "onyx marbles" or travertines.

II.—Glaciers and Glacial Phenomena.

269. Views illustrating living glaciers and icebergs.

270. Relief map of the United States showing the theoretical restoration of the ancient ice sheet at the stage of the glacial period following the main silt epoch.

271. A large series of photographs and other illustrations showing characteristic glacial phenomena, as below:

Views of glacial deposits, as moraines, drumlins and kames.

Views of large drift boulders the source of which has been traced with approximate accuracy.

Views of glaciated rock surfaces.

272. Actual specimens illustrating the transporting and eroding power of glaciers, as:

Specimens of glacial clays, sands and drift boulders. Of particular interest in this series are boulders taken from various altitudes in the White and Catskill mountains, and boulders of peridotite and other rocks in Rhode Island, Ohio and Illinois, the original source of which is known, with approximate accuracy.

Scratched and scarred boulders from glacial till.

Scratched and scarred boulders from still existing glaciers.

Glacial flour.

Slabs of stone, grooved, scratched or polished by glacial action.

Exhibit
No.

273. Glacial pot-hole from Wiscasset, Maine.

The possible economy of glacial products as shown in the utilization of glacial boulders for building, and the glacial clays for brick making.

274. The destructive effects of glaciation, as illustrated by fields covered by drift boulders and other glacial debris; the stripping of the surface of soils, and the burial of forests. Shown by photographs only.

III.—Limestone Caverns and Associated Phenomena.

274a. Actual plans and sections of Howe's Cave, New York; the Luray Caves, Virginia; Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, and Wyandotte Cave, Indiana.

275. A series of photographs showing cave interiors, as follows: Howes Cave, New York; The Luray Caves, Virginia; The Grottoes, Virginia; Mammoth Cave Kentucky and Wyandotte and Marengo Caves, Indiana.

276. A large series of cave deposits as below. Many of the stalactites and stalagmites being cut and polished to show structure.

Stalactites and stalagmites from the Luray Caves and the Grottoes, in Virginia.

Gypsum rosettes and encrustations, from Mammoth Cave, Kentucky.

Gypsum encrustations and rosettes; epsom salt, stalactites and stalagmites, from Wyandotte, Indiana.

Stalactites and stalagmites, from Marengo, Indiana.

Stalactites and stalagmites, from the Percy and Robertson Caves, near Springfield, Missouri.

Botryoidal stalactitic masses, from caves in the Organ Mountains, New Mexico.

Stalactites from the Copper Queen Mines, in Arizona.

Large translucent selenite crystals, from a cave in Wayne County, Utah.

The possible economy of cave products is shown by cut, turned and polished blocks of cave marble (stalagmite); nitrous earth, from Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, together with a small viol of calcium nitrate extracted from the same by leaching.

A series of specimens in alcohol, illustrating the fauna of caves.

A small series of photographs, bone breccia and flint chips, illustrating the occupancy of caves by human being.

A section of a cave, some 2x4 feet by 2½ feet high, constructed from materials collected in Marengo, Indiana, the materials occupying their original positions, as taken from the cave.

MINERALS.

The exhibit consists of Minerals, Gems and Semi-precious stones, illustrating the principles of crystallography and those physical properties of minerals which apply to the eye.

277. Crystallography and the Physical Properties of Minerals.

A series of crystallized minerals (with the principal forms in models of wood) to illustrate Crystal Form.

The Irish Village of the Irish Industries Association. Incorporated. President, the Countess of Aberdeen.

Grouped around the four sides of an ancient square, in the midst of which rises the Castle Blarney, are typical peasant cottages in which, especially in the industrial part, can be seen the life and labor of the frugal and industrious poor. In these humble domiciles one hears the bright sallies of wit and the keen repartee from Irish lassies who plainly have no need to kiss the blarney stone. Exquisite laces, beautiful carvings, grow before the eye, while rare old relics of the days gone by adorn many rooms. In the village hall the music of the Irish harp accompanies sweet voices singing Irish national melodies.

Exhibits in the Village.—In this village may be seen a number of Irish peasant girls working at their various occupations, such as needle point lace making from the Present Convent Youghal, County Cork; tambour and run lace making from the Limer

International Dress and Costume Exhibit, or World's Congress of Beauty. W. G. Press, President; W. M. Knox, Secretary and Treasurer.

The "Beauty Show" consists of pretty girls and gorgeous costumes. It is an exhibit between forty and fifty living representatives of different nationalities, races and types, each dressed in distinctive national or racial costume. Nearly all are beautiful young women, and they are genuine and typical natives of the countries they represent. The girls occupy booths on a dais, elegantly furnished and decorated with national colors. Many of them are engaged in some light occupation, such as they are accustomed to in their own lands. The interior of the spacious hall containing this exhibit presents a brilliant spectacle, and the charming representatives of the different countries offer a most pleasing and instructive study to visitors. Among the representatives to be seen are the following: United States, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, France, Germany, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Bohemia, Canada, Switzerland, Acadia, Creole, Russia, Finland, Italy, Bavaria, Octoroon, Syria, Arabia, Bedouin Arab, Poland, Tyrol, Greece, Hungary, China, Japan, Crinoline and Hoops, Orientals, Harem scene, etc., etc.

Admission, 25 Cents.

Electric Scenic Theatre (A Day in the Alps), Arthur Schwarz, Concessionaire.

The stage picture is a beautiful Swiss Alpine scenery, depicting in a realistic way every range of nature shown from dawn to night, as each gradually appears, and representing some of the most wonderfully realistic light effects ever produced by electric lamps. It is almost beyond belief that the visitor is not looking at a marvelous production of nature itself, instead of a picture created by an ingenious and artistic display of electric lights. The scene represents "A Day in the Alps." When the last sounds of the overture are ringing out, the curtain rises. The darkness of the parting night is spread over the scene till the approaching day is announced by the first rays of the sun on the lofty peaks of the mountains, showing the famous Alpine Glowing. The dim twilight disappears, and the peasants of the valley are greeting the new day in their tuneful songs (Tyrolese yodlers). At noon the picturesque landscape is shown in its full beauty in the bright and shining splendor of a warm midsummer day. Dark clouds begin to gather, and a heavy storm with thunder and lightning passes over the valley. Daylight appears again, but soon has to give way to the growing twilight of night. Once more the summits of the mountains are glowing under the parting rays of the sun. Moonlight and stars are now appearing and the whole landscape is shown in a brilliant manner.

Excellent music is rendered by renowned pianists, who perform artistic selections on a grand piano. Furthermore, Tyrolean warblers (Franz Reilhofer's troupe) perform on their various instruments, and sing their tuneful lays. Their renowned "yodels," as sung at each performance, are applicable to the scenery. The entire scenic effects are produced by about 250 electric incandescent lamps, operated from in front of the stage, in full view of the audience, by switches. The lamps on the stage are arranged in sets of shades containing twelve lights each, in red, white and blue. These lights are controlled by thirty-six switches, and are worked through German silver resistance coils. The interior of the theater is handsomely furnished with comfortable chairs. There are nine electric fans, producing a permanent current of fresh air, keeping the whole room at a low temperature and as refreshing as a sea breeze, it matters not how hot it may be outside. A cut-glass chandelier hanging from the ceiling is a wonderfully artistic piece of work. It consists of about 100 electric lamps.

The exterior of the theater has comfortable accommodations for visitors awaiting performances. Awnings and numerous chairs and benches offer a refreshing rest in the shade to those who are waiting for the beginning of the play.

Admission, 25 cents; one child, free; two children admitted on one 25-cent ticket.

Ansuetz' Electro-Photographic Tachyscope. Arthur Schwarz, Concessionaire.

Exhibited in Midway Plaisance, under the viaducts of Stony Island Ave., Woodlawn Ave. and Madison Ave., and in the Electricity Building, on main floor, German department.

In this apparatus the natural motion of objects and animals is reproduced with a degree of truth and accuracy that is absolutely bewildering. Looking thus at the representation of a man on a galloping horse, for instance, one sees the dust rise, the horse's mane and tail fly, and the nostrils extend. The rider is jerked in his saddle; he urges his horse, pulls the curb-chain and moves back his leg to apply the spur, etc. Each series in this apparatus represents a bit of life—not a life-like picture, but life itself—with amazing naturalness and truth.

Detailed circulars to be had at each machine.

Libbey Glass Works. Libbey Glass Company, Concessionaries; E. D. Libbey, President.

Entering the main doorway the visitor will find himself in the glass-house or blowing room, an immense glass-melting furnace being located in the center of, and directly under the great dome. The furnace is twenty-five feet in diameter at its base, and its tapering stack rises up through the dome of the building to a height of over 100 feet; in this furnace are placed the pots or crucibles in which glass is melted. Great care is necessary in the manufacture of these crucibles, requiring many months to produce them. The fire and brick in the construction of this furnace must be of the highest grade, as the int heat necessary for the proper melting of glass is such as no ordinary material will answer. The huge blocks of fire clay used in this furnace weigh many tons, and it requires over six months to prepare them.

Glass Blowing Department.—Between the furnace and the railing, some twenty feet distant, extending all around the furnace, is the space occupied by the workmen, and on the outside of this railing is the main aisle for the visitors, in which they can walk around and see each workman, without in any way interfering with the progress of manufacturing. Here is seen brisk gathering boys who thrust long irons into the white hot mouths of the crucibles, and by their own dexterous twist bring forth the hot waxy glass, which they quickly hand to the artisan, who blows and fashions it into shape, producing entirely by the eye an exquisite vase; near by another workman is blowing and shaping into form, what soon appears to be a basket, bowl, tumbler, etc. A boy quickly gathers from another crucible a huge piece of molten metal, drops it into a mold which stands upon a press; quickly the presser pulls the lever of his press, and before you know it, he takes from the mold a beautiful World's Fair souvenir. In this department can be seen all the methods of the glass blower's art, glass manufacture.

Glass Material.—The materials from which glass is made are sand, lead, salt-petre, potash and soda. Their mixtures is called batch, which is thrown into the pots, through the same windows, or holes, out of which the workmen take the glass, when molten. The batch is kept shut up tight in these pots at least 24 hours under 2200 Deg. Fahrenheit.

Glass Cutting Department.—At the end of the main aisle, on a large gallery some ten feet above the blowing room, and from which one can look down upon the glass blowers at work, glass cutting is carried on. Adjoining this gallery is an immense glass cutting department, where is seen some forty skilled glass cutters enclosed within a railing, and setting at their frames cutting the most intricate and beautiful pieces of glass. The glass is cut on a steel wheel, smoothed on a stone wheel, and polished on wooden and brush wheels.

Decorating Department.—Adjoining the cutting department on the left, is the Decorating department, where skilled decorators are painting World's Fair souvenirs on glass; this is all done by hand, with a fine camel's hair brush, mineral colors being used. When finished the article is put into kilns and fired.

Glass Spinning and Weaving.—Here is seen the spinning of glass and the weaving of same into fabrics, which are made into a great variety of useful and very attractive novelties. From one loom was weaved a glass cloth for the dress of the Spanish princess Eulalia, which is on exhibition in this building before being sent to Spain.

Crystal Art Room.—At the end of the glass palace is the crystal art room, where where all the finest cut-glass and spun-glass wares make a beautiful and varied display.

Admission, 10 Cents.

Venice and Murano Exhibiting Company, Venice (130 Campo San Vio).—E. Benuzzi, Manager.

Exhibit and manufacture Venetian blown and hand-made glass; both colorless and colored; chandeliers, wall brackets, candelabras, table sets for daily use; also imitations of antique glass, and Venetian renaissance glass. Also show and manufacture mural decorative mosaics, both for ecclesiastic and domestic purposes. Skilled Venetian artists daily attend to the works. Glass of every description and color, vases, tazze, candelabra, electroliers, table sets, etc., besides imitations of old Phœnician, Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek, Roman, Norman and medieval glasses are constantly made, and the most complete display of the products of the company is on show and on sale at moderate rates, while no duty is charged on them during the Fair, in consideration of their being made in this country with imported materials and implements on which duties have been previously paid. Reproductions of the very best pieces now collected in the museums and treasuries of churches in Europe, art gems of world-wide celebrity, graffiti, murrhines, cameo glasses, diatretes, Christian plates, oriental, renaissance, filigree and lace works, etched and frosted glass, avventurina, sapphire, corniola, agate, topaz, jasper, onyx, amethyst, jacinth are shown. A most wonderful variety of colors and shapes, all that human skill and knowledge combined together, achieved in the way of glass-making since the days down to the present, can be studied. The mosaic department is quite as in as the glass furnace; samples of both ornamental and figure work are on view and several artists attend all the time to the execution of orders now in hand for this country. The appliances which the company possess for the manufacture at Murano of the enamels, and the perfection (attained after numerous costly experiments) with which they succeed in reproducing the ancient smalti, coupled with the facilities which are at their command for the making of the mosaic work at their ateliers in Venice, combine to enable them to produce mosaic work of the greatest degree of excellence, and at a cost bringing it within the reach of those of moderate means who may desire to apply, either for ecclesiastic or domestic purposes, a mural decoration, which will be found to combine a durability which in this climate can not be attained, either in fresco or surface painting, with the rich effect which no colored pigments can produce. There is a somewhat general impression that mosaic decoration is only fitted for the ornamentation of churches or public buildings, but this is far from being the case. It is also specially suited for stair-cases, corridors, halls, cornices of apartments, etc., etc., in private houses. It can also be very appropriately introduced into sepulchral works, intermural or extramural. There is also another and valuable use to which mosaic work can be applied, viz.: the reproduction of portraits. This has been most successful, and its adoption affords a means of removing many of the casualties which attach to canvas and painting.

Admission, 25 cents, refunded on purchase.

The Irish Village and Donegal Castle; Mrs. Ernest Hart, Founder and Honorary Member of the Donegal Industrial Fund, Concessionaire.

The Irish Village and Donegal Castle contain a representative exhibit of Irish industry, art and antiquity. The village is entered by a mediæval gateway, which is an exact reproduction of the St. Lawrence Gate at Drogheda, on passing which the visitor enters a street of industrial cottages picturesquely grouped around the village green, on which is placed the carved market cross. Here jigs are frequently danced by the vilagers to the stirring music of the Irish piper. In one cottage is shown by Irish villagers the whole process of dyeing, carding, spinning and weaving home-spuns; in the next lace-making; in the third wood-carving and designing of Celtic crosses; and in another linen weaving, sprigging and embroidery. A cottage restaurant stands also at the corner of the green. At the village smithy artistic iron work is wrought on the anvil.

Donegal Castle.—Is exactly reproduced one-half the size of the original. In the banqueting hall is shown the colossal statue of Gladstone by Bruce Joy, the Irish sculptor; the model of the Memorial Church of O'Connell, and relics of the great liberator; a gallery of portraits of famous Irishmen; paintings by Irish artists and of Irish scenery; facsimiles of ancient Celtic illuminated M.S.S.; engravings of old Irish crosses; reproductions in gold and silver of antique Celtic jewelry, as well as the Kells embroideries, laces, home-spuns, linens, hosiery, woodcarvings, etc., executed in various parts of Ireland by the trained workers of the Donegal Industrial Fund.

The exhibit is one of great and unusual interest, for such a collection of Irish art and industry has never before been brought together in this country. Beyond the Hall is the concert and lecture room, where concerts of Irish music are given several times a day, and lectures on Irish industry, art antiquity, architecture, history and literature.

The Round Tower.—Rises to the height of one hundred feet from the center of the garden behind the ruins of the Keep and Donegal Castle. It is a reproduction of one of the round towers built a thousand years ago. At its base are models of a cromlech, Druidical Hole and Ogham stones and early Christian crosses.

Restaurant.—In the shady garden is the restaurant where lunches, teas and suppers are elegantly served at moderate prices.

West of the castle is a large Restaurant and Beer Garden, where Irish character dances and comedies in costume are given constantly.

Wishing Chair.—To the left of the restaurant is to be found an exact reproduction of the Wishing Chair of the Giant's Causeway; the seat is framed of an actual stone brought from the Causeway, and the whole stands on Irish soil brought expressly from Ireland for that purpose.

The Aim and Object of the Irish Village.—Is to show the possibilities of Ireland by exhibiting some of her best work of both the past and the present; and to illustrate the fact that in her industrial development lies her chief hope. The profits of the village will be devoted to the furtherance of the industrial and technical teaching work of the Donegal Industrial Fund, a philanthropic organization founded ten years ago by Mrs. Ernest Hart, and which has done pioneer work and exercised considerable influence. The London address is the Depot for Irish Industries, 43 Wigmore street, London, England.

Admission, 25 cents.

Japanese Bazaar. Y. Murai, Concessionaire; H. K. Tetsuka, Manager.

The Japanese Bazaar has on exhibition and for sale a collection of Japanese articles, all manufactured in and imported from Japan, especially for the World's Fair. These articles consist of Porcelain, Carved Ivory, Lacquer goods, Cloisonne, Bronzes, Metal Wares, Fans, Silk, Handkerchiefs and Shawls, Teas, Bamboo goods, Toys and various fancy articles. In the large and handsome collection of Porcelain exquisite workmanship is shown. The Satsuma and Kaga Pottery is perhaps the most attractive ever exhibited outside of Japan, and to show the variety of these articles, vases as high in price as $1,000 and as low as 10 cents are exhibited. Included in this collection of Porcelain are souvenir cups and saucers worth from 15 cents up to $20. They contain pictures of the various Exposition buildings and other objects of interest at the Fair; also pure Japanese from 60 cents up to $12 a pound. Unlike the concessions for the sale of Japanese goods elsewhere in the Exposition, all articles purchased at this bazaar are for immediate delivery. One price to all is fixed on each article, and goods purchased are packed securely and made ready for shipment in short order. Japanese male and female attendants are present to wait upon customers.

The South Sea Islands Village. The Oceanic Trading Company, Concessionaires; H. N. Nichols, Managing Director.

The Village—Consists of four Samoan houses of native construction, in which are offered for sale goods and curios of native manufacture. The largest of these houses stood for ten years in the village of King Mataafa, and was contributed by him to this exhibit. It is made from the wood of the bread-fruit tree and thatched with the leaves of the wild sugar-cane. Fully ten thousand pieces of wood are used in its construction. The other houses are similarly built, but of much cheaper material. There are twenty-five villagers, men and women, natives of Samoa, Fiji, Romutah and Wallis Islands. These curious people are not Africans, Indians nor Mongolians, but are Polynesians of the Archipelago. Five Samoan canoes, including a large war-canoë, are among the village exhibits. The war-canoë is made of hewn timbers, ~~sewed~~ <sup>sewed</sup> together with cocoanut fibre, not a nail or screw being used in its construction.

The Theatre.—Performances are given at frequent intervals during the day and evening, showing the songs and dances of Samoa, Fiji, Romutah and Wallis Islands.

The German Village. German Ethnographic Exhibition (Limited), of Berlin, Concessionaires.

The German village covers a space of 780 by 225 feet. It has three entrances, two leading into the village proper and one leading into a restaurant and concert garden. The center of the entire space is occupied by a mediæval stronghold, surrounded by a moat and approachable by two drawbridges.

Ethnographic Museum—Consists of two large halls, one vestibule and a castle-chapel. The collection consists chiefly of implements of war and of the chase, illustrative of all periods, beginning with the prehistoric and ending with the renaissance. The center hall of the castle contains also a group in wax, being an apotheosis of the German empire and consisting of the figure of Germania, surrounded by German heroes from Arminius down to William I. This group is surrounded by a gathering of German peasants of all sections of the empire in national costumes, doing homage to their heroes.

The other half of the castle facing the concert garden is given up to purposes of a dining wine restaurant, where food and drink are served in German style. In the shadow of the castle, to the east of it, the village proper is grouped. It consists of a Hessian rural town-hall, a Black Forest house, a Westphalian house, an Upper Bavarian house and a Spreewald house. The Hessian town-hall, like the castle, contains a part of the ethnographic collection; each of the farmhouses mentioned above contains installations of dwelling-rooms, typical of those sections of the German empire which the houses represent.

To the west of the castle is situated the concert garden, surrounded on two sides by open restaurant-halls. Eight thousand can be comfortably accommodated simultaneously in the shady concert garden. Here two German military bands, one of infantry and one of cavalry, give two concerts daily. The two military bands consist of seventy-four men, being two full regimental bands; one of forty-eight in uniform of a regiment of foot-guards, and one of twenty-six in uniform of the guard du corps.

Admission to Village, Free; to Museum, 25 Cents; to Concerts in Garden, 25 Cents.

Turkish Village. Robert Levy, Concessionaire.

Consists of mosque, Turkish theater, refreshment pavilion, Persian tent, grandstand, Turkish cafe, Bedouin camp, cottages, Cleopatra's needle, serpentine column.

TURKISH THEATER—A large pavilion holding about 1,500 people, provided with chairs arranged in such a manner as to give a full view of the stage. The ceiling and walls are decorated in purely Oriental style, consisting of Bokara rugs and portraits of Egyptian officials worked in Oriental embroideries. Branches of cedar from Mount Lebanon bearing the well shaped conical cones, are interspersed along the walls. There are tapestry drop curtains, presenting fac-simile scenes, one of which is the River Jordan near Jericho. Another is the city of Christ's birth, Bethlehem, one of the most attractive places to all the Christian world. There are also scenes from Mount Hermon, Damascus, Beyruth and other historical places of the East. Performances are given at various times throughout the day and evening, at which about sixty-five actors and actresses appear, and the audience is delightfully entertained by handsome Turkish ladies with their beautiful, sparkling black eyes; fascinate by their charming beauty all who look at them. The character of the entertainments given in this theater is of an attractive and pleasing nature to both ladies and gentlemen. The scenes presented on the stage are purely Oriental, showing the manners and customs of the various countries constituting the Turkish empire; such, for instance, as the Oriental wedding in Damascus; the Kounounic drama; "Antar, the Son of Sheddad;" the Kurdish drama, etc. The dancing, by both males and females, is particularly a feature. The wonderful movements of the Nautch dance, and the beautiful Damascene and Turkish dances as performed throughout the Ottoman empire are given at each performance. Also Syrian dances, Ziebekly dance, Quadrille dance, Constantinople dance, Thesalonian dance, the Whirling dance (Mada sellé Rosa, who performs this wonderful dance, twirls within a space of less than half a foot for 15 minutes), Mesopotamia dance, Albanian dance, etc. Fencing scenes, scenes, celebration of weddings and funerals, and in general all the features of home life of the inhabitants of the Arabian desert, Kurdistan, Damascus, Mt. Lebanon, Jerusalem, Nazareth, Bethlehem, Mesopotamia, and other sections famous in both sacred and profane history, are performed for the edification of visitors. The Turkish musicians are really artists and perform on the instruments peculiar to the respective tribes of Turkey, giving the weird, rhythmic music heard only in the Orient. Overtures by iental orchestra of the Turkish and American national hymns are rendered, and taken as a whole the performance supplies visitors with a knowledge of the manners and customs of far-away Turkey, in which more satisfaction is given in one hour than can be gained in a study of ten years. Admission, 25 cents.

The mosque is a reproduction of the mosque of the Sultan, Selim, and is decorated and furnished in the same manner as the great mosque of Turkey. It is open to visitors all times, except during prayer hours. No admission fee.

The refreshment pavilion is decorated with fine Turkish and Damascus goods and ornaments; in it is served all kinds of Turkish temperance drinks, fruits and syrups.

The Persian tent is four hundred years old, embroidered in gold and silver, and belonged at one time to the Shah of Persia. Admission, 25 cents.

The grand bazar contains forty booths, where goods peculiar to the country can be bought, such as embroideries, rugs, carpets, silverware filigree peculiar to the Orient, brassware and precious stones, jewelry, old arms, antiquities, etc. No admission fee.

Turkish Cafe.—Here Turkish Mecca coffee is served and Timbok (tobacco) can be smoked in the Nargelehe (water pipe). In the restaurant Turkish meals are served.

Bedouin Camp.—North of the bazar a Sheik and his family and part of his tribe are camped, showing all the features of home life in the desert; they brought with them camels, dromedaries, Arabian horses, and arms peculiar to Arabia; near this camp is a reproduction of one of the chief palaces of the city of Damascus. Admission, 25 cents.

Cottages.—At the rear of the grand bazar there are eleven cottages, in which are men and women working in the different trades of Turkey, making carpets, rugs, embroideries, brasswork, etc. No admission fee.

Cleopatra's Needle.—A reproduction of Cleopatra's needle as it stands opposite the Sophie mosque.

The serpentine column is a reproduction of the bronze monument cast in Greece in 48 B. C., and erected at Delphi in commemoration of the victory of the Plateau.

Sedan chairs with native carriers, which carry visitors to any part of the grounds for one person, 75 cents per hour, 40 cents per half hour, 25 cents per quarter of an hour.

Egyptian Temple. Prof. Demetrius Mosconas, Concessionaire.

This structure has the architectural characteristics of an Egyptian temple of the eighteenth and nineteenth dynasties (1800 B. C. to 1400 B. C.). It resembles more particlarly the Temple of Luxor (which was built by Amenoph III, 1550 B. C., and added to by Ramses II, 1400 B. C.), with its monolithic obelisks, colossal statues and sphinxes. On the outer walls of the temple are sculptured battle scenes, worshipping of divinities, etc. The two obelisks are fac-similes in wood of the original monolithic obelisks in red granite or syenite. They are 75 feet in height and 5 feet square at the base. The hieroglyphic inscriptions are sculptured in the wood and gilt. The obelisk on the right hand as you enter the temple has sculptured on it in the hieroglyphic language a dedication to the World's Columbian Exposition in the person of the president of the United States of America.

A representation of an ancient Egyptian temple is shown in the interior; also of the tomb of "Thi' and "Apis;" fac-similes of the mummies of ten of the most celebrated Pharaohs.

Moorish Palace. Columbia Moorish Palace Company, Concessionaires; C. D. Warren, President.

Were an exhibit of this character located in the heart of a great city, a much higher price than 25 cents admission would be charged. It is considered by many to be one of the best attractions on the Midway. After passing through its gates you find yourself in a beautiful garden of palms, and after picking your way through a gold maze you come to a Harem, guarded by a black eunuch; the rugs and draperies are purely Oriental. You next visit the Devil's cave. The birth of the harp can also be seen. This work is considered the pinnacle of high art. Next a bottomless well is gazed into, and then a small flight of stairs ascended and you find yourself in the room of 1,000 reflections or Kaleidoscope where 1,000 people like yourself are seen standing around. The effect is produced by perfectly clear mirrors. From here you pass through a Moorish arch and ascend a broad staircase to the upper floors of the palace. You will be struck with the wonderful life-like figures in wax and probably make the same mistake as many others by supposing figures are visitors and visitors are the figures. The entire upper floor is taken up with prominent men, great rulers and generals of the world; also many laughable and highly interesting groups are seen.

You next visit the execution of Marie Antoinette with the original guillotine used. The artist has reproduced the whole scene in wax and done his work so well that many shed tears when they view it. There is nothing gruesome about the scene, however.

Next, the Optical Illusion Theater is announced (3 acts), when you make your exit you scarcely believe you are on earth. In the second act a beautiful marble statue stands on the stage, the story of Pygmalion is told; red blood rushes in the statue, and a beautiful woman greets your eyes. The change takes place several times, and as the statue is so near that you can almost touch it, the deception is perfect. The first and third acts are equally wonderful.

Admission to amusement features, 25 cents.

Ferris Wheel Company. G. W. G. Ferris, Concessionaire.

The mammoth Ferris Wheel, which can be seen at a distance long before entering the gates of the Exposition, is regarded as one of the greatest engineering triumphs and novelties of modern times. It is undoubtedly a feature on the Midway Plaisance. It is a monster steel wheel, somewhat resembling a huge bicycle wheel, revolving between two towers. It is 264 feet in height, and around it, suspended between the two crowns by great steel trunnion pins, 36 passenger coaches, each as large as the ordinary Pullman Palace car, built just as substantially and upholstered just as luxuriously, are securely attached. Each of these coaches has a seating capacity of 40 persons, and each coach has a polite attendant. With its living freight of 1,440 people, when filled to its capacity, it slowly revolves in response to powerful machinery by which it is operated. Imagine the sensation of being carried up 250 feet on one side, and of being slowly lowered on the other side, and of gaining during the trip a complete view of the World's Fair grounds, a bird's-eye view of the whole of Chicago, and of a goodly portion of Lake Michigan to boot. That is the idea of the Ferris wheel in a nutshell. The entire structure is of steel, and its construction involved the expenditure of $400,000 before a single passenger was carried. The great axle is the largest piece of steel ever forged, being 32 inches in diameter, 45 feet long and weighing 56 tons. The cost of this piece of steel alone was $35,000. The foundation of masonry which supports the towers goes 35 feet below the surface of the ground, and tapers to a height of eighteen feet. The total weight of the moving mass is 1,200 tons, but so liberal an allowance has been made for wind stresses that in the opinion of eminent engineers a tornado of one hundred miles an hour would leave the wheel intact and unharmed. Hence, passengers while indulging in their novel trip are just as safe as though they were riding out to the grounds on a railroad train. The motion of the cars is almost imperceptible, and no one need be afraid of a "sinking" sensation felt by some with high speed elevators. Arranged in groups on the rods around the crown of the wheel are 3,000 incandescent lights of various colors. These are alternately extinguished and relighted as the wheel revolves at night, and the scene resembles a monster display of pyrotechnics. Platforms are located on both sides of the base of the tower, and six cars can be loaded and unloaded simultaneously. The time required for one complete trip is 25 minutes. This gives passengers two complete revolutions of the wheel. The immense engines are duplicated, so that in case of any disarrangement of the machinery, the second plant could be started with less than a moment's delay.

The inventor is G. W. G. Ferris, a prominent bridge engineer of Pittsburgh, and head of a noted firm of bridge engineers and metallurgists. He has been largely identified with the bridge enterprises in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and other States. The different sections going to make up the complete wheel have been constructed in no less than six cities.

Price of admission, 50 cents; small children admitted free when accompanied by persons holding admission ticket.

Model of St. Peter's Church. L. de B. Spindor, Concessionaire.

It is carved wood and coated with a substance which perfectly imitates marble, reproducing the exact color of the original structure. It is constructed on a scale of one-sixtieth part of the original cathedral, measuring about 30 feet in length, by 15 feet in width and 15 feet in height, and is exhibited in a building of Roman style. In the interior of this building are portraits of several of the popes, together with a number of Papal coats-of-arms of large dimensions. Arranged in the corners of this building are four small, ancient models as follows:

The Cathedral of Milan, in carved wood, made by De Simoni, measuring  $31\frac{1}{2} \times 27\frac{1}{2} \times 8$  1.2 inches.

The Piombino Palace, belonging to the family of Boncompagni, of which Pope Gregorio XIII was a member. This was erected in 1572 and the model is in carved wood.

St. Agnese Church is represented in both its interior and exterior aspects, and is made of different colored marbles. This church was erected by Pope Innocenzo X of the Dorio Panfili, and by whose command this model was made, measuring, as it does  $16 \times 16 \times 24$  inches.

Austrian Village and Old Vienna, "Old Vienna Company," Concessionaires.

Old Vienna.—An exact reproduction of that part of the city called the "Graben," as it appeared two hundred years ago. It is a complete city, and the visitor at once feels as if he or she had just entered into another part of the world. The architectural effect is a work of art, and the busy merchants in their inviting shops almost make the scene enchanting. These stores, of which there are seventy in number, have on exhibition many novel and useful products for which Austria is noted. Cafes and restaurants abound, and visitors are served in just such a manner as if they were actually in "Old Vienna." There are two banquet halls within the enclosure, in which public receptions are held. Many of the visiting societies and organizations give special dinners here. Several of the manufacturing processes typical of Vienna and the Austrian industry and art manufactures are shown, viz: wood, amber, meerschaum and ivory turning and carving; engraving and painting on glass, modeling of statuary work and bronzes, embroidering, manufacture of laces, of leatherware, jewelry, enamels and other processes.

Music—Consists of two complete bands, the most celebrated of these being under the personal leadership of Hofcapellmeister C. M. Ziehrer, musical director of the Imperial and Royal Fourth Austrian Infantry Regiment, Hoch and Deutchmeister from Vienna. The leader is famous also as a composer throughout Europe, and is retained in the "Old Vienna" display by permission of the Emperor of Austria. Concerts are rendered by this band every evening from 5 p. m. to 10 p. m., including Sunday, the programme containing national airs, Vienna waltzes and the popular music of the day. In the forenoon from 10:30 until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a musical concert consisting of melodious airs is daily rendered by a celebrated Hungarian band.

A large Vienna restaurant seats 2,400 people. There is also a restaurant styled "Constantinbuegel," Vienna, which is a refined cafe, true Vienna style.

On view in the town hall of the "Old Vienna" grounds is a collection of ancient Greek paintings 2,000 years old, from the tombs of Faijum, (Egypt). Also a face mummy, of the period of Christ; the oldest existing bible manuscript on papyrus, and other antiquities. Admission, 25 cents.

Admission to "Old Vienna," 25 cents.

Chinese Village, Theater, Joss House, Bazaar and Cafe.

Theater.—Performances are given at the following hours: 9 A. M. to 12 o'clock, 12:45 P. M. to 6 P. M., 7 P. M. to 10 P. M. They consist of scenes and representations of historical subjects in China, many of them pertaining to kings, in which war scenes and love-making are delineated, interspersed with singing, dancing and juggling. The furnishings and fittings of the interior of the theater were brought from China especially for the purpose. Taken all in all, it is one of the most interesting and wonderful performances on the Plaisance.

Joss House.—The Joss House on the second floor contains idols and represents heaven from the Buddhist standpoint, with hundreds of angels. The infernal regions with the different modes of punishment are vividly illustrated. Also, on the second floor are shown scenes typical of China, such as shops, bazaars, Chinese dwelling house, etc.

Bazaar and Cafe.—Various articles of Chinese manufacture are for sale in the bazaar; also beautiful solid ebony furniture, hand-carved and inlaid with mother-of-pearl. In the cafe both Chinese and American dishes are served.

A trip to China is not necessary, as everything can be seen in this village.

United States Submarine Diving Co.; I. I. Manion, Concessionaire.

An exhibit displaying modern appliances and machinery necessary for the most effective work in deep sea diving, shown by the United States Submarine Diving Company. The exhibit proper comprises a practical illustration of the principle and methods of modern diving operations. Two experienced divers are constantly at work in a mammoth tank containing 40,000 gallons of water. You first witness the divers on the surface of the water, when a lecture is given, pertaining to the business or to the manner in which air is supplied to the diver; the pressure of water and air; the use of the life line; the heavy weights carried by the diver; accidents to divers and their many causes; system of signals; the wonderful submarine telephone; length of time, under different circumstances, it is possible to remain under water; the depth it is possible to reach; the use of the submarine electric lamp—all of which are thoroughly explained. Then you are enabled to witness the divers at work under water, through large plate glass windows inserted in the sides of the tank for that purpose. Here the divers may be seen sawing and nailing wood, breaking rock, recovering articles thrown into the water and writing messages to those looking at them through the windows.

THE Pavilion is situated on the lake front, between the Leather and Shoe Trades Building and the Convent of La Rabida, with public entrances at the north and south ends, and is open to visitors, free of charge. The pavilion is 85 feet by 300, with wings on each side running the length of the building and 25 feet wide. The east wing is given up to the various kinds of steel exhibits and the west wing to offices. The main building is devoted to guns, big and little, slow firing and quick, for marine and land batteries.

The pavilion was designed by HEINRICH THEODOR SCHMIDT, of Frankfort on the Main, Architect; the iron construction was executed by the GUTEHOFFNUNGSHÜTTE of Oberhausen (Rhine Province). The sculptures and stucco work were designed and executed by J. MÜLLER of Aix-la-Chapelle, Sculptor. The wrought iron stand in the entrance hall was designed by FR. HALMHUBER of DÜSSELDORF, Architect.

Class 542--Department G.

Fried., Essen, Ruhr.

30 cm (11.81') The Big Coast Gun
in front pivot coast carriage.

Weight of barrel with breech closure, 22,400 kilos (tons 120.46). The gun is 46 feet long, with a 42-centimeter bore, and fires an explosive shell weighing 2,900 pounds. This is the largest gun in the world.

(Intention)—This gun is intended to be mounted in defensive works on the coast. It is one of the most powerful guns existing at present, and is capable of piercing the heaviest armor carried by ships at all ranges most especially required in the engagement of ships with coast defenses.

(Description)—Barrel: The barrel is a jacketed built-up tube of special gun-steel; it has Krupp's rounded wedge breech closure with traversing screw and breech nut; the obturation consists of a steel ring and steel plate, and firing is effected by means of friction fuze screws of Krupp's system. Calibre, 420 mm (16.54'); length of barrel, 14,000 mm (45.93'); length of bore, 12,700 mm (41.66'); number of grooves in rifling, 120; weight of barrel with breech closure, 22,400 kilos (tons 120.46).

(Ammunition)—The gun fires: Cast iron fuze shells, steel fuze shells, steel armor shells, steel shrapnels. Weight of charged projectile, 2,200 lbs.; weight of bursting charge of cast-iron fuze shells, 72.75 lbs.; steel fuze shells, 119.04 lbs.; steel armor shells, 22.04 lbs.; steel shrapnels, 22.04 lbs.; number of balls in shrapnels, 3000; weight of each ball, 3.52 ozs.; weight of brown prismatic powder, 903.89 lbs.

(Range)—The steel armor shell can perforate, when striking at right angles, a wrought iron plate of—Close to the muzzle, 107.8 cm (3.53'); Distance of 1000 m (3281'); 99.8 cm (3.26'); 2000 m (65.62'); (3.01') 91.9 cm. The gun exhibited was made in 1886 and has since fired 16 shots.

(Transportation)—The railway transport of the barrel weighing 22,400 kilos was effected in Germany upon a Fried. Krupp special wagon with 16 axles and weighing 80,800 kilos; in the United States upon a similar special wagon built by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. The putting on board ship in Germany was effected by the 150 ts. crane at Hamburg and the landing in the United States by the large new crane of the Maryland Steel Works, at Sparrows Point, near Baltimore.

2. 30.5 cm (12.01') Gun L/35 in Hydraulic Ship Carriage.

This gun serves for arming men-of-war and large armored vessels. Weight of barrel with breech closure, 62,450 kilos (61.46 tons).

(Carriage)—The principal parts of the hydraulic carriage are the upper carriage, the frame and the turntable. The barrel is carried by means of its trunnions in the low upper carriage and has a breech closure which is adapted to be moved vertically by hydraulic power.

(Recoil)—The braking of the recoil and the advance and return movement of the upper carriage with the barrel are effected by means of two brake cylinders mounted on the frame, whose pistons are fixed to the upper carriage and enter the cylinders when the gun is fired.

L indicates the length of the gunbarrels and projectiles in calibres, for example L 35 indicates that the article has a length of 35 calibres.

c—(How Manned)—From a platform one man is able to move the upper carriage forward and backward, to open and shut the breech, to raise and depress the ammunition lift, to operate the loading ram, to sight, to elevate and train the gun, and to fire the same.

d—(Loading)—Loading is effected with the barrel in its rearward and elevated position. The hydraulic ramrod drives by means of its telescopic piston the projectile firmly into the grooves of the rifling and introduces the bag cartridge; after the hydraulic ammunition lift has raised the projectile and the charge up behind the breech of the gun.

e—(Pressure Water)—The gun is mounted under an armored cupola, the walls of which rest on the periphery of the turntable. The pressure water is supplied and led away through pipes.

3. 28 cm (11") Coast Gun L/40 C 89

a—(Intention)—The gun is intended for coast defense against ships. It can also be used aboard ship with a modification of the ammunition lift. The carriage admits of an elevation of 45° and a depression of 5°.

b—(Weight of Carriage)—The strain upon the carriage is relieved by braking in the direction of the fire. The carriage weighs 59.05 tons (60,000 kilos), and the shield, 23.62 tons (24,000 kilos).

c—(Loading Position)—The barrel in its loading position is brought with its breech end in front of the raised lift, so that the ramrod can push the projectile and the charge from the lift into the barrel.

d—(Breech Mechanism)—The breech mechanism is operated from the turntable, on which is arranged the stand for the gun-captain, with the slides or valves for the hydraulic actuating mechanism of the gun and the turning engine.

e—(Covering)—An armor shield covers the carriage and loading apparatus. It is of flat dome shape and projects slightly beyond the ram part. This gun fires cast-iron and steel fuse shells, steel armor shell and shrapnel.

f—(Weight of Projectile)—The loaded projectile weighs 760.59 lbs. (345 kilos) and is fired with 352.74 lbs. of prismatic powder. The shrapnel carries 1,024 balls each, weighing 0.22 lb. (100 g.)

4. 24 cm (9.45") Coast Gun L/40 C 86 in Center Pivot Coast Carriage.

a—(Intention)—The gun is intended for engagements of coast defenses against ships. It fires a projectile of 215 kilos (474 lbs.) with an initial velocity of 790 m (2,900).

b—(Barrel)—It has a built-up or hoopled barrel and Krupp's round wedge-breech closure, with traversing screw and breech nut, a steel ring and steel plate obturator or gas check, and an arrangement for firing by means of friction-fuse screws on Krupp's system.

c—(Carriage)—The carriage is worthy of particular attention. Brake cylinders of the hydraulic recoil brake are located in a protected situation on the outside of the carriage, and the peculiar construction admits of an elevation of 44° and a depression of 4°.

d—(How Trained)—It is trained laterally by a pinion working in a toothed ring on the base, and vertically by a worm-gear toothed elevation arc. A worm-gear that can be thrown in and out at will enables the captain to train the gun both vertically and horizontally.

e—(Projectile)—The projectile is lifted into its cradle by means of the wire rope of the shot-craze. With the elevation of 44° and a range of about 20,000 m (21,872 yards) the trajectory of the projectile of this gun reaches a maximum elevation 6,540 m (21,456 ft), and the projectile has a duration of flight of 70.2 seconds. Thus, a 24 cm (9.45") gun if placed at Pré St. Didier in the Alps with an elevation of 44° would fire 2,730 m = 8,956.8' over Mont Blanc (4,810 m = 15,781.5') and the projectile with a range of 20,226 m (22,120 yards) would fall in the neighborhood of Chamounix. This is the longest range that has been actually reached by any existing gun with a projectile of the weight specified.

5. 21 cm (8.26") Gun L 35 in Centre Pivot Ship Carriage.

This is one of the most useful guns for ships. It is manned by hand or by electricity. It throws a projectile of 140 kilos (308 lbs.), with an initial velocity of 646 m (2,119').

6. 15 cm (5.9") Quick-Firing Gun L 40 in Centre Pivot Ship Carriage.

Guns of this class constitute the main armament of cruiser-corvettes and also form the intermediate calibres in the armament of armour-clads. They fire projectiles of 45 kilos (100 lbs.), and make 8 shots in a minute.

7. 12 cm (4.72") Quick-Firing Gun L 40 in Center Pivot Ship Carriage.

This gun is employed for arming cruisers and large dispatch boats. It throws a projectile of 18 kilos (39.683 lbs.), and makes thirteen shots in a minute.

8. 8.7 cm (3.43") Quick-Firing Gun L 40 in Centre Pivot Ship Carriage.

This gun serves mainly for warding off attacks by torpedo boats, and can therefore be mounted in all classes of vessels. It throws a projectile of 9 kilos (19.84 lbs.), and makes nineteen shots in a minute.

9. 7.5 cm (2.95") Quick-Firing Gun L 25 in Caponier Carriage.

This gun is designed to serve for the defence of fortresses as a flank gun for raking the ditches and trenches. Its construction offers special advantages for this purposes by reason of its high speed of firing (40 shots per minute) and effective action of the projectile (weight of projectile 6 kilos (lbs. 13.23) and initial velocity 500 m (547 yards), whilst being capable of very easy and simple manipulation.

10. 10.5 cm (4.13") Fortress and Siege Gun L 35 with Carriage.

This gun has made 1,800 shots, and the last test was as good as the first. It has a very light carriage and is easily handled.

11. 24 cm (9.45") Fortress and Siege Mortar.

This mortar is transportable. When in shooting position the pivot can be dug in the earth, and the mortar brought over it.

12. Portable 7.5 cm (2.95") mortar.

13. 7.5 cm (2.95") field gun 28 calibre.

14. 7.5 cm (2.95") light field gun.

15. 6 cm (2.4") Boat and Landing Gun L 21.

This gun is mounted on a center pivot and throws a projectile of 3.0 kilos (6.6 lbs.) This gun can be used in a boat or for land purposes.

16. 7.5 cm (2.95") mountain gun 13 calibre.

17. 6 cm (2.36") Mountain Gun.

This gun is intended for use in mountainous districts.

For the transport of the gun three mules are required; of these, one carries the barrel, the second the carriage and the third the wheels and shafts. The normal weight for each animal amounts to about 90 kilos (198, 41 lbs.) to which must be added the weight of the saddle, and of the equipment, about 40 kilos (88.18 lbs.).

18. 3.7 cm (1.46") Bush Gun.

This gun is constructed to satisfy the requirement for a gun of small calibre, which is capable of being transported in all places, even over the most difficult ground and particularly in hot climates.

19. Collection of Projectiles, consisting of:

a. (Steel Armour Shells) Without fuze.

They are designed for perforating ships' armor and also the armor of fortifications. They have a considerably greater effect than the chilled armor shells for the same purpose, so that they have almost displaced the latter.

b. (Steel Fuze Shells) Intended, similarly to the bursting shells, to have the greatest possible explosive or bursting effect at the mark. Their walls are therefore made so as to leave a large internal space for the reception of the greatest possible quantity of bursting charge which is caused to explode by means of a fuze on striking the mark.

c. Heavy Armour Plates.—These protectives serve chiefly for firing at earthworks, whereas the bursting-shells are mainly employed against animate objects under cover which can only be reached by spreading the burst fragments out into the form of a large cone.

d. Light Shells.—Belong to the same class of projectiles, but differ from the ordinary bursting shells and bursting shells by still smaller thickness of wall and greater length of projectile, which enables a still larger quantity of the bursting charge to be employed. They are fired only at low velocities from guns with strongly curved trajectory.

e. (Cast Iron) Fuzed Shells.—Are partly ordinary shells with only one wall and partly such in which the bursting action is determined by a special internal arrangement of the projectile. They have a bursting charge, and all are provided with fuzes.

f. (Shrapnels).—Serve exclusively for firing at animate objects. They are charged internally with balls; they have a bursting charge in their base, and have a double fuze, that is to say, a fuze which ignites the bursting charge of the projectile either on striking the mark or during flight after any desired duration of flight before striking the mark.

g. (Case Shots).—Are sheet metal cases charged with balls, and without bursting charge and without a fuze; they serve only for defensive purposes at short range. The sheet metal case is broken in firing whilst still in the barrel and the balls diverge as soon as they have quitted the barrel.

20, 21. Compound Armor Plate. The compound armor plates exhibited are distinguished: First by the excellent union of the steel with the welding iron plate which nowhere shows a tendency to become detached;

Secondly, by the tenacity of the steel which shows comparatively very few cracks and very slight scaling;

Thirdly, by the great tenacity of the iron backing notwithstanding the great thickness of the plates.

22, 23, 34. Nickel Steel Armor Plates.

Have the advantage that they cannot be caused to break or crack, even by projectiles of the largest calibres, and even when they have been struck by an extraordinary number of shots. As regards their capacity to resist perforation they do not yield to any nickel steel plates of similar manufacture made elsewhere.

25. Plate of Ingot Iron, weight 62,400 kilos (tons 61.41).

26. Boiler Plate of Welding Siemens-Martin Ingot Iron.

Length 30 m (65.5 f), width 3.3 m (10.83 f), thickness 32 m (1.26 f), weight 16,200 kilos (tons 15.94).

27. Boiler end plate of Siemens-Martin ingot iron.

28. Dome-shaped piece from a plate of welded iron.

29. Distorted boiler end plate.

30. Distorted due of a tenbrink boiler destroyed by want of water.

31. Hollow Shaft from a Block of Crucible Steel.

Length 25,000 mm (82 feet), weight 12,000 kilos (tons 11.81).

32. Driving roll of crucible steel.

33. Screw Shaft, Thrust Shaft, and Crank Shaft of Open-hearth Steel.

34. Total weight of the three shafts exhibited: 105,000 kilos (tons 103.34); total length: same, 27.5 m (90 feet).

35. (Intermediate Shafts).—When used aboard a steamer, a number of simple intermediate shafts are arranged between the screw shaft and the thrust shaft, so that the entire length of shafting is about 52 m (170.6 f). The seven parts were forged by hydraulic power from blocks up to 1.4 m (4.59 f) in diameter.

eter. The coupling flanges are forged on direct.

b—(How Connected)—The screw shaft weighing 21,400 kilos (tons 21.06) is connected to the thrust shaft weighing 15,000 kilos (tons 14.76) by means of 9 head screw bolts each weighing 70 kilos (lbs 154.3).

c—(Crank Shafts)—The crank shaft weighs 66,600 kilos (tons 65.54), and consists of 3 crank pins, 6 crank webs and 6 coupling journals which are combined to form 3 cranks 120° apart.

d—(Crank Pins)—The crank pins and coupling journals are shrunk warm into the crank webs, and the coupling journals are keyed in addition. The whole shaft, as also the 3 crank pins, are bored out longitudinally.

4. Trunnion ring, forged from crucible steel in one piece.

5. Distorted disc wheel center (coiled center) of wrought iron.

6. Chisel drill.

7. Six stamp shafts of crucible steel.

8. Two crank-pins of crucible steel.

9. Two crank-pins of crucible steel.

10. Two piston rods of crucible steel.

1. Two connecting rods of crucible steel.

2. Two coupling rods of crucible steel.

3. Six crank-pins of crucible steel.

4. Two crank-pins of crucible steel.

5. Two crank-pins of crucible steel.

6. Two crank-pins of crucible steel.

7. Two piston rods of crucible steel.

8. Crank shaft of crucible steel.

9. Crank axle of crucible steel.

10. Crank axle of open-hearth steel.

1. Crank axle of crucible steel.

2. Two coupling cranks of crucible steel.

3. Two driving cranks with eccentrics.

4. Stem of molded steel casting.

Weight 24,000 kilos (23.60 tons).

5. Stern post of molded steel casting.

Weight 12,300 kilos (12.59 tons).

56. Rudder frame of molded steel casting.

Weight 11,300 kilos (11.12 tons).

[The large size of the stern post and rudder frame made transport by rail impossible, in the United States as well as in Europe. Consequently they had to be transported from Essen (or Ruhrort) to Chicago entirely by water. In view of the interruption of navigation on the American canals and lakes during the winter, the two articles were dispatched as early as the 17th of September, 1892, from the Cast-steel Works at Essen, being conveyed over the short distance (22 kilometres—13.67 miles) to the Rhine-port of Ruhrort on carts each drawn by eight horses, thence by steam tug on the Rhine to Rotterdam, where they were transferred to an ocean steamer which arrived at New York in the middle of October. From here to Buffalo the transport was effected by canal boat, and from Buffalo to Chicago by lake steamer which arrived here on November 29, 1892.]

57. Ship's screw or propeller of molded steel casting.

The total weight of the propeller is 26,225 kilos (tons 25.81).

58. Bed plate of molded steel casting.

59. Coupling of the American system of Janney, of molded steel casting.

60. Locomotive frame of molded steel casting.

61. Wheel rim and pinion of crucible steel casting.

62. Distorted spoke wheel center of molded steel casting.

63. Driving wheel center of molded steel casting.

64. Distorted driving wheel center of molded steel casting.

65. Test pieces.

66. Centrifugal Vessels.

a—(Intention)—For machines for separating cream from milk, pressed by hydraulic power from sheets of Martin ingot steel (6 whole vessels and 4 halves of vessels in 3 sizes).

b—(How Employed)—The centrifugal vessels are employed for separating the cream from milk, and are driven at a speed of rotation of up to 10,000 revolutions per minute.

67. Locomotive steam domes.
68. Connecting base pieces.
69. Protective cap for an armored tower.
70. Two-axle car-truck.
71. Various parts of pressed steel.
72. Various die-forged parts.
73. Several sets of tires.
74. Several sets of retaining rings.
75. Several sets of wheels.
76. Several sets of wheels, complete, fitted on axles.
77. Hoisting crane, capable of lifting a load of 85,000 kilos (tons 83).
78. Hoisting crane, capable of lifting a load of 85,000 kilos (tons 83).
79. Portable railway plant.
80. Rolling mill.
81. Mint rolls.
82. Reed rolling machine.
83. Gold rolling machine.
84. Tin-plate rolling machine.
85. Rolls.

VIEWS.

Rear Wall of the Pavilion.

Top panel pictures (executed by Carl J. Gratz, of Frankfurt-on-the-Main, painter).

First panel on the left: View of Fried. Krupp's practice ground near Meppen.

Second panel: Map of Fried. Krupp's practice ground near Meppen, with the shooting ground 23 kilometres (14.29 miles) long, also with a key plan of the offices and the foundations for the guns at the firing stand.

Third panel: Graphic representation of the increase in the landed estate of Fried. Krupp in Essen and the surrounding parishes from the year 1821-1891.

Fourth panel (middle panel): View of the Ruhr valley in the vicinity of Essen and of Hgel Villa (residence of F. A. Krupp, Privy Councillor and present proprietor of the firm of Fried. Krupp).

Fifth panel: Statistical representation of the increase in the building property of Fried. Krupp in Essen and the surrounding parishes from the year 1821-1891.

Sixth panel: Bird's eye view of the Cast Steel Works of Fried. Krupp and of the town of Essen.

Seventh panel: Hermannshtte near Neuwied on the Rhine (one of the four smelting works of Fried. Krupp).

Photographs, Water Color Drawings and Models in the Paneling of the rear wall.

The water color drawings in the 2d and 6th panel (executed by Gustav Halmhuber of Berlin) are illustrations of Fried. Krupp's dwellings, and hygienic and other establishments for his officials and workmen.

The model, in the second panel from the left, illustrates the "ancestral home."

The latter house was built in the year 1818 at the same time as the oldest workshops of the present works, and served for a long time as the home of the Krupp family. It is still kept by a feeling of piety in its original form in the middle of the works at the present day, and serves as an office for the Privy Councillor F. A. Krupp the present proprietor of the firm.

The model in the second panel from the right is a copy to 1-20th of the natural size of the monument erected in the honor of the deceased Mr. Alfred Krupp, by voluntary contributions of the officials and workmen of the firm of Fried. Krupp. The monument, which was unveiled on August 2, 1892, was designed by Aloys Mayer and Josef W. Menges of Munich, sculptors, and was cast in the art foundry of W. Krupp in that town.

The central figure is the portrait of Mr. Alfred Krupp. The two symbolical figures represent "Humanity and Labor." The scroll held by "Humanity" bears the inscription "Man should be noble, charitable and good." On the base is the motto of Alfred Krupp: "The object of labor should be the common good." On the rear side of the base is the dedication "Dedicated by the employes of his works."

Some views of the Works of Fried. Krupp are located in the large middle frame of the 3d and 5th panels.

The photographs in the smaller frames are views of Krupp's guns.

HISTORICAL DATA.

- 1787. Peter Frederick Krupp, the founder of the firm Fried. Krupp, born.
- 1810. The firm Fred. Krupp established.
- 1811. The first melting furnace built for the manufacture of cast-steel.
- 1812. Alfred Krupp born.
- 1818. Building of the oldest workshops of the present existing manufacturing establishment near Essen.
- 1826. Peter Frederick Krupp died.
- 1843. First application of cast-steel to small arm barrels.
- 1847. The first finished piece of artillery in cast-steel. (3-pounder.)
- 1848. Alfred Krupp takes over the business of the firm as sole possessor.
- 1853. Patent for manufacture of weldless steel-tyres granted.
- 1854. The first 12-pounder constructed.

1861. The 50-ton hammer "Fritz" started to work.

1862. Construction of the Krupp flatwedge breech-closing apparatus.

1863. Building of the first workmen's colony "Westend."

1865. Construction of the Krupp round wedge breech-closing apparatus.

1867. Introduction of prismatic powder with 7 perforations and adoption of the ring construction for the larger guns.

1886. The incorporation of the steel works of F. Asthöwer & Co. of Annen.

1887. Alfred Krupp died 14 July.

1889. Construction of the Krupp horizontal breech-closing apparatus for quick-firing guns.

Introduction of smokeless powder.

1890-92. Manufacture of armor plates started. Hydraulic forging presses of 2,000 and 5,000 tons pressure started to work.

1893. The incorporation of the Gruson works at Buckau-Magdeburg.

THE COLUMBUS CARAVELS.

Description of the Santa Maria, Nina and Pinta.

Of the numerous attractions at the Exposition none have been more generally visited and admired than the Columbus fleet—the Santa Maria, Nina and Pinta—exact reproductions of the originals, now lying in the South Inlet and made fast to the wharf immediately east of the Agricultural Building. Visitors are allowed aboard the Santa Maria free of charge from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Visitors are not allowed aboard the Pinta or Nina.

The Santa Maria left Cadiz, Spain, in February of this year, crossing the ocean by herself. The Pinta and Nina had to be towed over. After visiting the Canary Islands and Porto Rico, the caravels finally arrived at Hampton Roads and took part in the great naval review in New York harbor. The boats left New York the latter part of June, making brief stoppages at important cities on the way, and they were everywhere received with acclamations of joy by the people. The trip from New York was an extremely interesting one. The fleet touched at Quebec, Montreal and Toronto on the Canadian side and at Rochester and Milwaukee on the American, and arrived in the harbor of Chicago July 7th.

Upon anchoring off Jackson Park the little ships in which Columbus sailed across an unknown sea were given a fitting reception in honor of their arrival. On this occasion speeches of welcome were made by Secretary of the Navy Herbert, Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, who represented the President of the United States; United States Senator Sherman, the principal officials of the World's Columbian Exposition and the officers of the steam and sailing yachts of Chicago.

The officers of the Santa Maria are Victor Ma. Concas of Palan, Captain de Fragata, and Lieutenants Gutierrez Sobral, Magas, and Luis Renz Berdejo.

The officers of the Pinta are Commander Rodrigo Garcia de Quesada, with Lieutenant Emiliano Enriquez Laro as second in command.

The Nina's officers are Commander Juan Viqvan y Vequan and Lieutenant Pedro Vasquez.

The Santa Maria was built at Cadiz, her keel having been laid on April 21, 1892. Her plans were in accordance with all the obtainable data regarding the original which brought Columbus to the new world. She was launched on June 26th. On July 29th, she went to sea for the first time, bound for Palos to commemorate the sailing of Columbus and the discovery of America at the festivities held on August 3d and October 12th. Her dimensions are as follows: Length at water line, 71 feet 3 inches; beam, 25 feet 8 inches; depth of hold, 12 feet 5 inches; displacement, 233 metric tons; present crew, 52 men, all told. On the poop and extending across the deck is a cabin, which is a copy of that occupied by Columbus. It contains a table, chair, bed and wardrobe of the style of the fifteenth century. There is also a royal pennant, which is an exact copy of the one taken by Columbus to the discovery and by John of Austria at the battle of Lepanto, as well as by other leaders, as the symbol of command. On the table is placed an astrolabe and a forestaff, instruments used to measure the altitude of the stars; while around the sides of the cabin are the arms of the officers. The Santa Maria is armed with four small cannonades on the upper deck and four breech-loading guns on the gunwale. She has a bowsprit and three masts and is rigged with square and triangular sails. Elevated at the stern of the vessel is the large iron lantern, the ancient insignia of an Admiral, and a custom handed down to us, as in the mizzen-top or on the aftermast of the flagship there is always a light beaming from sunset to daylight. In the open space under the poop deck are all sorts of specimens of the arms used by the fighting men of Columbus' day, among the most curious of which are the large guns called "lombardia," which are lashed with ropes to their stout wooden blocks of carriages, while near by in a netted bag hang stone balls, which were the projectiles of the day. In the little cannon called "falconets" which are mounted on the rail, one finds the ancestor of our great guns, in the shape of breech-loading cannon. A small flat curved pin holds in place a little iron pot-looking receptacle, which upon the withdrawal of the pin is readily removed.

In this is placed the powder charge and then the stone ball. The priming and firing are done at a touch-hole in the upper rear portion of the powder holder. The falconets are arranged so that they can be moved about laterally and vertically. The odd looking blocks for the tackles which are used for raising the heavy yards are curiously made, while the compass is one of the most interesting of curiosities. The old windlass for raising the heavy-looking anchors (the largest of which lies on the main deck and was cast in the fifteenth century) and the means for securing the cable at once attract attention.

The Nina and the Pinta are framed on the models of the smaller vessels of the Columbian expedition, without deck amidship and with differences in rigging.

The banners on the ships are as follows: Aft, pennant of Castile; mizzen truck, arms of Aragon and Castile united, beginning of the arms of Spain; main truck, Standard of Castile; fore truck, banner of the expedition, granted by their Catholic majesties. The shields over the rail are the arms of Castile (castles and lions); Aragon (gold with red bars); Sicily (the bars of Aragon and eagles).
